STAINLESS STEEL UMBRELLA

Watching a play or listening to music under the stars is a wonderful experience . . . until it starts to rain. A new all-weather auditorium in Pittsburgh, Pa., solves this problem with a nickel stainless steel dome. Eight huge sections nest together when the dome is open. At the first sign of rain, push a button . . . and the sections glide quietly around a track to form a stainless steel umbrella—and on with the show!

INCO DEVELOPS WORLD MARKETS FOR NICKEL

New ideas in architecture build world markets for nickel

Nickel strengthens stainless steel, increases its resistance to corrosion, makes it easier to fabricate. As an architectural material, stainless steel harmonizes beautifully with wood, glass, tile and enamelled surfaces, withstands weathering and requires little maintenance. Today, leading architects in many countries are using nickel stainless steel more and more for bold new concepts in design.

Canada is the world's largest producer of nickel. And Inco, through sales, research and market development operations, maintains a continuing program for the expansion of international markets for Inco nickel.

Pacing the growth in these markets, Inco continues to add new production facilities in the Sudbury, Ontario area and has developed an entirely new source of nickel at Thompson, Manitoba.

More Inco nickel than ever before will be exported to Inco's expanding world markets . . . helping to build trade balances, stimulate Canada's economic growth and create more jobs for Canadians.

Pattern of Communist Dictatorship Pictures Chaos of Cuban Invasion

EDS: Richard Valeriani, National Broadcasting Company staffman, arrived in Miami in a planeload of refugees from Havana. A former Associated Press reporter in Cuba, Valeriani tells his story.

By RICHARD VALERIANI

MIAMI Fla. (AP) — Three days after the short - lived anti - Castro invasion, fear and repression still rule Cuba.

Havana today is in the hands of the military. All public buildings are still sandbagged. Soldiers, militiamen and militia women stand guard around the clock.

Militiamen carefully frisk all persons entering any public building. Women's handbags are searched minutely, down to tubes of lipstick. Visitors must open cigarette and match packs before entering hotels and other buildings.

It appears Premier Fidel Castro will maintain the repressive measures instituted after the abortive invasion in order to retain the iron grip he now has on the country.

POLICE SPREAD TERROR

Castro's police machinery began operating after a lapse of a few hours after the announcement of the invasion April 17. Conservative estimates place the total of 50,000 arrested throughout the island, although news from the provinces is scant.

The American press was a special target. Their offices were occupied and looted. Almost all American correspondents were arrested or forced into hiding and refuge.

Thousands of other prisoners were herded into whatever facilities offered themselves — a baseball field and public schools in Matanzas, the Sports Palace where Castro held his war crimes trials in Havana, the Blamauita Theatre with a capacity of 6,500.

Prisoners later released reported intolerable conditions. They slept on floors or standing up when the makeshift jails were too crowded to lie down. They went without food for the first few days unless they could manage to send out for it.

News of the 29 executions during the three days of the invasion spread panic among the masses of prisoners.

It was intensified by psychological torture inflicted by Castro guards who fired into the air or threatened to shoot the prisoners when they complained.

The wave of arrests seemed to be with a license for looting and plundering. Cameras, tape recorders, radios, cars, money, and other valuables disappeared from private homes and offices.

Churches offered no haven. Mobs surrounded them, closed the doors and searched those inside.

The acting head of the Roman Catholic church in Cuba, Msgr. Evelio Diaz, and the auxiliary bishop of Havana, Msgr. Eduardo Boza Masvidal, were arrested late in April and subsequently released.

ENTERED A CONVENT

Three nurses close to the church told me militiamen had entered the cloistered Santa Clara convent and hauled off any valuables they could find, including musical instruments. Pilfering of priests was common.

Even the sanctity of the diplomatic staffs Castro agents broke into and looted apartments occupied by members of the Swiss and German embassies. The British Embassy's information officer was jailed.

The arrests have diminished considerably and many prisoners are being released. But anyone who has ever uttered a doubtful word about the Castro regime walks in fear today.

HAVANA (CP) — Cuban authorities seem to be using gentle persuasion rather than harsh brainwashing in efforts to convert rebel prisoners taken during an attempted invasion at Cochinos Bay three weeks ago.

According to newspaper accounts, 1,100 captive prisoners are living in comparative luxury at the Sports Palace located in Marianao, just outside of Havana.

Such amenities as toothpaste, toothbrushes and laundry service are available to them. Their fate thus far contrasts sharply with dire predictions made earlier that all would be shot.

With this display of forgiving magnanimity, Premier Fidel Castro may be hoping to set the stage for a dramatic announcement later that a large part of the captured force has formally renounced the rebel Cuban Democratic Front in favor of supporting his revolution.

The newspaper El Mundo reports that some of the prisoners have issued a statement saying they are receiving better food and attention than they got in their rebel base in Guatemala.

According to El Mundo, immediately upon entering the Sports Palace each prisoner was given a toothbrush, toothpaste, new clothes, shoes, shorts and shirts.

GIVES ACCOUNT

Their clothes are looked after by a laundry operated by civilians exclusively for the prisoners, the newspaper says. It gives this account of how the captives spend their days:

Up at 7 a.m.; wash, dress, calisthenics, have breakfast; lunch at 11 a.m.; coffee and refreshments at 3 p.m.; 6 p.m. a "splendid" buffet dinner served by the social welfare ministry; at 8 p.m. prisoners go to bed on "commodious" mattresses.

The report says the prisoners enjoy complete barbering services and are issued cigarets and tobacco daily. It says steps are being taken to instal television sets so that they may watch programs dealing with the revolution's development.

On May Day the captives listened to a radio account of the huge parade staged by the revolutionary government.

Newsmen attending that the invaders came to sow destruction and death among their blood brothers for a few dollars." El Mundo declares, "Cuban people are not spiteful, but on the contrary treat the prisoners as human beings."

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Richard Valeriani, National Broadcasting Company staffer, arrived from Havana Sunday, stripped of all his possessions by Cuban militiamen who took the recent rebel invasion "as licence to sack and loot".

Valeriani, a former Associated Press staff man in Cuba, said he lost his car, his money and all other property he had in Havana, "but I was one of the lucky ones."

He was under arrest only three hours. The rest of the time since the rebel landing, he had managed to remain free, hiding part of the time in an embassy. Officials of the embassy helped him get out of the country.

Other reporters were not so fortunate, Valeriani reported when he arrived here on a Pan American World Airways plane.

"That's the frightening part of it. There wasn't any patter," he said. He reported that Robert Barteties, an AP reporter who was arrested the day of the invasion, has been held ever since in La Cabana fortress, "and that's no picnic."

Harold K. Milks, chief of the AP's Caribbean services, escaped Cuban policemen by five minutes when they raided his apartment. He sought refuge in another embassy where he still remains.

Jay Mallin, Time magazine and Miami News correspondent in Havana, was on the same plane with Valeriani and 117 other persons, most of them Cubans. Among the passengers were four Roman Catholic priests, four nuns and 24 children.

TORONTO (CP)—If the Canadian Conference of the Arts can be taken as a rule, Canadians aren't happy with their environment.

Both artists and the public made slashing attacks throughout the three - day conference, which ended Saturday, on the lack of planning in Canada's towns and cities.

Public feeling on the subject was evident Saturday night when a packed auditorium at the O'Keefe Centre for the Performing Arts gave prolonged applause to Sir Hugh Huxley's criticism of planning in the Western world.

The famed British biologist used Toronto, as an example. He called the suburbs a "dreary waste of ugly little identical houses placed on the earth without any imagination."

The city had no centre of life. It had not been designed with a waterfront.

In addition to Sir Julian, artists participating in a panel discussion made continual reference to city planning, to architecture, the absence of sculpture and murals in public buildings.

In panels on arts in society, North American towns and cities were labelled with such adjectives as dull, drab, boring, ugly, dreary, disgraces.

Did the conference itself accomplish anything? Did it have any real purpose?

It had been billed as a meeting of artists from across the country, and the meeting of the artists and the public. This it was.

National Director Alan Jarvis said one of the conference's chief accomplishment was to bring artists of all fields together for hours of informal talks as well as panel discussions.

Canada's two cultures, French and English, were forcibly brought home in the halls and on panels. Generally, Canada was considered fortunate to have these, but there were also problems.

Author Yves Theriault told a literary panel a barrier stands between French and English Canada for the writer. He said he could have his books published in France, but rarely in Toronto. Because of the two languages, but the rest of Canada was not.

Rush RCMP Reinforcements To Kootenays After Blast

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — RCMP reinforcements have been rushed to the west Kootenay strongholds of the radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect following a rash of bombing incidents and demands by civil leaders for an end to the dynamite bombing terror in the southeastern British Columbia district.

Police say they believe the bombings were reprisals over sentencing of three sect members Friday to prison terms for burning down a Grand Forks, B.C., school not occupied.

Specially - trained RCMP investigators were directed to explosives stations, which include spot checks on automobiles for explosives.

Latest bombing, in the Grand Forks CPR marshalling yard Sunday, ripped up sections of rail and damaged spurs line. Traffic was unaffected, the railroad said.

A bomb rocked a Trail department store Saturday, causing slight damage. Three powerful bombs were planted in another bomb blast outside Nelson.

Police gathered in another to and connected to a wristwatch and a battery were discovered by postal officials in Trail Friday. The device had been inserted in an outgoing chute where it was found by a clerk.

Meanwhile, civil leaders have demanded an end to the terror which has plagued the district for many years.

Trail Mayor Leslie A. Reed sent a protest telegram to Attorney-General Robert Bonner saying "The people of Trail and the whole of the Kootenays are disgusted at the half-hearted manner in which the government is treating the acts of violence and terrorism in our area."

In an interview Mayor Reed questioned recent statements by the Attorney - General that the Sons of Freedom situation is under control.

"The Sons of Freedom have not been tied down," the mayor, "I don't know where the solution to the problem lies, but it must be found."

President J. H. Coventry of the Trail Board of Trade commented, "there is something funny going on."

"I don't know what it is, but I believe the hands of the RCMP are tied by the apprehension of the members of those responsible impossible," Mayor Reed said.

WOMEN SMOKERS

Mr. Coventry said he has the feeling if the RCMP had been given a free hand someone would have been brought to justice long before this. He said he couldn't accept the fact police have been unable to catch terrorists during the years the bombings have been going on.

Nelson Mayor T. S. Shorthouse said he did the army should be brought in and a curfew imposed "until the people who are responsible."

A police statement warned persons against using explosives to use utmost safety precautions and urged members of the public to obtain explosives.

Attorney-General Bonner said Sunday no RCMP officers have been flown to Nelson to aid criminal investigation men already brought in. In the next few days about 16 RCMP constables will be added to police ranks.

Stern-set measures possible will be taken to stamp out the violence, he said.

A poll of 6,000 men and women in Tokyo found 42 per cent frowned on smoking by women.

What Canadian Legion Needs Is Good Public Relations States Convention Speaker

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) What the Royal Canadian Legion needs is a good public relations service, a convention of Southern Ontario command was told Sunday.

George Laughlin of St. Catharines, keynote speaker at the spring convention of the legion's 9 district, said the legion is sometimes represented as "a bunch of old sweats sitting round a table drinking beer and bashing over old times."

"I challenge any service organization in the Dominion of Canada to try to match the achievements of the legion," he said, "and I know they will be found wanting."

"We have been known for years as a service men and women, but in this changing world we must become known as service - minded men and women."

He said the legion among other things must remedy the jailing of priests was common. Even Spanish priests, with diplomatic staffs, Castro agents broke into and looted apartments occupied by members of the Swiss and German embassies. The British Embassy's information officer was jailed.

The arrests have diminished considerably and many prisoners are being released. But anyone who has ever uttered a doubtful word about the Castro regime walks in fear today.

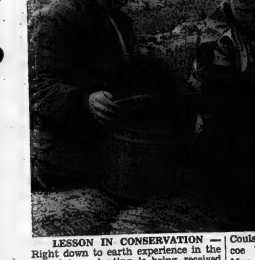
Conservation Authority, Lands and Forests Stage Youth Tree-Planting Day

Close to 17,000 white and red pines were planted on the Col. Vanderwater Conservation Area near Thomasburg Saturday as the Department of Lands and Forests in conjuction with the Authority, staged a youth tree planting day.

School groups from Belleville and area, 4-H Forestry Club members, and cubs and scouts took part in the planting on the south end of the Authority property which is being reforested under agreement with the Department of Lands and Forests at Tweed.

School students planted trees during the morning with cubs and scouts taking up the shovels during the afternoon. Scout groups from Belleville, Tweed and Madoc took part. Forestry clubs from Napanee, Madoc and Stirling also participated.

During the noon hour lunch period a demonstration of mechanical tree planting was staged by Department officials. There was also a demonstration of fire fighting using a truck mounted fire pump.



A Department forestry plane was also scheduled to demonstrate fire fighting from the air but due to an outbreak of a bush fire in the northern area, the plane was able to make only one pass over the field.

Authority chairman Reeve Earl Sager of Madoc, welcomed the students and scouts to the tree planting day.

Assistant District Forester Doug Hughes pointed out the value of reforestation. He said the area being replanted had been former farm land which had been worked out and was no longer productive.

The property had been purchased by the Authority and was being replanted under agreement with the Department of Lands and Forests at Tweed.

On hand to give direction in tree planting were Denis Tschoen Coulson as they plant trees at Col. Roscoe Vanderwater Conservation Area, wielding shovel is George Musgrove, Authority employee.

LESSON IN CONSERVATION — Right down to earth experience in the art of tree planting is being received above by David Nelles, member of the 17th Belleville Cub Pack and Keith Mason, Authority conservation area foreman, Department of Lands and Forests, Michael Chubb, field-man for the Moira Conservation Authority, and a number of Authority members.

Ontario and British Columbia together accounted for about 65 per cent of the country's divorces.

The divorce total in Ontario last year with the rate per 100,000 population in brackets: 2,805 (46.9).

Three Boys Drown as Raft Drifts Clear of Lake Shore

WAWA, Ont. (CP) — Three young northern Ontario boys drowned in the icy waters of Morrison Lake near here when their homemade craft drifted about 50 feet from shore.

Dead are Roger Herbert, 9, his brother Ronald, 11, and Joseph Hammett, 12.

The Hoffner boys were the sons of Rev. Theodore Hoffner, Pentecostal minister in this community a few miles north of Sault Ste. Marie.

Police said it is not clear what happened to the boys after the boys panicked when the raft drifted from shore. They said the other boys who remained on shore ran for help.

Bodies of the drowned boys were recovered Saturday and the Hammett boy's body was found today.

Police said the boys ran into trouble when they tried to step from their log raft to another part which was floating free in the water. Playmates who viewed the accident said one boy attempted to cross on to the second raft, causing the first to capsize.

About a dozen other boys were standing on the shore near the raft, who were helping build a camp on the opposite shore of the lake.

Bobby Kori, 12, said Hammett, weighted down with a back sack, never came to the surface after losing his balance and falling off the raft.

"Kye almost made it to shore, but he went back for his brother and they both drowned," said Bobby. "It could easily have been me. They were going to be there across the ice but Joe Hammett went instead. I was to go with them."

Bobby said hesand some other boys threw logs into the lake in an attempt to save their friends.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

THE ENGAGING WRENS

Though doubtless very naughty, few birds are as engaging as house wrens. Averse to any kind of bird nesting within their territory, they torment all comers, large or small, stabbing the adults and puncturing their eggs with their sharp little bills. Those who can resist these tiny, bustling, cheerful birds?

Mr. Wren may arrive before the end of April although flying insects, his most important food, are still scarce. He has no intention of beginning house keeping; indeed his future wife has not yet appeared. But he is here to claim (and hold) his territory. So he spends all his time house hunting and singing — simultaneously. Picking up twigs in the ground he flutters them into several holes but later pulls most of them out again.

SELECTS HIS MATE

By the first week of May the ladies have arrived, and what a time Mr. Wren has to choose a partner! Occasionally he actually manages to entice two or even three, settling them up in separate dwellings. At any rate, several spots are carefully inspected. The doorway must be only large enough for him to squeeze through, so if too wide must be filled in with twigs.

He and his bride do not always agree about the home. He puts the furniture in and she takes it out, replacing the wicker bed with soft pillows — which he, in turn, pulls out. Such indecision may continue for three or four weeks. Yet all the time he sings loudly and cheerily.

SETTLE DOWN

By early June the wrens usually settle down to married life. Seldom can we see into the home hole to find out when the eggs were laid; but watching carefully we should discover when the first baby breaks the shell, because then feeding begins. This may not happen for nearly three weeks. Once there are six or eight nestlings to feed the parents chase back and forth with insect wings sticking out of their bills. A moth or fly a minute is not unusual. Intensive feeding continues for more than two weeks — perhaps 18 days. Then at the first fly, brown balls come tumbling out of the entrance.

Papa is no longer interested. He goes off courting another girl. But for some weeks mother rounds up the family each day at dusk and puts them to bed. At first they may all fit into a chopping sparrow's old nest. As they grow mother chooses another bedroom. A vireo's proves too frail, and fails; but a robin's is just right for the six or eight full-sized young wrens.

Report of Mass Terrors Against Opponents of Castro Are Seeping Out of Cuba

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Reports of mass terror against opponents of Fidel Castro's regime are seeping out of Cuba despite a curtain of total censorship on news communications and mail.

These reports tell of suffering among thousands of detainees rounded up in the wake of the abortive anti-Castro invasion of mid-April. They tell of thousands inhumanely crowded, without food and sanitation, in detention centres; of uprisings born of desperation among the prisoners; bloodhounds and police dogs used to threaten the prisoners.

It now is confirmed that the regime has imposed complete censorship on all outgoing news messages, which must be cleared through the chief of telecommunications. Mail censorship, long in existence behind the scenes, now is out in the open. Huge piles of mail await censorship at the office of the telecommunications chief, apparently in charge of that job, too.

ROUND UP FOREIGNERS

This is the story of what has been happening to the thousands suspected of opposing the regime, as pieced together from the reports from the inland:

Between 25,000 and 40,000 Cubans and foreigners, including a number of Americans, were rounded up in Havana alone after the invasion. The detainees were herded into requisitioned buildings, such as the Sports Palace and the Blanquita Theatre. At the Blanquita, there were between 6,000 and 7,500 prisoners, jammed into the auditorium, without any arrangements for food or sanitation. The only food available was that brought by relatives of persons held there.

Midway through the first week of their detention, prisoners were screaming for food, and fighting their way through a litter of filth and excrement for a chance to use the few toilets. Many became ill. At least three typhoid cases were reported.

FIRE INTO CROWD

Reports from those who saw it in person say that at one point the prisoners tried to rise up against their armed militia guards. Several shots were fired into the crowd. Two prisoners were wounded, but this failed to quiet the detainees.

Then bloodhounds and police dogs were paraded across the stage, and the militiamen threatened to turn the dogs on the prisoners if they failed to quiet down.

The prisoners attempted another uprising, overwhelming some militia guards and seizing their weapons. But later young Castro militiamen entered the Blanquita to serve as guards, and met no trouble. Finally, in desperation, the detainees threatened to burn the theatre and everyone in it if they were not given food and some decent sanitation. Shortly afterward Castro authorities began freeing some of those under detention and taking others elsewhere.

TANK FOR NUCLEAR PLANT — Welding problems have delayed completion of this aluminum tank for the $33,000,000 Power Demonstration plant at Rolphton, Ont. The tank, energy heart of NPD reactor, is being built by Canadian General Electric at Peterborough, Ont. It had been hoped the plant would be operating by mid-June but the aim now is to have it working by the end of 1961. (CP Photo).

Fortune in Water Stored In 339 Stainless Steel Tanks Along Ottawa River

By JOHN E. BIRD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ROLPHTON, Ont. (CP) — A king's ransom in water sits in a shed near here on the bank of the Ottawa River.

Watchmen keep a close eye on this fortune—stored in 339 stainless steel drums—but there are no armed guards to cope with would-be bandits.

While the water is worth $1,500,000, it is of no value to anyone unless he is prepared to spend many millions in building an atomic power plant.

"We don't worry very much about thieves," said Michael Barron, a member of the nuclear power division of the Hydro - Electric Power Commission of Ontario.

"The stuff weighs about 85 tons for one thing and you wouldn't be able to sell it. It would be more sensible to try to make a dollar-out of stealing a battleship."

The water in the shed is not ordinary water but expensive heavy water which will be used in the experimental nuclear power plant nearing completion at this remote centre 150 miles northwest of Ottawa.

IMPORTED FROM GEORGIA

Known as Nuclear Power Demonstration, the $32,000,000 plant is being built jointly by Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, Ontario Hydro and Canadian General Electric.

The heavy water in the shed was produced by an electrolytic process at the Savannoah, Ga., project of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission. It will be used in NPD as a moderator to make the atomic fission process possible and to transfer heat from the reactor to turn ordinary water into steam to drive turbines and electric generators.

Heavy water looks like ordinary water but has a different composition. Ordinary water is made up of two parts of hydrogen to one part oxygen. Heavy water is two parts heavy hydrogen to one part oxygen.

The Americans charge $28 a pound for heavy water and a study now is being made to determine whether this cost could be reduced if production started in Canada. This likely will take place if the NPD plant proves that heavy water, natural - uranium reactors produce electricity economically.

The drums of heavy water will remain in the shed until the calandria or energy heart of the NPD reactor is delivered by Canadian General Electric's Peterborough, Ont., plant.

It had been hoped that the NPD plant would be in operation by mid-June. However, the start-up date will be delayed as a result of unforeseen welding problems in the construction of the aluminum calandria or tank.

The calandria will contain 132 uranium fuel rods. These rods will produce the heat that will be used to raise steam to produce electricity.

J. L. Gray, president of Atomic Energy of Canada, said the NPD project is about three months behind schedule. However, it was expected that construction would be completed by midsummer and that following tests the plant would be in operation before the end of the year.

NPD will have an output of 20,000 kilowatts of electricity and a capacity of 26,150 horsepower. It will not produce power at a cost competitive with coal - burning electric stations but is expected to provide the information to make future plants of its type economic.

Yanks Home-Run Weapon Boomerangs

Drop Pair Tigers Win

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York Yankees, the men who live by the home run, died by the home run at Wrigley Field during last year's season when Los Angeles Angels beat them with their own weapon.

The Angels hit seven home runs in the Yanks' four in the threegame series.

Lead Wagner Grove in three runs with a two-run homer and double in a 5-3 Los Angeles victory Sunday. Wagner also hit two homers and a triple in Saturday night's Angel triumph.

He has six on this year, four against the Yanks.

Albie Pearson, who also homered Sunday, and Gene Leek joined Wagner Sunday, Vogt Herrs and Johnny Blanchard hit the ball out of the park for the Yankees.

TIGERS INCREASE LEAD

Detroit's pitching Tigers opened up a 2½ game lead during the week when the Tigers bopped Chicago twice 8-6 and 5-4. Sunday's double was winning streak to five and the Sox's losing string to seven. The Tigers completed Chicago's late 10th-and last place.

Rookie Jake Wilhilling knocked in six runs with a grand slam homer and a two-run double to help Detroit edge Minnesota 7-6 on Gene Woodling's three-run homer in the second of the day. and Willie Horton's single.

At Los Angeles Sunday manager Bill Rigney used Ned Garver, Ted Bowsfield of Penticton, B.C., and Truman Clevenger in the ninth when the Yanks threatened but couldn't score. Starter Bo Belinsky was the winner over Jim Coates.

Roy Sievers hit two homers for the Sox in the Sunday opener, one of them with the bases full. But the Tigers came up with five in the seventh and the scored the winning run on Bob Shaw's wild pitch. Woodling added an insurance run with a homer in the eighth.

Schilling was the big noise in the Red Sox win with a grand slammer in the fourth and doubled in the eighth as Mike Fornieles won in relief over Camilo Pascual.

Hawkins' victory in the first game was only the third complete game for the Cleveland staff this season. One of the four Washington hits was Woodling's first homer of the year. Woodling hit No. 2 off Jim Grant with two on in the sixth inning of the second game but Tabby's single in the eighth proved decisive.

Russ Tense, Await Chess Title

By PRESTON GROVER

MOSCOW (AP) — It could come today — that event which Russians call "the match of the century" — but the tension is already unbearable.

It has been going on for six weeks at the rate of three games a week. Mikhail Botvinnik has won 11½ games, within one game of victory. Tal has won 7½.

During the weekend the fifty-ish Botvinnik was within one game of winning the title he lost last year to Tal, 32. Botvinnik has never lost twice in a row through two days of play.

The players sit face to face across a small table in the centre of the stage in a theatre on the bank of the Moscow River, opposite the Kremlin. While playing they sweat. 100 games are going on it the city and theatre hall for half the audience has gathered to sit or wait while every move is recorded.

At either side of the stage are huge boards where two boys record the plays. Outside in the foyer and lobby are other boards where hundreds follow the games. A loudspeaker announces the plays on the street where more fans cluster around loudspeakers.

SIGN BLANKS

In the theatre there is a buzz of conversation, despite a big blinking sign asking for silence.

Through five hours each day neither says a word to the other. Tal, who walks nervously across the stage between moves, normally is the faster, more dashing player. But he is trailing badly and in recent games has been extremely cautious. He says all his time advantage instead of making fast moves which last year upset Botvinnik badly.

Last year Tal beat Botvinnik 12½ to 9½. Now it seems impossible that the dashing Russian of Tal can overcome the four-game lead and the coolly expert excellence of Botvinnik.

Leafs Lose Pair to San Juan

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Rightlander Hal Reniff of the Richmond Virginians is rapidly becoming the International League's No. 1 Sunday baseball pitcher.

Not only has Reniff won all four of his games on Sunday to date this young season, but he's also won them in pairs.

Sunday was the second successive Sunday that Reniff, strictly a relief ace, was credited with both ends of a doubleheader. He slipped Syracuse 4-3 in the first game a 10-inning affair. A week ago, Reniff's victim—twice — was Toronto.

San Juan, meanwhile, swept a pair from Syracuse's Maple Leafs in two extra - inning scrapes, 4-3 in 12 frames and 5-4 in 11. Buffalo routed Jersey City 10-3 before bowing to the Jerseys 7-6 in the second tilt. Rochester's twin bill with Columbus was postponed by rain.

Bobby Reniff pitched two scoreless innings in the opener during Syracuse. Trailing by two tallies in the last of the ninth, the Virginians broke loose with singles by Ken Hunt and Lock's single and pinch - hitter Lee Pfund's double. Cooper, Pedro Gonzalez followed with a home run.

Reniff relieved Fred Kipp in the nightcap 10th with two on and one out. He struck out Woody Smith and got Sam Mele's nervy on an infield out. Pfund, batting for Jackie Lock decided the issue immediately thereafter with successive singles.

Reniff is now 4-0.

LEAFS LOSE FOUR

Toronto's double loss to San Juan prevented the defending champion Leafs' losing streak to four games. Rightfielder Lou Johnson's throwing error gave Jim Martina the deciding run in the first game after Jerry Davis hit Johnson's single and Ron Piaza's double to set the stage.

Felix Torres and Ted Savage drove Buffalo's big guns in its triumph over the Jerseys. Each clubbed two home runs. Savage added two more runs and Torres four and made Ruben Gomez' pitching duty even though he allowed 11 hits.

Cross-Country Rally

Ontario Drivers Sweep Awards

By JIM PEACOCK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP)—Ontario rally drivers swept the major individual awards in Canada's first cross-country car rally, a 4,100-mile run from Montreal to Vancouver.

Jack Young of Don Mills, and co-driver Reg Hillam, Toronto, piloted a manufactured-entered Studebaker Lark 2 across the country with only four penalty points to take the biggest prize — the over-all standings championship.

Mrs. Alice Fergusson and Gil-lian Field of Toronto, driving a French - made Citroen coupe, picked up 58 penalty points—50 of them in the last day were protested—but still led the other women entrants by a wide margin and took the women's title.

Marcedes Benz of Canada Limited led the manufacturers' team competition which ended in Magnetic and two Volvos driven by Quebec provinces competitors topped the standings.

All the results, announced Sunday about 12 hours after the last of the 83 cars which finished the gruelling test of car and driver, arrived here Canada Day night, were provisional.

Protests lodged by several drivers on penalty points picked up along the way and final decisions, including the disputed protests, was not expected until late today.

WILL DIVIDE CASH

Division of the $5,000 cash prize money and 30 trophies was to take place at a banquet tonight. Rally organizers were expected to announce their intention to make the affair an annual one.

It was organized by the British Columbia International Trade Fair, formerly under way in Vancouver with 37 countries showing wares, in co-operation with the Canadian public mobile Sport Club and under sanctioning of a national oil company.

The provisional computations Sunday confirmed unofficial placings in the over-all standing from late Saturday night.

Young and Hillam, among the leaders throughout, picked up four penalty points during a stretch through the treacherous Cassiar Highway between Kitwanga and Grand Forks, B.C. in the darkness Friday night.

The Young - Hillam duo, built of other drivers, too, including the leaders of another Studebaker Lark driven by Lou Lalonde and John Jones of Toronto, and the Volkswagen entered and driven by J. G. Charters with T. M. Worth of Montreal as co-driver. Both got four penalties in the Cascades, but they finished second and third respectively in the over-all standings with 70 and 114 lost penalties on which ties are broken.

FALCON PLACES SECOND

Ford Motor Company of Canada's Falcon team finished second in the manufacturers' team event and the Studebaker-Packard of Canada company's team of two Larks and a Hawk was third.

The competition, longest in the Western Hemisphere, was not a race, but a test of the endurance of the drivers and cars. It began last Sunday in Montreal and crossed the country with stops overnight at Toronto, Port Arthur, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary and Penticton.

At Port Arthur, a collision between two Austin 850s resulted in the death of Montreal navigator Bill Rosecat and serious injury to his driver, Ken Williers.

TIES WORLD MARK

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP)— Frank Budd of Villanova University tied the world record for the 100-yard dash Saturday with a time of 9.3. He was timed at 9.3 on two of the four official clocks, at 9.3 on one and 9.4 on the other. Two minutes later Budd competed in the 220-yard run with a time of 20.7, only two tenths of a second off the world record.

Sailors Win Over Comets Even Series

NAPANEE (CP) — Port Colborne Sailors scored three goals in the first six minutes of play Saturday night to defeat Napanee Comets 6-2 and even their best - of - seven Ontario Hockey Association intermediate final 3-3.

The game was a complete reversal of the first one when Napanee won 12-3.

Napanee two Austin 850s resulted in the death of Montreal navigator Bill Rosecat and serious injury to his driver, Ken Williers.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A few weeks ago one of this city's finest athletes, an outstanding sportsman, gentleman, sterling citizen, and a loving husband and father, answered the call of the Great Umpire.

He was Edward "Ted" Hems, dubbed affectionately by his many softball friends, players and supporters "The Ole Checker."

Some called him "Herby." He was one of the greatest softball players, officials and adherents the city ever developed. He coupled his athletic abilities with a fine personality, a fierce desire and an outstanding competitive spirit.

To say the "Ole Checker" was popular with all with whom he came in contact is to put it mildly.

Since his passing it has been felt in many quarters that the memory of Herby Hems should be perpetuated in some tangible form.

The matter came to a head over the weekend with the formation of a "Herby Hems Memorial Fund" which will, through the generosity of the Checker's many friends, purchase and establish a permanent "Herby Hems Memorial Trophy."

It is announced with the permission of OASA proxy Lee, that the 1961 season in this city will be called "Herby Hems Year."

The committee will meet next Sunday to discuss the type of trophy, its cost and what it will symbolize. Softball heroesboun has a plenitude of trophies donated for various purposes.

It has been suggested that the Herby Hems Memorial Trophy be used for the same theme as the National Hockey League's Lady Byng Trophy won this year by "Red" Kelly. It was also suggested the trophy be presented to the rookie of the year with the characteristics of the winner of the Lady Byng Trophy.

Further tentative suggestions call for the presentation of a permanent miniature of the trophy for the winner, and that next year and succeeding years the cost of the miniatures be borne by the Belleville District Softball League. A dollar or two added to the annual entry fees, it is felt, would take care of the matter.

It is hoped that the many friends of the late "Checker" will help honor and perpetuate the memory with financial donations. Money or checks can be forwarded to the sports editor of this newspaper, who will act as treasurer pro tem.

Members of the committee feel confident the fund will be over-subscribed. Every cent over and above the cost of the Herby Hems Memorial Trophy and this year's miniature, will be presented to Mrs. Doris Hems and the family of the late softball star. That I believe, speaks for itself.

The names and amounts, unless designated otherwise by the donor, will be published in this newspaper daily. Jack Devine of CJBQ, has generously donated some of his air time to the support of the funds-raising project.

The fund already is away to a good start. Three donations were received over the weekend. These were Robert Temple, $25; Harry Morrison, Joyce Real Estate, $10, and The Ontario Intelligencer Sports Department, $10.

The fund cannot be extended over too long a period of time. So we respectfully request that potential donors send in their contribution as soon as conveniently possible.

Incidentally it has been suggested that the first presentation of the trophy be made at the end of the B. and D. League schedule season by a member of the family of the late Checker.

There are many, I am sure, who will wish to pay tangible tribute to the memory of Herby Hems. Any contributions however small, will be gratefully appreciated by the committee.

Quinte Trap, Gun Club

Warm, sunny weather brought shooters out of the Quinte Trap and Gun Club in full force yesterday and with the good weather came a number of good scores.

Don Dalrymple and Dick Hoskin turned in perfect 25 scores to pace the field while Doug Day and Ray McKinnon followed with scores of 23. Other high marks on the weekend were: John Walsh 22, Denny Rossele 22, Paul Kelly 22, Bob Yorke 21, Doug Johnstone 20 and Gary Little 20.

JENSEN MAY RETURN

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—Jackie Jen said Sunday he wants to go back to play baseball with Boston Red Sox.

He telephoned executive vice-president Dick O'Connell that he is on his way to Los Angeles where the club meets the Angels today.

Jensen repeated that he is sorry about the way things happened last weekend when he suddenly left the club without explanation. He later said he felt because he didn't think he could help the club any longer.

Reds Spank Spahn With Homers

By JACK HAND

With Freddie Hutchinson it is either a feast or a famine.

His Cincinnati Reds jumped away fast, won five of their first seven games and led the National League. Then they lost eight straight and dropped to the cellar. Now they have won eight in a row and are running second, only two games off the pace.

Cincinnati turned on the home run power when four out of five batters—Frank Robinson, Vada Pozt, Leo Cardenas and Gordy Coleman—hit Warren Spahn for six runs in a 5-4 first game victory over Milwaukee.

Billy Cox, the unpredictable one, pitched league-leading San Francisco Giants to a 7-6 triumph, holding Philadelphia Phillies to seven hits. Cox, a relief man when he was traded to the Giants by Baltimore in November, 1958, now has a 3-0 record as a starter and a 3.38 earned run average.

CHAMPIONS BEATEN

Los Angeles flexed its muscles at Pittsburgh, where homers by Charlie Neal, Norm Larker and Frank Howard gave the Dodgers a 4-3 decision over the defending world champs. Sandy Koufax, with five relief help from Larry Sherry, was the winner but pay George Witt was the losing his first start for the Pirates.

St. Louis' Ernie Broglio retired the last 16 men in a row and Curt Flood clinched up to the .300 mark by beating Chicago 4-3 in a game called after five innings because of rain. A scheduled second game was rained out.

In Saturday's games, Pittsburgh whipped Los Angeles 9-5 and St. Louis beat Chicago 6-1. The San Francisco-Philadelphia and Cincinnati - Milwaukee games were postponed because of rain.

GIVEN SUPPORT

Orlando Cepeda, Felipe Alou and Ed Bailey batched up Lees' pitching Sunday by hitting home runs at Philadelphia. Cepeda's fifth of the year came with two on in the four-run sixth inning, downing Robin Roberts to his fifth straight defeat. Alou hit his third in the second and Bailey hit his first of the year in the seventh.

The Reds really exploded against Spahn in the eighth inning, but not when the 40-year-old lefty appeared headed for his fourth shutout. He was relieved by Lee Stange with one out. Spahn gave up homers to Robinson and Post before he retired Gene Freese. In the ninth the first two up, Cardenas and Coleman applied the crusher.

O'Toole left 11 Braves on the bases and struck out seven while winning his third game. It was the first time he had beaten the Braves after eight defeats.

SHERRY IN RELIEF

Koufax ran into trouble in the seventh at Pittsburgh but Sherry bailed him out in fine style. Witt retired the first 16 Dodgers before throwing up a home run ball to Neal in the sixth. Larker hit a two - run homer in the seventh and Frank Howard clamaned his fifth of the year in the same inning, both off Witt.

Broglio had a rough first inning when the Cubs scored two runs but he settled down for the rest of the abbreviated contest. Julian Javier's two-run double in the second was the winner.

The Cards had been helped by rain Friday night, too, in the second game when the game was washed out with Chicago leading 3-1 in the top of fifth.

New Minor Baseball League Formed

WELLINGTON (Special) — A new Inter - Township League was formed here yesterday. It will be known as the Quinte District Baseball League.

Russel Soules of Belleville was named president and Vern Vandeveater of this village secretary-treasurer.

Ontario Baseball Association president Jack Carson of Belleville chaired the organizational get-together and gave the new circuit his blessing.

The league is of juvenile-intermediate category. Teams of these classifications will play in the circuit during the schedule season but will go their own ways in the OBA playdowns.

Four teams were entered at yesterday's inaugural meeting.

However it is felt that a six or more team circuit would be more practical. It is hoped that at least two more clubs from district centres will enter.

Efforts will be made to this effect this week. In the meantime any clubs desirous of entering should contact the secretary Vern Vandeveater at Wellington.

Another meeting will be held in the Fire Hall here next Sunday where further plans and possibly a schedule will be finalized.

Came Far From Behind

'Carry Back' Wins Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Is Carry Back a great horse, a good one or just the best of an ordinary lot o fthree-year olds?

This was hashed and rehashed by experts and laymen alike Sunday as they ran and re-ran the smashing come-from-far-behind victory of one of the turf's greatest bargains in the 87th Kentucky Derby Saturday at Churchill Downs.

And the consensus was that never a gamer race horse came roaring down the Derby's home break final one - quarter mile, which has tested most of the nation's greatest since 1875 and found many of them wanting.

Jack Price, who trains Carry Back for his wife, Mrs. Katherine Price, called him "best of a poor lot". But he had atwinge in his eyes and admitted he slid it with tongue in cheek.

"I would say he's great," said Price, admitting he was prejudiced.

Price had nothing but praise for Fred W. Hooper's Crozier, who apparently had the race won and then dropped the decision by three-quarters of a length as jockey Johnny Sellers brought Carry Back down the middle of the track.

Crozier is going to take another crack at the classic on May 20 running of the Preakness at Pimlico, the second jewel in the triple crown. The final is the Belmont Stakes June 3 in New York.

WASN'T CERTAIN

Chuck Parker, Crozier's trainer was asked if he thought he had the race won an eighth of a mile from the finish. Parker said: "I never think I've got anything won when that little horse is in the race. He's one helluva tough customer."

Carry Back will go down as one of the greatest bargains. Price paid $20 for Joppy, Carry Back's dam who died recently at Ocala, Fla. He bred Joppy to Saggy, called an unfashionable stud whose chief claim to fame was victory over Citation in a sprint race in 1948.

Saggy's stud fee was $500," said Price "but I got a discount by breeding three mares at the same time. The total cost was $1,200." That makes Carry Back's original investment $700. He picked up $130,000 at the $163,000 Derby purse to boost his bank account to $617,998 on 10 victories, five seconds and five thirds in 28 starts.

In addition to Crozier, at least three other Derby starters will oppose Carry Back in the Preakness. They are Globemaster, who finished sixth; Jacob Sher's Sherlock, fifth after moving into contention at the top of the home stretch and Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' fast-closing Dr. Milo who was fourth. Mrs. V. E. Smith's Bass Clef, a surprise third, in a belated run from last place, will be shipped to Chicago.

The Alberta Ranches' entry of Four-and-Twenty (seventh) and Fluttery (eighth) head back for California within a few days after Four-and - Twenty undergoes an operation for a quarter-crack in his left fore hoof.

'DIDN'T HAVE IT'

"It wasn't serious enough to hamper his Derby chances," said trainer Vance Longden. "He just didn't have it after taking the lead." Dr. Jim Temple, veterinarian, said Four-and-Twenty will be out of action for three or four weeks.

TAL WINS MATCH

MOSCOW (AP)—Mikhail Tal, defending champion in the world chess crown, won the 19th game of the current title tournament Saturday on the 76th move when challenger Mikhail Botvinnik, former holder of the crown, conceded defeat. Tal, now trails Botvinnik, 11.5 points to 7.5. The challenger needs only two draws or one triumph in the remaining five games to regain the title.

Old Woodbine Opens Today

TORONTO (CP) — The 102nd year of organized horse racing in Toronto gets under way at Old Woodbine today with the Star Shoot Stakes being run in two divisions, each division competing for a purse of approximately $8,000.

The Jockey Club has a new $5,000,000 16,000-seat grandstand and club house at Old Woodbine.

The Star Shoot Stakes for three-year-old fillies has drawn 18 entries, 16 of which will race in the first division.

The Star Shoot will mark the 1961 debut of Victoria Regina, which may prove to be the best filly ever foaled in Canada.

Find Multiple Set Families Split Into Solitary Viewers

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — When television was young and growing, it was getting a lot of credit for bringing the family together.

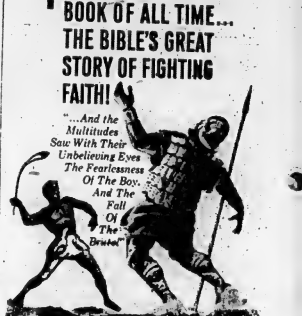
A lovely picture was painted of the whole family sitting silently and compatibly in front of the magic box.

Well, TV is older now, the novelty has worn off and almost nine out of 10 American homes have sets. And the experts are predicting that the medium is starting to break up the family and turn members into solitary viewers.

The villain of the piece is a growing number of "multiple set families."

The trend toward "individual" viewing, as opposed to group, was noted in a recent study of TV attitudes made for a major advertising agency.

Television rating services—the research firms which try to estimate TV audience size—believe that today there is more than one TV set in at least 10 per cent of TV homes.



Lee Marvin, recently an honest, hard-working cop in the M Squad series, still is doing a lot of acting—but invariably playing villains. His next excursion into crime is on the June 1 Untouchables.

WOMAN

My child cried out and was shot. He aimed at me, holding cold on my hair, I heard a shot. Then he ordered me to watch and there was another shot. Then I fell into the pit, but I felt nothing more."

Mrs. Hostlevska halted, a moment, as though to get her breath, then went on:

"I felt a sort of heaviness and thought I was dead. Then I was choking. There were people falling on me. I must be alive, I thought. I prayed for another bullet. Then I managed to climb toward the top but I felt bodies pulling at me, pulling me down, down . . .

"I crawled out of the pit. There were bodies everywhere. Some were not dead. I called for my little girl. I could not find her."

Mrs. Yosilevska said she wandered, dazed, wounded in the head and wondering if she was hallucinating. She came to where she lay for three days.

Finally a farmer found her, revived her and helped her to safety until the area was captured by the Soviet Army.

Israeli Attorney General Gideon Hausner announced at the beginning of the trial that immunity from arrest would be extended to two former Nazi SS officers—Col. Walter Hupenkothen and Maj. Wilhelm Hoettl—so they could come to testify on behalf of Eichmann.

Technically, they could be arrested for belonging to organizations defined as "criminal" under Israeli law but this law would not be enforced, Hausner said.

At his home in Austria, however, Hoettl said he had no intention of going to Israel to give evidence. He said he did not believe his testimony would be of any use to either the prosecution or the defence.

Hausner earlier had refused to grant immunity to eight other ex-Nazi witnesses and warned that if they showed up in Israel they would be arrested. Any evidence they give would have to be through affidavits given to judges in the countries where they live.

Dr. Robert Servatius, Eichmann's West German defence lawyer, said Hoettl and Hupenkothen be allowed to come to Israel to be cross-examined on statements introduced by the prosecution.

The first prosecution witness at today's session was Mrs. Nisla Neuman, who told of treatment received by the Jews in Latvia under the Nazis.

Mrs. Neuman, who now lives in Israel, said she was deported from Vienna to Riga, Latvia, in January, 1942, and put to work in a disinfection squad in the camp.

One task of the squad was to clean the clothes taken from Jews killed by the Germans.

"Our Jewish brothers were forced to undress before being shot, and later these clothes were sent to German clothing stores," she said.

Mrs. Neuman said that in August, 1944, she was put in Stutthof concentration camp near Danzig.

"Nine months later we were moved by train toward the Baltic Sea. . . . There we were placed in a sealed ship . . . a tanker, or

SHIP CATCHES FIRE

"We spent nine days in this ship until we reached Lubeck but we were not allowed to dock because the ship was flying the quarantine yellow flag. There was disease aboard. The ship's crew was determined to get rid of us at any price. Then the ship caught fire. As we were jumping off and tried to board another ship the SS fires at us. I was injured, . . . I was shot in the hip."

Forced back on the ship, Mrs. Neuman said the ship was seized when the British occupied the port city of Kiel and the ship with its dead and charred bodies was allowed to dock there.

"Of the 235 prisoners only 190 were alive at the end," she said.

Last Thursday being the Hebrew day of Lag B'Omer, or Arbor Day, the children of the Belleville Jewish community took part in an interesting project.

Arranged through the courtesy of Mr. Chubb of the Moira Conservation Authority in cooperation with Rabbi M. Deutsch, a tree-planting ceremony was held at the Roscoe Vandervater Conservation Area just north of the city. While the Conservation Authority had such a day planned for various groups to be held on Saturday, it was not possible for the Jewish children to take part in this on their Sabbath day. Mr. Chubb and his officers arrangecoincided exactly with the Hebrew Day.

The children met at the Synagogue after school and were taken by cars to the area. There, about two hundred trees were planted, after which the children played various games. At the conclusions of these activities a picnic supper was enjoyed.

TRENTON FIRE LOSS QUARTER MILLION

Kennedy Picture To U.S. Allies Felt Gloomy

Crisis Over-Stressed Strength Under-Rated

OSLO — North Atlantic pact foreign ministers today got down to discussing NATO's long-term plans amid growing opinion in this Norwegian capital that the Kennedy administration is presenting its allies with too gloomy a picture of the world situation.

Canadian External Affairs Minister Howard Green, British Foreign Secretary Lord Home and Belgian Foreign Minister Paul-Henri Spaak all were reported to have taken a much more optimistic view than U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk when the three - day meeting opened here Monday.

There was a feeling in conference circles that the United States was placing too much emphasis on the crisis facing the West and not enough on the underlying strength of the Western alliance.

Those who felt the U.S. was being too pessimistic about the world situation attributed the American attitude to annoyance with Russia in getting a man into space.

The only foreign minister at the NATO country session who seemed to share the American pessimism was Greece's Evangelos Averoff.

TAKES CHEERFUL SIDE

Even new NATO Secretary-General Dirk Stikker of The Netherlands, who recently succeeded Spaak as NATO administrator, lined up with the optimists.

In contrast to Kennedy's statement after taking office that NATO was in deep difficulty, Stikker told a press conference that it was "complete nonsense" to say the organization was suffering a malaise.

Green himself talked bluntly at the opening session of the conference Monday to both the U.S. and Europe for their ban and Congo policies respectively.

He said in effect the U.S. should take no unilateral action in Cuba. He did not refer directly to France's refusal to help pay the cost of the UN Congo operation, but he called on NATO to support UN peacekeeping efforts.

Green said Canada, the only NATO country in the force in The Congo, would continue to contribute to the UN operation although some of the friends think Canada should pull out. Observer said France got the point.

DIES OF INJURIES

TORONTO (CP) — Adriana Turrin, 30, of suburban Downsview died in hospital Monday of injuries suffered when she fell off a bicycle Sunday.

Thousands of spectators lined Marmora Street and climbed to vantage points on Mount Pellon last night as fire ate through the stockpile yard at the Canada Creosote Company in Trenton. The fire fought the fire for more than three hours. Damage was estimated today at about $250,000.

Plant Itself Undamaged by Flames, Fought by Five Fire Brigades

TRENTON — Fire of undetermined origin last night swept through the stockpile yard of the Canada Creosoting Company on Marmora Street. Fire Chief Cecil Ellis said today that the damage may reach $250,000. The plant itself was not damaged.

Four fire trucks from Trenton were joined by trucks from Belleville, Brighton, the Air Station and Frankford. Firemen fought the conflagration for 3½ hours before it was contained in one corner of the two-acre lot, piled high with creosoted telephone poles and railway ties. At one time, it was thought that large tanks containing about 10,000 gallons of chemical used in creosoting, might be ignited.

Police, airmen and members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment warned the crowd of thousands to keep well back from the area. But the wind held to the southwest, reducing danger to the tanks.

The huge mushrooming clouds of heavy black smoke could be seen as far away as Picton. Showers of sparks, observed by those close to the fire, added to the eeriness of the scene. While firemen fought the stubborn fire police endeavored to push back spectators on Marmora St. Residents living within a stone's throw of the fire, piled household effects and personal belongings in trucks or carried them out room doors of their homes and left them on back lawns or in lanes.

Deep in the neighborhood dashed excitedly about, nipping at the heels of the firemen; frantic parents endeavored to round up their children. One small girl was seen kneeling in the back kitchen of her home, saying her Rosary; one resident lit a rocking chair on his lawn, watching the scene. The flames never reached the houses.

The fire broke out shortly after 7 p.m. According to persons who live in the area, what started as a small blaze in a pile of creosoted telephone poles at the extreme southeast corner of the yard, was a raging inferno in a few minutes. Three and a half hours later, flights of fuel oil were left firemen and spectators when it became evident that the fire by been contained.

Early in the evening hydro or bed telephone lines in the area were cut off. Several poles at the front of the Creosoting Co. property were burned. Area residents filled pots, kettles and even bathtubs with water, anticipating that the water supply might dwindle with the huge amount being poured into the fire.

Later in the first, firemen poured water on houses directly across the road from the fire, and continued this operation throughout the night. This morning, residents were busy assessing the damages caused by the blaze: scorched siding, cracked window glass and watering "damage to furnishings." Freshly planted gardens and lawns, bore mute witness to the thousands of milling spectators, by their pock-marked appearance. It was the consensus that the efforts of the firemen from five communities, prevented a conflagration in holding the wind to a south-west course and, in part, averted what could have been a disaster.

Five Children Die in Halifax Tenement Fire

HALIFAX (CP) — Five children, all under 10 years of age, died early today when fire swept their second - storey tenement home in a rundown district of northend Halifax.

Their parents, John Wagerman, 32, a Halifax native, and his wife Isobel, 29, are in hospital. Mr. Wagerman, a petty officer on the destroyer Iroquois, suffered third degree burns and his wife suffered multiple burns and cuts.

Hospital authorities said neither was in critical condition.

Dead are Terry, 9, Maxine, 7, Kirk, 4, Lynn, 5, and Charlene, 3. They are believed to have died within minutes after the fire broke out in their frame home.

LEAPED TO GROUND

The parents were injured when they jumped from the second-storey windows.

The building, one of several in a long tenement row, was a blazing inferno when firemen arrived after an alarm had been turned in by a passing policeman about 1:45 a.m.

Several police and fifgmen and neighbors attempted to enter but were turned back by the flames.

Press Ahead With All Speed In Space Conquest -- Shepard

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut Alan Shepard, the first American in space, promised today "we plan to press ahead with the best possible speed."

"If we are to have our spectacular successes . . . with even larger and ever more complex rockets, the early test flights, unmanned of course, will involve some spectacular failures."

But the applause and accolades Monday were for a "spectacular success" — Navy Cmdr. Shepard's 115 - mile voyage into space.

It was a day of pride and sentiment, tribute and humor for the calm man who—as one of his buddies put it — "really broke the ice for all of us."

He was decorated by the president, lauded by Congress and cheered by thousands as he was driven through the capital.

Also, in a televised press conference, he gave a capsule

Says Farmers Responsible For Present Machinery Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — Farmers themselves are responsible for present costs of farm machinery by insisting on improved services from dealers and more labor-saving devices from manufacturers, the Commons agriculture committee was told Monday.

Representatives of the Canadian Federation of Farm Equipment Dealers appeared for his their side of the story of rising farm machinery costs, and two committee members complained the inquiry was getting far from its basic purpose.

W. J. Allinson, a Kingston dealer and vice-president of the federation for Ontario, said that the first steel-tired tractor cost about the price of 10 milk cows.

Tractors could be bought today at the same price in terms of cows but they were stronger, more comfortable, more maneuverable and had more labor-saving features.

Marvin Howe (PC — Wellington-Huron) noted the growth of large dealer ships and asked whether they are as economical as the operations of small, local dealers operating with the help of members of their families and a few outside employees.

R. South, a dealer from Belleville, said the smaller

Two of Cuba's Rulers Help Unload Ships

HAVANA (CP) — Cuba's Minister of industry and economic planning, Ernesto (Che) Guevara, got his hands dirty Sunday.

Along with Foreign Trade Minister Alberto Mora, two under-secretaries of industry and a large group of officials and employees of both ministries, he sweated it out for several hours working as a stevedore.

Lending a direct hand in what is termed here Cuba's "battle of production," they unloaded two merchant ships, one Polish and the other Belgian, which brought a variety of goods and raw materials.

Unloading operations were held up for recent weeks because the militia was called on following an attempted invasion of Cuba three weeks ago.

Che, shirtless, lifted bags and pushed wheel barrows from early morning until afternoon, like true sons of socialism, he and his white-collar companions whistled and sang while they worked and sweated.

Press Assails Govt. Blocking Benn From Seat

LONDON (Reuters) — The government today comes under fire in the press for blocking an attempt by Anthony Wedgwood Benn to renounce his peerage and regain his seat in the House of Commons.

Benn, 35-year-old Labor member, was refused admission to the Commons Monday despite a landslide by-election victory last week in the port city of Bristol.

Benn was actually running in an election to pick his own successor. His seat became vacant when it was ruled that he had to succeed to his father's place in the House of Lords.

The Daily Telegraph, Conservative, says the government's action in blocking Benn at the entrance to the Commons chamber was "a classic example of

New Party Would Loan 2 Per Cent Of Nation's Income to Needy Lands

OTTAWA (CP)—A drastic alteration of the ratio between expenditures for defence and economic aid to underdeveloped countries is part of the New Party's draft program on international relations and defence issued Monday.

"While Canada has been spending more than $1,000,000,000 a year on defence, we have spent less than five per cent of that amount per year on economic aid to underdeveloped countries," the policy statement says.

The New Party, if elected to power, would "institute a program of loans, repayable over long, interest-free loans, amounting to two per cent of the national income" for underdeveloped countries.

Revolutionary developments in weapons had underlined "the danger and absurdity of relying on military strength" as the chief means of settling international disputes. This traditional policy of accumulating arms had diverted Canada from truly effective channels of action.

The main challenge of communism must be met on the political and economic battlefield. Hence the need for much greater aid to the underdeveloped.

The policy statement called for diplomatic recognition by Canada of Red China and support for that country's entry to United Nations, Canadian membership in the European Economic Union, withdrawal from North American Air Defence Command, and a demilitarized zone in central Europe and the simultaneous disbandment of the Warsaw and NATO pacts.

Canada, the statement said, should take the lead among middle and smaller powers at the United Nations to establish a permanent international police force.

It also "should propose a treaty to establish a non-nuclear club of nations pledged not to manufacture, store or permit weapons on their soil nor to use such weapons at any time."

Doukhobor Violence, Terrorism Cause of Alarm for Kootenays

TRAIL, B.C. (CP) — Violence and terrorism, which have plagued the British Columbia Kootenays for 50 years, will be the major topic at the annual meeting of Kootenay municipalities at the town of Marysvale next weekend.

Trail and Nelson delegates are expected to launch an all-out assay on the renewed bombings, blamed on fanatical Sons of Freedom Doukhobor.

RCMP activity has been stepped up and the ranks of detachments have been bolstered by special investigators and constables. Civic leaders have called for an end to the bombings.

A fifth bombing in several days was reported Monday. It damaged Canadian Pacific Railway track at a siding 30 miles north of Nelson.

A bomb at the Grand Forks CPR marshalling yards Sunday ripped up sections of track. The same day an explosion rocked a Trail department store, causing slight damage. Another blast shattered power poles outside Nelson.

Postal officials in Trail Friday discovered an explosive device which had been dropped in a mailbox in the city.

Police were concerned at recent thefts of dynamite. One and a half cases of explosives were stolen the week before the latest outbreak.

More than 60 RCMP officers were reported making a house-to-house search in the Doukhobor stronghold Monday. Road blocks were set up so police could make spot car checks for explosives.

No arrests were made.

Sir Victoria, Attorney-General Robert Bonner said the government is prepared to do whatever is required to stamp out the violence.

"We regard it (the bombings) as simply a criminal conspiracy," he said. "The sob-sisters have made the excuse in the past that it has been motivated by religious principles. I don't know of any group in which dynamiting has been regarded as religious motivation."

CCF MEMBER SAYS OFFICIAL PLAYING 'RED'

Martin Attacks Starr's Secretary

OTTAWA(CP) — A CCF MP Monday night accused Labor Minister Starr's parliamentary right - hand man of playing the Communist game by setting up a straw man and then knocking it down.

The clash — during Commons debate on an opposition - sponsored confidence motion — featured Murdo Martin, CCF member for Timmins, and Richard Thrasher, parliamentary secretary to Mr. Starr.

In the eyes of the CCF, Mr. Thrasher said, full employment means "nothing less than regimentation."

"You can guarantee employment in this country through the use of socialist methods; you can do it if you want to be prices."

Yet the Canadian people, he added, do not want to live under such a totalitarian system.

Mr. Martin said Mr. Thrasher had done a disservice to the Commons and to the country he has done exactly what the Communists are trying to do throughout the world today."

"They are trying to make us believe there is only one choice —either the chaos that we are debating here tonight or the regimentation that one finds under Communism. I think we can only choose between the two."

Mr. Martin said the CCF and

The Liberals moved a non-confidence motion accusing the government of imperilling the unemployment insurance fund through lack of sound management—employing measures also resulting "in new arbitrary administrative procedures which deny benefits to casual employees."

The CCF added a sub-amendment naming the basic cause of the rapid drain on the unemployment fund as the "failure of the Progressive Conservative administration to provide full employment."

Richard Thrasher, parliamentary secretary to Labor Minister Starr, said the CCF view of full employment is to impose regimentation on the country.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker promised a Commons statement today on the position of Canadian troops in The Congo in view of new disturbances there.

LAVAL WANTED CHILDREN SENT TO AUSCHWITZ

Made Suggestion About French Jews

JERUSALEM (Reuters)—The prosecution at the trial of Adolf Eichmann said today that Pierre Laval, head of the collaborationist Vichy government of France, proposed to the German in 1942 that children should be included in their roundup of French Jews.

The prosecution turned to the fate of French Jewry as it built up its file of evidence on the German program to exterminate the Jewish race, which Eichmann is accused as heading.

The assistant prosecutor, Gabriel Bach, submitted documents describing preparations for a rounding of 40,000 French Jews in the summer of 1942 under pressure from Eichmann's representative in Paris, SS Lieut. Theodor Dannecker.

In one of them Dannecker reported to Eichmann's Jewish affairs department of the Gestapo in Berlin that Laval had proposed the inclusion of children over 16 in future transports of Jews from unoccupied France.

He said Laval had added that Jewish children in the Nazi-occupied France "did not interest him."

According to earlier evidence, the Jews were being sent to Auschwitz extermination camp in Poland. The healthy prisoners were then put to work, but frail Jews and children were sent to the gas chambers.

One of the three German-born judges at the trial, Benjamin Halevi, asked: "You mean that Laval proposed that?"

Bach: "It was Laval's proposal that children under 16 should be taken as well. We shall later see a certain change in his attitude. I say rule this was his attitude at that date (June-July, 1942)."

SAYS FARMERS

BELLEVILLE TRUCKS FIGHT TRENTON FIRE

No local alarms were received by the city's fire department over the past 24 hours as of 11:00 o'clock this morning. A Mutual Aid alarm to Trenton came in at 7:43 p.m. yesterday, however, and two trucks and 10 men were sent to aid the Trenton fire department to battle a fire at the creosote plant. One truck returned at 4:45 this morning while the second was still in Trenton at 11:00 o'clock.

Will Observe Navy Week

Officers and cadets of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps "Quinte" paraded at the Battle of Alliance Sunday ceremonies held in Picton during the past weekend. Some 35 representatives of the local corps were present together with the Picton Corps, RCSCC "Hallowell" and a division from Trenton's RCSCC "Trent".

The division was inspected by Com. Off. A. Hill, RCN, assistant area officer from Toronto, prior to their parading to church. Following divine service the Sea Cadets were served refreshments at the armouries.

The local Sea Cadets will be observing Navy Week in Canada with an inspection and marchpast this Wednesday evening at the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Armouries.

The dealers said they bought implements from the manufacturers at a 30-per-cent discount from the manufacturers' suggested retail prices and paid freight on shipments from the manufacturer to their display rooms. But when this spread went to battle a fire at the creosote plant. One truck returned at 4:45 this morning while the second was still in Trenton at 11:00 o'clock.

Gen. J. Montgomery (PC—Victoria-Carleton) said the inquiry into farm machinery prices was not getting far. Dealers had to operate within the 30-per-cent discount margin and did not get much in final returns.

"I don't see how we can prevent these people down and bring the cost of machinery prices down," he said.

Alfred D. Hales (PC—Wellington South) said it seemed clear the high cost of repair and replacement parts kept farm costs high, and they were set by the farm implement manufacturers whose parts were not interchangeable.

Mr. Hales said the restrictive trade practices commission should be called on to investigate the setting of parts prices.

Jack Sykes, executive secretary of the federation's research committee, said, however, there was nothing to prevent third-party manufacturers from going into production. But experience had been that their substitute parts are not as good quality as those of the original manufacturers.

Tells How Boys Go to College With Navy Help

Wonderful opportunities exist for a lad to advance his education through the Royal Canadian Navy at no expense to either himself or his parents. This remark was made by Lt. George Fulford, RCN (R), of Brockville to members of the local Rotary Club at its weekly dinner meeting at the Hotel Quinte yesterday afternoon.

The reserve navy officer emphasized that free people seemed to realize that any lad with good marks in grade 13 or more, in some instances, grade 12, is eligible to further his education via the Regular Officers Training Plan or the University Naval Training Division program.

With either of these plans a lad can take the university course of his choice, with but a few exceptions, with his way being paid by the Royal Canadian Navy and with steady summer employment with the RCN counted as long as his academic marks are satisfactory. At the conclusion of his university career he is obliged to serve with the RCN for a period of three years as a Midshipman graduate stated.

The chances for those with no matriculation standing, an apprenticeship program from which a lad can receive his grade 13 standing by himself, are also to be considered for further academic training under the RCN's guidance for his grade 13 and, if his record is satisfactory, the opportunity to progress through the ROTP or UNTD programs.

The Venture Plan, primarily designed to replace pilots for the RCN's air arm, also affords this advancement to its grade 13 level provided, if after the first year of the plan, they have achieved grade 11 standing in the five academic courses they take as a part of their training. Mr. Fulford explained.

HISTORY GIVEN

A brief description of the Royal Canadian Navy's history since its foundation under the Naval Service Act of 1910 and the acquisition of Canada's first two warships, HMCS Niobe and HMCS Rainbow, was given. The role of the Reserve, with its fleet under Admiral Hose's direction, the establishment of naval training divisions across Canada was also dwelt on briefly.

The speaker also told of the work of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets in providing a sense of direction for young lads, as well as giving them training in seamanship and naval matters. Although not looked at as a recruiting medium for sailors, the reserve officer stated that it was the general experience in the RCN that its finest recruits have those who had had training in the Sea Cadets.

The speaker was introduced by Bob Keating and thanked by Arnold Campbell. President-elect Virgil James was chairman for the meeting in the absence of President Bill Hurst. Birthday wishes were conveyed to Rotarians Enos David and Al. Woonacott.

sultation and economic aid Sihkar's feeling was that the "ugly look" on NATO's long-term aims has been under discussion long enough.

EXPECT TREATY SIGNING

The four big NATO powers were reported convinced that Soviet Premier Khrushchev intends to sign a separate peace treaty with Communist East Germany soon, a thing that threat of an East German attempt to interfere with allied supply traffic in West Berlin.

Informants said the British, French and Americans are determined to maintain their occupation rights in West Berlin regardless of what Khrushchev does.

Green also dealt with Berlin and disarmament at the opening session. He said Russia may propose an international conference on Berlin and that the three major Western powers should prepare their position now. There were indications Russia would like to avoid a crisis on Berlin if it could save face.

Rusk told the ministers Monday that American forces would remain in Europe as long as they hoped the U.S. would probit a massive retaliation in the next this year.

PROGRAM UNSPOKEN

Britain, the United States and France still have not reached an agreed final decision on the type of settlement they will seek for Laos at the Geneva conference scheduled to open Friday.

They still were considering whether to seek a stabilized government for the divided South-East Asian kingdom and whether that the Communists would not settle control or whether to favor participating the country on the lines of Korea.

Green said that there should be no foreign bases or troops in Laos and no shipping of arms there, but he said Canada and others might have to be supervised by some international agency.

Green questioned the American view that Fidel Castro has set up a sort of Soviet Catellite in Cuba.

He said Canada deplores many practices of the Castro regime and the increasing orientation of Cuba toward the Soviet bloc. But there still is a strong nationalist element in the Cuban revolution and many changes that has affected probably should not be reversed.

Green said that while the U.S. is under great provocation, it should not rule out negotiation with Cuba, but should get a measure of support from France on this issue.

Toronto Delays Bill Approving Sunday Movies

TORONTO (CP)—Third reading of a bill before city council which would have allowed movies next Sunday has been delayed for a week by a dispute over the inclusion of burlesque shows.

A vote Monday on whether the third reading should be given was 13 to 7, short of a two-thirds majority. It will be two weeks before the bill can come before city council again but it is expected then to become law.

May 28 is the likely date on which Toronto will see its first Sunday movies, theatrical performances, concerts and lectures.

Opposition to the inclusion of burlesque shows on Sunday was led by Controller William Allen.

Three Weeks' Holidays for Dept. Heads

Effective this year, Department heads at city hall will be granted three weeks vacation each year, it has been agreed by council.

The covering recommendation was up for approval at council last evening and although there were a few misgivings the motion was carried.

Council also passed the by-laws defining the duties and responsibilities of city purchasing agent A. L. Jobey.

During its discussion on the three weeks holiday proposal for department heads, Mayor C. M. Haig said he was not opposed but suggested council consider all the implications involved. He said the request for three weeks holidays could be broken down through the city staff.

Alderman Deacon did not see the matter in such a serious light and pointed out that department heads were not called for attendance at council and committee meetings and therefore could be expected to be given more consideration.

The motion this year only department heads with five years service with the city were entitled three weeks vacation.

Would Like Direction From City Council

The Belleville Industrial Commission would like direction from council in just how far it can be expected to go in its efforts to attract industry to the city.

Speaking in support of a letter from the Belleville Industrial Commission which had been read earlier in council, Alderman Green said that there were many prospects of an American firm establishing a branch plant locating in Belleville.

"It will take a lot of work as well as money to get industry to secure this industry, but I believe there is a good chance of it being secured," he said.

He said the Industrial Commission would like to know how far council was prepared to go in its efforts to locate the industry in Belleville.

"What we want is a clear cut policy of what council will or will not do."

Alderman Ireland said that industry in question could be expected to expand to three or four times its initial size in a very few years.

Alderman Jack Ellis suggested the Industrial Commission should be prepared to tell council what they will require for any expanded industrial promotion program.

Mayor C. M. Haig said a joint meeting of council and the Industrial Commission should be called to iron out any details.

It was agreed that such a meeting should be arranged.

Drunk Driving Charge Out, Man Fined

A charge of drunk driving against Wilfred Francis MacDonald, R.R. 1 Foxboro, was dismissed in city magistrate's court today because of conflicting evidence which, Magistrate T. Wills said, had created a reasonable doubt that the 27-year-old-man was guilty.

A charge of careless driving was withdrawn at the request of Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson, but MacDonald was fined $10 after he pleaded guilty to having alcoholic beverages in a place other than in his residence.

MacDonald, charged by city police March 31 following a chase across the north end of the city, was represented by Belleville barrister Ronald Cass and was tried April 18. The magistrate had reserved judgment on MacDonald's plea of not guilty until today.

Macdonald's brother, Bernard, 19, testified during the trial that he and Wilfred had been behind the wheel of the car at the time of an accident which ended the chase, he had been thrown into the passenger's seat and his brother — who was charged — was thrown behind the steering wheel.

TORONTO STOCKS

On the exchange index, industrials dropped .13 at 384.81, base metals .33 at 286.77 and western oils .21 at 97.78. Golds were up .12 at 82.18.

The 11 a.m. volume was 965,000 shares compared with 1,183,000 at the same time Monday.

Building Products, Dominion Foundries and Steel, Huron and Erie and Price Brothers each dropped ¼, Canadian Breweries slipped ¾ at 48¾.

A ¾-point loss by Falconbridge at 24¾ led base metals down. International Nickel lost ⅛.

On index, industrials gained .06 at 384.94 compared with a p.m. figure of 2.22 at 467. Base metals gained .60 at 197.30 and Westerns oils .30 at 97.99. Golds

Volume was 4,600,000 shares compared with 3,947,000 Friday. Of 722 issues traded 246 advanced, 225 declined and 248 were unchanged.

Federal Grain provided the best advance of the day among industrials, ahead 3¾ at 84¾. Alberta Natural Gas, Atlas Steel and Stedman Brothers all gained 1¾. Sterling Turst was ahead at 70.

Coppers were best among the speculative mines with Kirkland Lake trading steady but turning over 853,975 shares and gaining 36 cents at 80 cents.

Golds were quiet and changes fractional, losses slightly outnumbering gains.

Western oils, with the exception of one or two lower - priced issues, traded quietly and price changes were confined to fractions.

Several councillors indicated they were not prepared to discuss the motion let alone vote on the matter.

Alderman Harrison, said the motion was merely intended to "get the matter before" with council making it positively clear their feeling on the matter.

He said the health department had already discussed the matter and noted it was again to be up for discussion at their meeting today (Tuesday).

It was eventually decided to consider the motion at the merely a notice of motion thus giving the councillors the opportunity to ready themselves for discussion at the next council meeting.

Sidney Council Has Busy Meet

Sidney Township Council, at its recent meeting, was informed the 1961 school requisitions of the various elementary boards total $79,467.95, this amount to be levied on the 1961 tax roll.

Representatives of Frank Cowan Insurance Agencies gave a brief outline of an insurance problems for the township and suggested further coverage be taken out.

The Building Inspector reported 29 building permits were issued during March and April for a value of $180,550.00.

A communication from the Ontario Good Roads Association announced a school for Road Superintendents to be held in Toronto during the second week in May.

The School Tax Assistance grant from the Province of Ontario will be applied as a general legislative grant for the year 1961 whereas the grant will be applied on farm and residential assessment as laid down by the Act.

No action was taken on a resolution from the City of Peterborough concerning the Trent Waterways System.

Correspondence from the Glen Miller area was applied to council requesting permission to build a residence on an undersized lot and was advised when the lot was increased to area to 15,000 square feet, a permit could be granted.

Tenders for garbage disposal for the Bateawa area were received from Miss M. Sturrie, Consulting Engineers, and will be acted upon immediately.

Council returned to meet on June 5th, 1:30 p.m. at the Orange Hall, Wallbridge.

Arrest Suspect In Shooting

WALPOLE ISLAND (CP) — Ontario Provincial Police and RCMP officers armed with revolvers and tear gas surrounded a home deep in the bush area here today and arrested a suspect in the early-morning shooting of a 60-year-man.

Police said Sampson Seabo was reportedly shot after a quarrel. He is in hospital in critical condition with bullet wounds in the stomach and left leg.

Police said charges are pending against the suspect, whose name was not released.

Council Tables Fluoridation Discussion

Belleville city council will be asked in two weeks to say whether it favors the fluoridation of the city's water supply.

In what ultimately was ruled to be a notice of motion, Alderman Jack Deacon and Eugene Zaplitny Monday tabled a recommendation calling for council to go on record as favoring fluoridation with a request that the public utilities commission provide the service.

There seemed to be a bit of misunderstanding as to whether the motion was presented with the idea of immediate discussion or whether it was intended as a notice of motion for the next council meeting.

Presented With Scroll

CIVIC SCROLL was presented to Point Anne hockey star "Bobby" Hull at city hall ceremony Monday afternoon. Scroll was presented by Mayor A. M. Haig as testimonial to "Bobby's" ability, sportsmanship and team play, as member of the Chicago Black Hawks, Stanley Cup winners. In right are: "Bobby" Hull, Mrs. Hull and Mayor Haig.

City Honors Bobby Hull

"Bobby" Hull, Point Anne's gift to the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, was honored by the city of Belleville yesterday when he was presented with a scroll by Mayor A. McLean Haig prior to the afternoon council session.

The framed scroll was presented as a testimonial to the Point Anne player's "Ability, Sportsmanship and Teamplay, as a member of this year's Stanley Cup winners.

Mrs. Hull was also presented with a bouquet of roses by Christie Haig, daughter of Mayor and Mrs. Haig. Christie was dressed in her Brownie uniform.

With tongue in cheek reference to Belleville's unfortunate experience in Senior OHA hockey, Mayor Haig said the city was a bit allergic to hockey but at the same time it could not let the opportunity pass without making some gesture of appreciation to a local player for his fine record in the process in the National Hockey League.

In accepting the scroll "Bobby" Hull paid tribute to the minor hockey program at Belleville in what it was doing for Belleville and district youngsters.

"Without minor hockey in Belleville I never would have had the opportunity of gaining the experience which took me to the National Hockey League", he said.

Late Setting of Tax Rate Cost City $6,000 Interest

The late striking of the city's mill rate this year cost the city of Belleville an extra $6,000 in added interest on borrowed money.

This was the estimate given to city council last night by Alderman Walter T. Elliott, who urged that something be done to speed up the annual audit next year to allow for earlier striking of the mill rate.

Alderman Elliott said it was costing the city approximately $1,000 a week in interest rates and the first instalment of taxes will not be due until June 30th.

AUDIT LATE

Striking of the tax rate was delayed this year because of the late arrival of the audit from the city auditors.

"Now is the time to make sure that we get the audit next year by the end of March," urged Alderman Elliott. "There is no reason in the world why we should not get it at that time."

Mayor A. M. Haig said he had been thinking along the same lines.

"I think it is very important that we make sure our auditors have enough personnel to get the audit out earlier," he said.

Alderman Jack Deacon suggested there was a way around the possibility of the audit being received late.

He said there was legislation which aligned the pre-payment of taxes and in this way the municipality could avoid paying interest over a longer period.

France Fears New Terrorism By Right Wing

By DAVID REID

PARIS (Reuters)—France today braces for a possible new wave of right-wing terrorism in the wake of a fiery statement by President de Gaulle that a new Algeria will be built "in spite of everything."

Terrorist leaflets were circulated in Paris as de Gaulle went on television Monday night to make his first major speech since the military revolt collapsed in Algeria last week.

The president spoke of "coming early meetings" with Moslem Algerian leaders at the French alpine resort town of Evian, but set no date.

He said if no agreement proved possible with the Tunisian-based insurgents then France would go ahead alone in the North African territory.

"We must speed up and develop on the spot the accession of Algerians to all responsibilities, including those of their government, so that in spite of everything a new Algeria is built," he said.

REVOLT WAS 'STUPID'

De Gaulle said he was sure the "stupid" revolt of the rightwing junta of former generals against his government would itself no more delay French progress.

Meanwhile there were new outbreaks of terrorism in Algiers and Oran.

Two bombs exploded in Algiers, one in the entrance office door of a European lawyer and the other close to the church of a pro-Gaullist priest in the working class suburb of Bab-el-Oued.

Terrorist pamphlets similar to those distributed in Paris also were circulated. They proclaimed "death to all Gaullists."

Hatchet-Armed Moslems Driven Out of Town

ALGIERS (AP)—Troops and riot police today drove hundreds of Moslem demonstrators out of the European section of the town of Maredgo where they rioted in support of the national-list rebellion.

The Moslems screamed "death to the European, shook guns and white rebel flags and injured a European youth in Maredgo. The French Army rushed reinforcements to the town of 1 6,000 population, 50 miles west of Algiers.

Capital Works if Approved Will Up Per Capita Debt

Belleville's per capita debt will have increased to $803 by 1965 if all capital works presently planned are approved by the Ontario Municipal Board and are carried out.

The city's five-year capital works program with an estimated cost in excess of $13,000,000, was up for council approval, yesterday but is being submitted to the Ontario Municipal Board. The present per capita debt is given as $299.

Although the capital works program got the approval of city council, some doubt is expected that the full program gets the official okay from the Municipal Board.

"The big item on the five-year capital works program of course is the proposed sewage disposal plant and connecting trunk sewers.

The initial phase of this project consisting of trunks between east and west from the plant site costing an estimated $2,379,000 has already been approved by the Board, but Alderman Jack Ellis a member of the public works committee, expressed doubt that all of the remaining phases would be approved.

Because of this he suggested that the second phase of the treatment plant be left out of the present works program.

NEW BRIDGE

In addition to the initial phase of the sewage treatment program scheduled for commencement this year, another major expenditure for 1961 is the construction of the proposed North Front Street overhead bridge.

Alderman Ellis said he expected tenders would soon be called for this work, estimated to cost $315,000 with an additional $160,000 in land purchase costs.

Major capital works projects planned for 1962 include the next phase of the sewage treatment plant, an underpass beneath the railway on Canniffton Road, and a new vehicle bridge over the Moira at the north end of Pinnacle Street.

For 1964 another two new bridges, one over the Moira on Sidney Street, and over the Moira on College Street are planned while in 1965 a bridge over the Moira on Dundas Street and a big program of road re-construction and road paving is planned.

Predicts Use Of Plastics For Buildings

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) All - plastic houses in many sizes and unusual shapes were predicted Monday by a Toronto architect at a provincial conference of the Society of Plastics Industries.

James C. Craig heralded new uses of hard, heat - resistant moulded plastic in building construction as 200 delegates from Canada and the United States met here.

"We could get into shapes that are impossible using rectangular or rectilinear," the architect said.

"Buildings should be visualized as sculptured shapes, perhaps looking like trees, to flow together as homogenous entrances, each fulfilling its function of enclosure, structure illumination and beauty."

The moulded plastic could be brought in tank trucks to a building site and poured under pressure into moulding forms. The system would not only cut construction cost, but would greatly lower labor costs.

Consider Moving Priests and Nuns Out of Cuba

HAVANA (CP)—The evacuation of Canadian Roman Catholic priests and nuns from Cuba is being actively considered, it was learned Monday.

It is understood the Canadian Embassy has been in touch with the external affairs department in Ottawa concerning the Canadians.

External Affairs Minister Green, in Oslo for the NATO foreign ministers' conference, is said to be taking a direct hand in the matter.

As far as can be determined no final plan for the evacuation has yet been worked out.

The Cuban government has said that all foreign religious bodies will have to get out of Cuba, unless they are given special permission to remain and are not considered counter-revolutionary.

A large number of Spanish priests, nuns and brothers are expected to leave the island this week.

Only about 40 Canadian priests and 40 nuns are known to be in Cuba, plus a handful of brothers. They are members of the Foreign Missions Society of Montreal.

About 2,000 priests, nuns and other members of religious orders have gone from Cuba since the immigration office here to arrange exit permits, according to newspaper reports. Apparently most are Spanish.

Hitler's Deputy Martin Bormann Reported Alive

TEL AVIV (AP)—Argentina's former ambassador to Israel said today, Martin Bormann, Hitler's deputy whose fate has been a mystery since the war, was in Argentina when Adolf Eichmann was captured last year.

Dr. Gregorio Topolevsky, envoy to Israel during the Peron foreign service, said at a press conference that Bormann had been living under an alias and disappeared into Brazil when he heard Eichmann was capture by Israeli agents in May, 1960.

Topolevsky said Bormann's police knew of Bormann's presence. He did not elaborate.

Topolevsky said that if Israel had requested Eichmann's extradition through official channels, he would have vanished "two hours later." Eichmann was flown out of the country by Israeli agents.

The former envoy said that Dr. Joseph Mengele, Nazi physician at Auschwitz who selected victims for gas chambers, was also known to be in Argentina and Israel wanted to be in that country.

Bormann was sentenced to death in the Nuernberg war crimes tribunal Oct. 1946.

Later Nazi youth leader Arthur Axmann and Hitler's personal driver, Erich Kempka, testified in a German court at Berchtesgaden that Hitler had been killed trying to break out of besieged Berlin, and the German leader declared dead.

However, rumors have persisted Bormann was alive and hiding in Argentina.

Keenleyside Blames Junior On RCMP Staff

VICTORIA (CP) — Investigation of the National Committee on Radiation Hazards is probably confined to inquiries by a "misguided junior" on the RCMP Staff, Dr. Hugh L. Keenleyside told the committee Monday.

He was commenting on Saskatchewan Premier T. C. Douglas' charge that RCMP inquiries making the committee into which Dr. Keenleyside heads appear "subversive."

"The objective of our committee is almost identical with that of our minister for external affairs and Liberal Leader L. B. Pearson," said Brian Argue of the CCF," said Dr. Keenleyside, who is also chairman of the British Columbia Power Commission.

In this ominous — to half spread of nuclear weapons and urge disarmament — was endorsed unanimously by the B.C. legislature, he added.

"I find it difficult to believe the RCMP is making a serious investigation. There's probably just misguided initiative on the part of some junior official in the staff."

Eisenhower Misses the Point

General Dwight D. Eisenhower, in a discussion with Republican leaders, is said to have criticised the military planning of the Cuban invasion.

Eisenhower, it is said, did not attempt to assess the blame and much has been made of his support of President Kennedy in the Cuban issue. We ought not, however, to make the mistake of regarding this backing of Kennedy as an example of great generosity. The plain fact of the matter is that Eisenhower is in no position to criticize the decision to assist the Cuban exiles to stage the invasion, because this decision was made by him and his administration long before President Kennedy took office. Kennedy merely fell in with his predecessor's plans. Under these circumstances, even if Eisenhower wished to be critical, he would, perforce, have to limit his criticism to the manner in which the invasion was staged. This is not the main issue. It is not the failure of the invasion but the question whether it should have been permitted at all which provides the real point of the main controversy.

Kennedy himself appears to have had some doubts in this matter. It seems that he insisted that the U.S. disassociate itself officially from the invasion project. But, in seeking a middle road in a problem in which no such road existed, Kennedy merely doomed the invasion to failure, without in any way absolving the U.S. from responsibility for permitting it to be organized, wholly illegally according to the laws of the U.S. itself, on U.S. territory.

Senator J. William Fulbright of the Senate foreign relations committee is winning praise for having opposed the invasion, but it is not clear on what grounds he based his opposition. A colleague of Fulbright's on the foreign relations committee, Senator Frank Church of Idaho, comes close to grips with the real issue. "Communism cannot be shot down in Latin America," he says. "It must be shown up, and this should be the object of our policy." Even Church, though, does not make it clear whether he would favor shooting Communism down, (in other words imposing the wishes of the U.S. on other sovereign nations), if this were possible. But a debate on this question, from the first the central point at issue amongst Canadians, is beginning to shape up in the U.S.

Once it does, we are likely to be told repeatedly "the end does not justify the means." This is arrant nonsense. If the means needs any justification at all, it can only obtain it by reason of the end sought. The trouble is that those who are realistic enough to appreciate that the end sometimes justifies the use of means of some desirable means too often distort this fact into a contention that a good end always justifies any means, no matter how evil. To state that contention in plain words is to expose its falsity. Not only can the evil effects of a bad means outweigh the realistic results from a good end, but if the means be truly evil they almost invariably prevent the realization of the end for which they were used. There is no benefit to be derived from shooting down Communism if, in doing so, we are forced to use the tyrannical methods of Communism itself.

The difficulties inherent in deciding when the evils of the necessary means outweigh the possible good to be derived from achievement of the desired end are obvious. Prudence suggests that the greatest caution be used before yielding to the temptation to use any questionable means to achieve a worthy end. It is for history to recognize this fact, for erecting into a doctrine the proposition that the U.S. is entitled to disregard treaty obligations and international law as it sees fit in order to meet any threat of the expansion of Communist influence in the western hemisphere, that the Kennedy administration is most open to criticism.

The Legion Should Go

There has always been an aura of romance surrounding the French Foreign Legion, but even when that force was on its best behavior there must have been many who questioned the wisdom of a great nation depending on the services of foreign mercenaries in this fashion.

The French themselves now appear to be considering this question of principle with great care, after the rightest revolt in Algeria. It is difficult to believe that the Legionnaires, many of them Germans, have any deep-rooted conviction that destiny meant the French to rule Algeria. Their revolt against the French Government is not to be so easily excused. If France learns its lesson and gets rid of the Legion, the revolt may have served a useful purpose. It is bad enough when a government is threatened by its own army; it is infinitely worse when the backbone of the insurrection is provided by foreign mercenaries.

Talking for Victory

Memorial Gesette.

William George, in his pungent reminiscences of his brother, David Lloyd George, describes a period when Thomas, John R. Jones, who lived in Llangstundwy, their village in Wales. Jones had a great liking for the musical argument. His resourcefulness and skill were by no means inconsiderable.

Once, however, while travelling to Criccieth, Portmadoc, Jones found himself engaged in argument with an opponent whose strength, he could see, was greater than his own. It became then, of the utmost importance to keep the argument from reaching any conclusion before he reached his station.

Jones counted upon delay. He opened his defence with the words, "Let us begin with the Garden of Eden." After dwelling for some time on that subject, he advanced slowly, until he reached the story of Noah and the Ark. Before he could advance further, the railway engine whistled. They were approaching Portmadoc.

* * *

Always there are some whose interest in an argument is not the right or wrong of the question, but the chance of victory. If they are not certain of getting the better of their opponent, they will rely upon a timely disappearance.

This, in private argument, is rather like the exercise of closure in a parliamentary body. The varieties of closure are many.

Ramsay MacDonald had one quite his own in his younger years, when he was a pleasant handsome young man, much in food of talking others down. Confidence in Jones prompted him to avoid the platform he was being worried. He would stand with his back to the door and the door handle in the other hand. This secured for him the last word; if the argument went unfavorable to his argument, he could vanish, leaving his opponent to have the last word.

* * *

The temptation to argue for victory's sake may, in some minds, become irresistible. Dr. Samuel Johnson was not certain to be numbered among the great figures of private debate to whom victory might be everything.

His powers in debate were immense; his joy in exercising them was profound. In him a good head and good bed was united with a most fertile imagination. He could reason close or wide, as he saw best. For him there was no need to exercise any friendliness in debate. He had relations is our willingness to buy and sell without "protecting" our own domestic producers.

Besides unemployment is rarely caused by high export priced imports; rather, it is much more likely in a country which does not have a large export, or cannot find foreign markets for its products as long as our productivity remains high, our unemployment problem will be largely in domestic measures.

One argument of the "Buy American" people is that foreign labor is so cheap, by our standards, that our own industries cannot compete while paying relatively high wages. It does have other advantages to exploit: better and new machinery, improved production methods, and marketing techniques. If foreign competition didn't have cheaper labor, it would be utterly impossible for them to compete in world markets.

The anti-foreign feeling expressed in the Buy American act is a regression to our national early twentieth century. In the 1960's, it is impossible that anyone can think he believes in a free world if he despises the necessity of free trade.

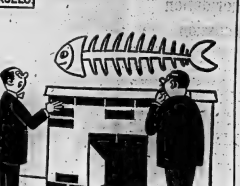
MORAL ACCOUNTABILITY



Every one of us is accountable to God. We are all accountable this very day; we shall in the largest sense imaginable be accountable on that last great day when all the affairs of this world will be closed out and all humanity will be standing in line sitting or their great cards.

Their is a philosophy today which holds, among other things, that mankind will ever go fro mone triumph to another and that after death he will be enrolled in another school and promoted a grade wnether he has passed his examinations or not. Such an idea is ridiculous from the standpoint of common sense, morally revolting. There is justice in the universe, and that means not only that we shall receive justice but that we shall have to submit to its requirements. There will be no promotions unless we have passed our examinations. Those

Free Trade Is Essential In This Age

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Those silly "Buy American" stickers are back on the bumpers of a good many automobiles these days. I recently saw a sign on one that read: "Unemployment — Made in Japan."

If anything encouraging has happened in the world during the last 30 years it has been the increase of free trade among all nations throughout the world. Trade between countries today is at a higher level than ever before in history.

"Buy American" is one of those slogans that sounds impressive and patriotic and sensible — until you examine the fallacies on which it rests. For one thing, we make almost 20 billions in exports last year, while paying less than 15 billions for imports.

This five billion dollar excess is our favorable trade we have been at all possible if we had to purchase a good from abroad. If we could not set quotas and restrictions, foreign nations will be able to endure only if we do. Nobody will benefit in the long run.

As for "unemployment" that is caused by the importation of cheap foreign goods. There would be just as much, if not more, unemployment caused by our shrinking export industries. I know these facts are dull, but we must be willing to endure dull facts to gain understanding.

Quite apart from the economic aspects of the problem, it is psychologically desirable that we trade freely with other countries. We gain a broader estate on the political, military and cultural levels if we refuse to compete on a strictly economic net. One test of our honesty and friendliness in international re-

Oliver F. Munnings, civilian employed in the stores' audit department, Ordnance Branch, reported missing in the sinking of a ship at sea is believed to be formerly of this city, although the Munnings has had no official word from Ottawa. Mr. S. B. Munnings, resident on McDonald Avenue, is a brother.

While in the performance of his duties in the Canadian National Railways yards north of the city, Stanley Amo of Bettes Street, suffered slight injury to his head and face on Tuesday night. The injured man was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where an X-ray was taken.

While instances of the cycling days of sixty-five years ago when bicycling was in its infancy, are brought to the mind of older residents of the city with the arrival of a 1875 vintage which is on exhibition daily outside the show window of Bert Upton's Radio and Battery Service. The machine, one of the most popular ordinary' models which saw service between 1810 and 1890, before the introduction of safety bicycles with wheels came of equal sized wheels came to the fore. It is the object of much attention by passers-by. It seems that cycling was then fifty years ago at the price tag on the 'ordinary' ranged anywhere from $150 to $225.

Which is more strenuous for children, a biology lesson or a mathematics lesson?

The answer to the question was arrived at by means of psychological tests at the University of Marburg. Describing the experiments, the German Bulletin says the testing procedure always began either with the biology lesson or a biology lesson, the latter subject to the fundamental proof of the earth, as well as of time. And one of the best things to get about mind nourishment is that it is derived from people. The mind is nourished by what it gets from other minds. In fact, it bounds from mind to mind like a bee hunting its honey, seeking the choicest nectar from a world of minds.

The rightly nourished mind is the embodiment of all knowledge and experience. It is slow to anger and quick in its forgiving. And the more mature and ripened it is, the simpler it is in its life. Just as the ripe fruit wants to be plucked — waiting to give all that it is from all that it has been sold to gather — so the nourished mind is a generous mind.

You must use every opportunity to improve your mind, to make it more of an ally to you. It will then keep re-enforcing you in all your plans.

You must keep, out destroying. thoughts. You must keep washing it to drive away its unstrengthening dirt, as one uses spray trees — that perfect fruit will result.

And too, the properly nourished mind is much happier than any other. Being so full of all that is nourished, it feels a bursting desire to give. And that is the greatest thrill about the rightly nourished mind.

Feed your mind and it will keep you feeling young and full of ginger.

MIND NOURISHMENT

The world keeps unfolding all the time, But it is only as the mind is nourished that we are able to see the increasing worth in all things.

There is something very joyous about things physical — but there is nothing more compact with the rightly nourished mind. For, in the mind is wisdom, its marvellous appreciation, and its ability to go into the fundamental proof of the earth, as well as of time.

And one of the best things to get about mind nourishment is that it is derived from people. The mind is nourished by what it gets from other minds. In fact, it bounds from mind to mind like a bee hunting its honey, seeking the choicest nectar from a world of minds.

Pain of Sciatica Demands Treatment for Relief

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Doctor: I have been treated for 13 years for sciatic neuritis. — Mrs. H. P."

Sciatic neuritis, or "sciatica," refers to pain in a branch of the nerve that originates in the lower portion of the spinal cord, and extends down the back of the thighs.

"Sciatica" is not the correct term for any old pain in the lower back. It refers to pain in the area of that particular nerve, although when I stop to think about it, I don't know that it matters much what name you use for it, if you have the important thing is whether the doctor can determine the precise location of the pain, and then find out the basic cause.

For in this sort of trouble, just as with pain in "phantom limbs," the cause of the pain may not be where — to the patient — it seems to be. It may be somewhere along the nerve it runs to, or at the point at which the nerves exits from the spine, though the pain seems to be in the back and-or legs.

The pain can be extremely severe — there is no paralysis of the legs, but, because of the pain, walking may be very difficult.

I remember some years ago when wonderful Joe E. Brown was in a hospital suffering after a performance that he had been in violent pain from sciatica all during the show. But he forgot. "Please don't say anything about it. People came to the show to laugh, and they'll stay away if they think it would just spoil it for them."

However, sciatica is such a misery that all reasonable steps should be taken, first, to ease the pain, and then to track down the basic cause so it can be corrected. With real sciatic, pain-suppressing drugs are necessary. They should, of course, be found — and used — in the safe ones.

Then comes the search for the basic cause. It's not always easy. There are so many possible causes: Infection, perhaps a focal infection following one of the infectious diseases.

Or a metabolic disturbance (gout and diabetes among them); toxic conditions, from alcoholism or drugs; disease or injury to the hip joint, or fracture of hip or pelvis; pressure of the roots of the nerves as from some tumors, or changes involving a disk in the spine, a cause which sometimes is overlooked.

Or degenerative arthritis of the spine; or even tumors of the spine or spinal cord. Such a lot of possibilities.

Mrs. H.P.'s letter recounted that in the beginning, 12 years ago ,treatment brought relief for a time. Later, on treatment, whether shots, vitamins, diathermy, or anything else, was successful.

This implies that the fundamental trouble may be close to the point at which the nerve roots originate. For that reason, spinal X-rays or special studies such as myelograms may be required if the true trouble is to be discovered. Twelve years of it! I certainly hope that Mrs. H.P. undergoes the studies that can get to the real root of the trouble. Sometimes more difficult and long-lasting in her case than is true with many others.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Do you think it is a good idea for third months to get pregnant? — C."

Depends on the cousins! That is to say, that distant a amily there's no reason they shouldn't marry, provided he's nice and she's nice and they love each other.

Note to R. J. A.: No, I disagree with anyone that any particular number of bowel movements is right. And I certainly disagree violently that three a day are "necessary." Average is enough, but many persons are normal with a movement every two or three days.

Financial Post

Overall, 11 per cent of the work force was jobless during the first three months of this year. But the rate among laborers was 33 per cent and for unskilled construction workers was 30 per cent. At the other end of the occupation scale, unemployment / among trained office and professional workers was only 3.5 per cent — probably not far from the normal amount involved in switching from one job to another.

Urges Students To Take up Public Life

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who rose from a Saskatchewan homestead to the prime minister's office, urged 194 top Canadian high school students Monday to take up a life of public service.

"Public life offers great opportunities for service to your fellow men," he said in a luncheon address to delegates to the Rotary Club's 11th annual Adventure in Citizenship.

The project, highlighted by a three-day visit to Ottawa, has the aim of promoting a better understanding of the meaning and responsibilities of Canadian citizenship.

Mr. Diefenbaker told of his youthful ambition to end "private" discrimination in Canadian politics and how he lived to see it realized.

"Parliament today has 13 racial origins other than French and British. That was not possible 30 years ago."

He advised his young audience:

"Dream your dreams — and don't worry if others disagree, so long as they are founded on the eternal things of life. Pursue justice regardless of others. No advance was ever made that didn't have its start in the heart and soul of someone."

Long-Term Oil Contracts Frowned on by Commission

OTTAWA (CP)—For the second time in a week a government commission has frowned on long-term contracts whereby an oil company grants a price discount in order to get the business of an independent gasoline dealer.

The restrictive trade practices commission, in a report made public today, said that this constitutes price discrimination unless a similar discount is given to competing dealers.

The report deals with a contract under which British American Oil Company Limited gave a discount of one cent a gallon to Mills and Hodwin Limited, an independent dealer in North Toronto.

The report said the discount, under a five - year contract which ended last Sept. 1, "resulted in a continuous discrimination in price" against Austin C. Chambers, a leasehold BA wholesaler six blocks away.

The commission said that if the special discount has been continued, it recommends court action to obtain a restraining order against BA oil.

CONSIDERS ACTION

Justice Minister Fulton, who made public the report, said in a statement he would consider whether further steps ought to be taken.

One week ago another commission report was issued dealing with a similar discount of two cents a gallon allowed by Supertest Petroleum Corporation Limited to an independent dealer in the Downsview area, a northwest suburb of Toronto.

In that case the commission came to the same conclusion that the discount constituted price discrimination.

In both cases, however, the commission rejected allegations by the justice department's combines investigation branch that price discrimination was involved in special competitive allowances granted by both oil companies during a 1959 gasoline "price war" in Toronto.

Bata Officials From 17 Lands Visit Ottawa

Climaxing four weeks of touring major industries in the U.S. and Canada 25 Bata executives from 17 different countries of the world visited Ottawa recently. Led by Thomas J. Bata, Canadian head of the world-wide Bata shoemaking enterprise, and Dr. C. K. Herz, vice-president and managing director of the Canadian operations, the group was officially welcomed in Ottawa by Mr. Lee Grills, MP, South Hastings. In a fast moving schedule they were taken to the House of Commons where they were personally greeted by Rt. Hon. John Diefenbaker, Prime Minister of Canada, Hon. George Hees, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. H. Starr, Minister of Labor. They toured the House of Commons, the Senate Chamber and were guests at a luncheon at the Rideau Club along with officials of the Department of Trade and Commerce. In a conference with officials of the Department of Trade and Commerce they studied measures by which each country could be of mutual interest to the other in sharing its technical industrial knowledge.

Speaking briefly concerning the visitors Mr. Grills voicing pride that the Canadian plant and head office of the Bata organization is in his riding, said, "These brilliant industrialists are volunteer ambassadors of goodwill for the nations they represent and we are proud to have them in Canada." Included in the party were men from North Africa, Pakistan, India, Kenya, Sudan, Indonesia, Egypt, Peru, Belgium, New Zealand, England, Jamaica and France.

Oshawa Woman Ordered to Pay Funeral Costs

TORONTO (CP)—An Oshawa woman was ordered Monday to pay funeral costs for a Toronto blacksmith with whom she had lived. The man's estate went to his legal wife from whom he was separated for nearly 20 years.

Judge H. J. M. Dooley found that Mrs. Nellie Osmok of Oshawa ordered funeral arrangements for Frederick Showdra in December, 1958, even though she had "no recognized status."

Mr. Showdra left no will and his wife, Helen Anastasia Showdra of Sudbury was made administrator of the estate. Mrs. Showdra said funeral expenses of $1,529 were inconsistent with the estimated $1,400 to $1,500 value of the estate.

Judge Dooley said Mrs. Osmok's action in ordering the funeral "was one for which she must take the responsibility." She had "no power to bind the estate." He ordered her to pay the funeral home, which instituted suit, and costs of the action.

Ontario Doctors Plan Sweeping Changes in PSI

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Medical Association Monday approved sweeping changes in the medical insurance plan it sponsors—changes that would help bridge the gap between basic medical insurance and the provincial hospital plan.

The OMA's council gave approval to Physicians' Services Incorporated to underwrite an extended health plan that would include such things as drugs, therapy, ambulance services and artificial limbs. Enrolment for council said this could come into effect by August.

In addition, PSI was asked to investigate the possibility of establishing an indemnity plan that would provide patients with a set payment to cover various types of operations and treatments. And it was also suggested that PSI try to arrange comprehensive policies for individuals. Under the existing plan only groups of four persons can be covered.

WILL GREATLY CHANGE

If all these recommendations are followed, and spokesmen said it's almost a certainty, they will bring about the greatest changes in PSI since that organization was established 20 years ago.

About 1,250,000 persons now belong to PSI and they are covered for visits to their doctor and the cost of treatment in hospitals. If they go to a specialist they usually get an extra bill for it.

To give wider coverage in this field, Dr. Cable drawn up a supplementary new fee schedule, bringing in the services of specialists. It is expected to come into effect about next January.

A spokesman said the new schedule will give the insurance companies a basis for their own comprehensive medical plans. He said the existing schedule, based on the fees of general practitioners, "is far out of date."

In other business the council decided OMA members should receive an honorarium for excessive time spent working on OMA affairs. This would be paid after the first nine days in each year.

"We maintain that this problem can be cured while we maintain our political freedom."

They were speaking in a two-day debate on a government supply motion, which opened the way for the official Opposition — the Liberal party—to air a grievance of its choice.

CRITICIZE DEPLETION

Their non - confidence motion was presented as an expression of regret that the government had "failed" to ensure sound administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act "resulting in the depletion of the financial resources of the fund and new arbitrary administrative procedures which deny benefits to casual employees."

The CCF, supporting the Liberal motion, added a rider criticizing the government's "failure to give consideration to the reimbursement of the fund from the public treasury for the excessive depletion it has suffered as a consequence of the recent abnormal unemployment."

Mr. Starr said the opposition moves were a guise "purposely designed" to permit an attack on the government's employment policy.

"In one breath they criticize and attack the government for the administration of the fund —and the resultant depletion of the fund — and in the next breath they attack the government for taking measures to restrict abuses being made of the fund.

"They cannot have it both ways. They place themselves in a directly contradictory position."

BALANCE DOWN

The debate hinged around the financial state in the fund, which stood at $185,000,000 at March 31. Four years ago, the fund was $900,000,000.

Said CCF Leader Argue:

"It is very much apparent that unless there is a tremendous improvement in employment, that additional contributory steps are taken by the government the fund will be bankrupt and non - existent in a very short while."

Replied Mr. Thrasher said the government extended seasonal benefits, broadened the categories under which they could be paid and "made the formula more generous."

He challenged the opposition group to say what measures they would retract now.

City Council Wonders Why Unbuilt School Too Small

Belleville city council would like to know the details of why a 4-roomed addition is necessary for a 10-roomed school still under construction and not to be opened until next September.

Yesterday council was asked to give tentative approval for the construction of a five-roomed school building in Parkdale at an estimated cost of $100,000, and for a six-roomed addition to the new J. Clarke School still under construction in East Belleville at an estimated cost of $120,000.

Council agreed it would have to grant the requested approval, but asked if additions were necessary before a new school was constructed.

"I've no objection if the accommodation is really needed, but it seems odd that a ten-roomed school not yet built needs a six roomed addition," asked Alderman J. Ellis.

Alderman Walter Elliott took much the same attitude, noting that new school additions had been built at King George and Prince Charles Schools, presumably to take care of pupils in the Parkdale area.

Finance committee chairman Alderman W. E. Jarvah said approval for the two school had already been received by the school board from the Department of Education.

He said his committee had not questioned the request of the board too closely, as he said it was a case of when the board said accommodation was needed the city made the necessary money available.

"Maybe we should get the full details of the matter," suggested Mayor A. M. Haig.

"The Department has already satisfied themselves," said Alderman George Wilkins.

"But we should know the details too," said Mayor Haig.

Accordingly City Manager J. R. Reynolds was asked to get the details from the school board.

Last Friday morning, Shepard sat for more than four hours in his capsule before the rocket blasted off from Cape Canaveral for his 15 - minute flight.

Flanked by his fellow astronauts and the leaders of the space program, Shepard told the story with composure and wit.

He made repeated references to what "we" had done — that is, his six fellow astronauts and the scientists and other workers who contributed to the man-in-space program.

About the only thing he declined to comment on was whether he found "any discrepancies" in what Russia's space man Maj. Yuri Gagarin reported he saw in his orbit around the earth.

Shepard said the American astronauts were so involved in their own flight plans that they hadn't time to study data on Gagarin's flight.

Shepard also said the changes he recommended as a result of his flight "were minor and very few in number and he is completely satisfied with the way the capsule behaved.

Y Women Committees Organized

Mrs. Helen Joblin, chairman of the Women Sponsors' Committee of the YMCA now building campaign, thinks her 13 ladies have one of the most interesting jobs in the effort.

From Pianist To Physician On Bell Staff

MONTREAL (CP) — Jacqueline Palement once dreamed of a career as a concert pianist, and to this end obtained a bachelor of music degree from the University of Montreal.

But today the soft - spoken brunette is a physician, and the first female one to join the regular medical staff of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada.

"There came a time when somehow I felt my music was not enough," she explained in an interview. "I wanted something more. I turned to medicine."

Jacqueline, born in Sturgeon Falls, Ont., is the daughter of a doctor. She left the San Francisco music school where she had been teaching to enrol at the University of Ottawa.

PERSONAL APPROACH

"It's the personal contact with people that is the most important thing to me," she said.

Since the majority of Bell Telephone employees are women, she finds her femininity an asset which allows her to "better understand and thus be able to help" them.

Her work includes health education as well as emergency medical treatment, pre - employment examinations, and volumtary, confidential consultations with the employees.

Asked if she has any regrets about her career as a pianist, Dr. Palement said her background in music will always be a source of great pleasure.

"But now that you mention it," she recalled with a start; "I don't even have a piano anymore."

The junior grades' art was on display and was a credit to her teaching.

In taking the word "Institute" as her subject, Mrs. Frost described it as — interest, numerous numbers of women people, toil, initiative, training, activity, truth and education, add together and you have education, she said.

Mrs. Smith concluded the program with a reading on the "Home and School."

Lunch was served by the hostess and committee, Mrs. P. Gooding, Mrs. R. Redcliffe, Mrs. Roy Veal and Mrs. J. Korim, which was enjoyed by all.

Top Canadian Ranch-Bred Mink Fur Shown in London

By CAROL KENNEDY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Canada Mink has arrived.

Under this name, the Canada Mink Breeders' Association says, it offers the cream of the ranch-bred crop.

"We are only labelling the top 50 per cent of skins as Canada Mink," said Arthur Comfort, president, Clifton Brown. "It's the finest mink that can be produced."

Introducing a sumptuous show of "summertime mink" from Canada at the Saddlers' Hall in the City of London, Brown added that Canada has a special heritage in fur production. The quality guaranteed by the new label would assure that heritage.

The collection, attended by press and buyers from Britain and the Continent, showed how far we have come from the days when a fur coat, however expensive, was just a fur coat.

Nowadays, furs are highfashion garments — bloused backs, slit sides and all—just sufficiently conservative to reassure that $1,000 worth of stole or bolero won't be dated by next season.

Nine colors were featured in 35 models, designed by 10 of London's top furriers. They ranged from natural dark mink, through sterling silver mink to 12 of the pale mutations we bred, to pure white.

As mink are also beasts of prey, Pierpont Morgan once said about yachts, if you have to ask the price of a mink, you can't afford one. Average cost of a bolero - type jacket is around $1,700.

The pianist had the last word. As the models paraded he played George Gershwin's song, But Not For Me.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Reina E. — I run a 10 - room house, two baths, and a large basement which has been made into a playroom, bath and recreation area. I also take care of our three children, aged four, two, and one. When Jess comes home at four he plays house and children are spic and span, and dinner is being prepared.

Sounds great, but for whom? The slave driver! He walks in, picks up the paper, turns on television, and expects everything at his fingertips. By 7:30 p.m. I have the dishes done, the children bathed and in bed, and I'd like to sit down and relax. But no. All evening long, it's "Get me this" or "Get me that!" And I'd get knocked to the floor if I didn't.

As to asking me out once in a while, he's "too tired."

Jesse E. — What's she kicking about? She has eight hours of her own every day to be with no one ordering her around, the way I get driven and pushed by boss and customers. Sympathy? Isn't a housewife supposed to take care of the house and children?

Sure I want things at my elbow and ready to eat when I get home. I bring my pay cheque home and it saves her the bother of the bills and works out the budget. She keeps giving me an allowance, but I'm not happy with the men." I know she hates to see me around much.

But after working hard all day, why shouldn't I relax? It's my home, too, and I'm supposed to it keep it just so.

The Council — There must be a bit of "doormat" in Regina's life if she has to "scrub" and "knocked to the floor" and comes back for more. Is this a marriage or an endurance marathon?

Low-Slow Method Of Roasting Beef

By Mary Moore

Starting backwards, yesterday I told you of a company dessert I made to please Uncle Dominic Mould. I promised to repeat the method for low-and-slow roasting of beef which was made for the same meal. The other items on the menu were Hot Vichyssoise to go with Horseradish to go with the beef, Asparagus with Hollandaise and fried undercripe Bananas. Cucumbers in sour cream. The guests' comments made me proud of this meal.

No union, as Abraham Lincoln said, can exist half-slave and half-free. The trouble with the E's is that they hold opposite views on which half is slave. So the first step in getting this derailed marriage back on the track is to help each wife live through the other's eyes. Right now they're boxed in by their own "poor-little-me" worlds.

Suppose we could wave a magic wand and say, "P's are now on, Jesse, you change places with Regina. She'll earn the living and you attend to the home and children. And you, Regina, will go forth and build the business world each day." Would these two accept? We doubt it. Not even for a week! All the more reason, then, for more appreciation and solicitude for each other, including a little apologizing.

Somewhere along the line, maybe from his own upbringing, Jesse got some cockeyed ideas as to his "rights" in marriage. Regina expected a brief him on Regina's rights, and she can't get through to him that most of that is TV set.

She may really have to get Regina's job dumped in his lap for a few days, before he realizes how tedious and lonely and demanding her 18-hour stretch can be. Evidently his imagination and feeling don't tell him. Using her own may be the only way to help him realize why her marriage is so hard for her at the sight of him at 4 p.m. Usually, a husband's return home is the time the kids and loving hug, some companionship and relaxation. But in Jesse's mind it means work, and more work! No wonder she wants one child! She doesn't come home, but goes bowling instead.

Is Regina overworking? Maybe the dust unless an essential ingredient returns — mutual respect. Let's have a love! The next move is Jesse's. How about "flooring" Regina now after dinner coffee brought to her on a tray?

On the 4th of May, the doors of Canadian United Church were opened for the meeting of the Cannifton-Corbyville W.M.S. The weathermen gave his co-operation, as it was a warm and bright spring day, a welcome relief from the cold and wet days that have persisted. The occasion was planned for this "open house" meeting with guests from 14 different churches in the surrounding area.

Mrs. Farnham played suitable organ music while the ladies were being greeted on their entrance by Mrs. Harold Pittman, president, and Mrs. Clarence Bird, vice-president.

Mrs. Putman opened the meeting by expressing her pleasure at seeing so many present.

A worship service was held, assisted by Mrs. C. Bird and Mrs. Gerald Brandon. A solo was sung by Mrs. Sutherland of Centenary during the service.

GUEST SPEAKERS

The guest speakers were the Rev. and Mrs. Cecil Smith, who were introduced by Mrs. Putman with a short resume of their background and training. Mrs. Smith, formerly Eunice Veley, comes from a well-known Bellefonte family and received her education in the high school of this district and at the age of 12 years to become a missionary but, unlike most who at that age are told they are going to do "something" over there, she stored it in mind but persevered and worked until the day eventually arrived when the dream was fulfilled and also her need for a partner and helpmate.

The Rev. and Mrs. Smith will be returning to Ecuador the end of June, and will continue their missionary work of translating the Gospels in the vast area of people who have never heard the name of Jesus Christ.

PEOPLE OF ECUADOR

Mr. Smith in most interesting talk, gave a few statistics of the Ecuador people. Called the "Switzerland" of Ecuador has a population of four million, which is divided into three sections, 20 per cent white, consisting of people of Spanish descent; another 25 per cent Indian, direct descendants of the Inca Indian tribe, and the remainder mestizo, who are of mixed blood.

Their chief fault is also their well known virtue, part of the world: 'procrastination', putting off until tomorrow what could be done today. This is one of the reasons that the missionaries have the having a hard time. Ecuador but their efforts are slowly but surely bearing fruit. This can be seen by the fact that out of 4 million the Indian field is now ministering to 3,500,000.

Churches have been established, and also churches formed and Bible schools, and Seminary Institutes have been started whereby young men of Ecuador may be trained for missionaries. Book stores, day schools, and Indian stations, are springing up, each playing a vital part in bringing Christianity to this area.

DAILY PROGRAM

A daily program of evangelism is heard over radio, in Bible camps, and at tent meetings. A few years ago everything was forbidden, but Christian teaching was decreed. Now the people come to listen and leave the tents and camps reluctantly.

"Some of them so touched by the message, that they, too, are receiving and responding to the call of missionary work in their own land.

"There is a great call for missionaries, and the mission field is so large and the workers so few."

Mr. Smith concluded his talk by asking for God's help in this great work, not only for Ecuador, but also for all those countries in need of mission work.

NATIVE COSTUME

Mrs. Smith, who was attired in native costume, spoke for a few minutes of the conception of an Indian woman who was a habitual drunkard. After the death of her only daughter, she trudged many miles daily to find solace in her deep grief.

One day she endured the mission and found comfort in the words of Jesus Christ. These words so altered her life that she gave up drinking and today sits at the door of the clinic and spreads the gospel in her own native tongue to all who come.

The women of Ecuador are thrifty as was seen by the explanation of the native dress, each garment serving a dual purpose. The blouse is made of fine linen, usually pleated enough to serve as a slip and has hand-embroidered neck and short puff sleeves. The skirt is of heavy black wool which is then wrapped around the waist and held up by two tight belts, a narrow one of gaily colored and embroidered material and a very wide belt of the same material. This is called a "jala". The shawl is of blue material and can be used for carrying most anything from a baby to vegetables or wheat-hays.

The final items are the headgear. These consist of a black square which goes over the head.

Also a black beret, which is held by a simple belt on the side of the head. On top of this goes the hat, and what a hat it is shaped like a panama hat and is made of pounded wool an is very hard and heavy.

USED AS A WEAPON

This again serves two purposes, one protection from the weather and the other to use as a battering ram if protection of a different sort is needed. The hat provides a weapon which will fell develop which quite frequently does!

The men's hats are made of the same material although in a different shape but they also have a belt and a jala and a hat.

The men's hats are made of the same material although in a different shape but they also have a belt and a jala and a hat.

The final Furmidge, Sr., tendered a vote of thanks to the speakers and expressed the wish them "God-Speed" in their future endeavors.

Mrs. B. Foster and Mrs. Sills, Plainfield, sang a duet with Mrs. Foster playing the piano accompaniment.

Following the benediction by the Rev. J. Furmidge, the ladies were invited by Mrs. Putman to partake of a cup of tea and refreshments in the Sunday School room where a social half hour was spent.

SOUVENIRS SHOWN

Great interest was shown in the souvenirs from Ecuador, which the Mr. and Mrs. Smith had collected on their travels and which were on display downstairs.

The members of the Cannifton-Corbyville W.M.S. the president Mrs. Putman voiced her thanks and appreciation for such a fine "open house".

QUESTION BOX

Question — I have been invited to a formal dinner dance, and the invitation says "Formal Attire." Since we are getting away from the old floor-length gowns, just what do you consider appropriate? I would have two friends who are wearing so-called ankle-length cocktail dresses. May such a dress be worn if the length is just below the knee? — Miss K., Hackensack, N. J.

Answer — I do not agree with you that we are getting away from old floor-length gowns.? I still believe they should be worn for the very formal function. However, age of us enter into the situation. A young woman may correctly wear a Sheriea or long cocktail evening gown (the latter you would certainly never wear for cocktails!) to a semi-formal evening party. The older, mature woman should stick to the ankle length or floor length gown. She presents a more dignified appearance, and nothing is more graceful than the long, sweeping lines of a well-fitted formal or party dress. Above all, regardless of age, never wear a gown that is just below the knee for the formal evening function. Nothing could be more out of place.

Question — My husband and I are separated. Our son, who makes his home with me, is to be married in June. The girl he wants a big church wedding and reception. How would my son's name be included on the wedding invitation? His father and I not being together would it difficult to include our names. What do you suggest? — Mrs. B. W., Baltimore, Md.

Answer —. You have nothing to worry about. The parents of the bridegroom are not mentioned on the usual wedding invitation. The customary wording is as follows "Mr. and Mrs. John William Doe request the honor of your presence at the marriage of their daughter, Mary Jane, to Mr. Robert John Brown, on such and such a date etc."

Question — I am in doubt as to the obligations of the parents of a bridegroom. I have four sons, and feel that I had better consult your authority. Some weddings are coming up in the fairly near future. May I also request a copy of your booklet on your articles. — Mrs. J. G., Baltimore, Md.

Answer — Thanks for your kind words! I would suggest purchasing an etiquette book in which full particulars are given with regard to all wedding procedures. In my book, titled "Modern Manners," you will find a complete section relative to the bridegroom's part in his wedding, ranging from his financial responsibilities to what he should wear.

LOW-SLOW METHOD OF ROASTING BEEF:

My roast was rolled prime rib, which weighed 4 pounds on the scale. I asked the butcher to have it prepared a week and then kept it six more days in my refrigerator. It was then about 20 days. The age and quality of the beef is important. Rub with pepper, then 1 teaspoon allspice, 1-4 teaspoon garlic powder, 1-2 teaspoon dry mustard, 1 teaspoon paprika, 1 teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon brown sugar. I rubbed this well into all surfaces of the meat. I placed it on a small trivet in a small roasting pan (no water, no cover) and put it in the oven at 1:200 p.m. for dinner at 7:30 p.m. with the temperature 1 to 300 deg. Fahr. At 4:30 I reduced the temperature to 175 deg. Fahr. The roast was well browned. I sprinkled flour on the inside and fork-tender. If you do not want your beef that rare, cook it to 180 deg. Fahr. for the full 8 1-2 hours but in the same oven at the same time. There is no shrinkage. This amount serves eight.

This low-slow roasting beef is highly recommended for those who enjoy beef that makes lovers of rare beef ecstatic 2) there is no shrinkage which makes the bottom 2-3 of any is leftover it may be wrapped in foil and frozen for 1 hour at 200 deg. Fahr. for another meal of hot roast beef 4) the juices in the meat are all retained. The beef you have is juicy and delicious and roasted is never dry and hard.

You can try it with a standing rib like mine, or with a rolled Porterhouse. If your butcher doesn't cure it, 10 pounds you will have to adjust the timing. If it weighs 5 1-2 lbs., increase by 1 hour.

See tomorrow for the Vichyssoise, Horseradish and Cucumbers in Sour Cream mentioned above.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Tell Boy He's Adopted?

DEAR DORIS:—I do hope you can help me. My daughter was in the old country during the war. After the war was over I brought her back to Canada with a lovely child, a boy, then nearly three years old. Her eldest sister adopted him. The judge never changed the birth certificate and now the lawyer says they cannot do anything about it with the boy in Canada.

The boy is 17 years old and my eldest daughter is worried about it as the boy has never been told. He calls his real mother Auntie. Hoping you can help.—GRANDMOTHER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR GRANDMOTHER:—Whatever legal agreement might be set down, the actual facts about the birth will always be on record in England. Sooner or later your grandson will be likely to need a record of his birth—for official business such as insurance which requires proof of age. When he does he will discover the truth about himself.

It is much better for him to be told about it first, by someone who loves him. His adoptive mother is the one to do this, some time between now and his 21st birthday. She could point out that you all loved him so much you wanted to make him one of the family, and still give him the two parents which all boys need.

She might tell him that if he had grown up with his own mother, in her unmarried state, people would have talked about him and made him unhappy. That this is a secret not to be divulged to anyone outside the family.

This will be a shock, but if it is handled carefully and lovingly it will be something he can gradually accept. It can even be a means of bringing you all closer together.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—Do you think a man should marry again when he has a grown-up family? My mother died six years ago. I'm 19 now and my father has been taking out a widow who is a little older than he is (53).

Now he has told us that he wants to marry her. I just can't see it. My mother was the finest woman on earth. How can he do this to her memory and to us kids?—JOSIE.

DEAR JOSIE:—Your loyalty to your mother is understandable, but she is not on earth now. It's poor consolation to your dad to live with a memory for his only company. Has it occured to you that he pays a compliment to your mother when he wants to be married again? Being married was a success, as far as he is concerned!

You have your own life to live. You cannot provide him with more than temporary and occasional companionship. He has many years ahead. Think about his happiness and welcome this new member into your family.

DEAR DORIS:—I am 12 years of age. I am fat and people kid me about my weight. I am 33½ inches around my waist. I was hoping that you could help me lose weight. This is the first time I have ever written to you.—MARIE M.

DEAR MARIE M.:—Good for you for wanting to do something about your weight. And there is something you can do about it. Unless you have some sickness that causes the extra weight, your weight is closely related to what you eat. Calories count.

Get your mother to take you to the doctor for a check-up. Then he will guide you to a weight-losing routine. Your own determination to stick with it will do the rest. For a calorie chart and other information about losing weight, writer to Mary Moore, care of this newspaper.

• • •

DEAR DORIS:—We have my old mother and father living with us. The trouble is, my father is senile and really out of his mind some of the time.

Both my husband and I go out to work and my father is too hard for my mother to manage. He is inconsistent and he gets real rough with her. The other day he pushed her over and she hit her head on the bathtub.

My mother is 79, has high blood pressure and heart trouble. The doctor says she can't stand all the strain of looking after him but she is terribly loyal and cannot face any change. What can you suggest?—NELLY.

DEAR NELLY:—"The spirit indeed is willing but the flesh is weak!"

An institution or nursing home is practically a must in such cases. The first thing is to find out what resources exist near you. When you have found a suitable place, talk with the director so that you can tell your mother all about it. This will help her to consider the idea.

The say should not all be up to her. She is responsible to you as the person who will be taking care of her, whether she is sick or well. Show her this and point out that the place you suggest will be the best thing for your father too.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: A barrier to fever every day, vitamins against tooth decay, spring cleaning and a common poison.

THEY GIVE YOU FEVER

Your liver may stand between you and fever every day.

Run by - products of the body's use of hormones have been shown to produce fever in the human body, says University of Chicago scientists.

However in the liver these hormone by-products are neutralized so far as their fever-making capabilities are concerned.

VITAMINS FOR TEETH

Vitamin D6 appears to reduce tooth decay.

The vitamin, called puridoxine, can be used practically by both children and adults, say researchers from the State University of New York.

Pregnant women, who frequently are deficient in the vitamin, also show an increase in the bacteria which causes tooth decay. Perhaps this can be reversed by administration of the vitamin, doctors suggest.

SPRING CLEANING

Check the expiration dates on drugs, and throw away the old ones. Throw away medicines that have changed in color, consistency or have become cloudy.

Make sure all bottles are tightly sealed. Put the hazardous substances and drugs well out of children's reach.

A COMMON POISON

Table salt can be a fatal poison. And it can cause brain damage in non-fatal doses, a Baltimore pediatrician reports.

Salt poisoning is generally rare. But the symptoms of such poisoning can be confusing unless the doctor knows the child has swallowed too much salt.

YOUNG AT HEART

Under the age of 25, only five men in every 1,000 persons have heart trouble, a U.S. national health survey indicates.

But for the 45-54 age group, the heart trouble rate jumps to 20 per 1,000 and continues to climb until it hits its peak for the ages of 65 to 74, when the rate is 140 per 1,000.

VACANCY ON H.S. STAFF

TWEED — It is expected that there will be only one vacancy on Tweed High School staff to be filled, due to resignation. Mrs. Marion Gray, who has been teaching History and English for the past two years, has accepted a post on the staff of Moira Secondary School in Belleville. She will be replaced—by Mr. Rolland Michaud, who has been teaching at Alexandria High School for the past two years.

Due to the expected increased enrolment next term (an anticipated 425, about 25 more than the present total), it will be necessary to add another teacher to the staff in September, bringing the number of teachers to 15.

According to W. R. Hamilton, principal, the Tweed School has the highest pupil-teacher ratio in the area.

Final examinations for Grade 9 and Grade 10 will begin during the week of June 12: for grades 11 and 12, the week of June 5th, and for Grade 13, on June 12.

The Upper School class includes 22 students taking the full course, while seven are taking be writing one or more subjects.

Tweed Salvation Army Band, under the leadership of C.S.M. Archie Sinclair, was heard at the citadel in Canaanoque last Saturday night. The local corps bands, with 12 members, rendered a fine program of instrumental duets, marches and selections. C.S.M. Sinclair remained in Canaanoque on Sunday where he conducted services, which marked the start of the Red Shield Campaign in that community.

Magistrates Voice Approval Of Probation

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Magistrates Association at its annual meeting Saturday praised the province's probation system as an effective and humanitarian deterrent to crime.

Chamber of Commerce Head Was Former RCMP Officer

By FORBES RHUDE
Canadian Press Business Editor

He has been successively a morse operator, a constable in the RCMP, a wing commander in the RCAF, and once had a brief fling as a child actor in a motion picture.

Even his marriage was unusual. As a Mountie he "got his girl" by first meeting her when she was a tourist in Whitehorse, Yukon, and then, helped by his postings, "pursuing" her across the continent until they were married in Ottawa.

The girl was Mary Jacqueline Aberg of St. Paul, Minn., and they were wed in 1940. They have two children.

Mr. Atherton was born in 1907 in Sandon, B.C., now a ghost town in the Kootenays but then a "gold rush false front and tent town" of 10,000.

MOVED TO CALGARY

His father, John Joseph Atherton, had come to Canada from England and Ireland at Sandon while following a career of founding weekly newspapers in the Kootenays.

Next move was to Creston, B.C., and in 1914 the family went to Calgary where the father joined The Herald.

In 1926 Ted went to work with Canadian Pacific Telegraphs in Kelowna, B.C., where the family had moved, and he later got a job there as telegraph operator with Canadian National.

In 1928 he went to the stock brokerage firm of C. M. Oliver and Company in Vancouver, marking the quotation board direct from his morse sounder, a job he was doing the day of the 1929 market crash.

"I can still see the horror-stricken faces of clients as I marked prices down - down - down," he recalled.

RIOTS IN REGINA

Then came the "lean years." In 1933 he joined the RCMP at Regina and the next six years saw him on duty Ottawa and Vancouver, Victoria and Whitehorse, serving with investigations, intelligence and counter-felling and drug squads.

He was with the RCMP in Regina July 1, 1935, when the unemployed rioted. Recalling the bitter conflict, in which a Regina policeman was killed and about 100 persons injured, he says:

"We were lined up on the market square in uniform, carrying sidearms and wearing Stetson hats. Crowds gathered and after a while truckloads of stones and bricks were dumped in the square.

"Shortly afterwards we were pelted with them. We stood in line and took a pasting. I was proud of RCMP discipline, for although many of us were hurt, some badly, not a man reacted adversely. I think that in the end our discipline had a marked effect on the crowd."

JOINED RCAF

With the outbreak of war he went to Ottawa and was posted to assist the RCAF in its security program and, in 1940, he joined the air force with the rank of Flying Officer. His subsequent RCAF career included the following:

Formed first counter-subversive section; appointed chief investigating officer with Provost and Security services after successive promotions became Wing-Commander in 1943; in 1945 became Assistant Provost Marshal, Western Air Command, Vancouver; in 1946 appointed Provost Marshal of RCAF, Ottawa; in 1951 founded the Directorate of Air Force Security and became its first director; also formed Canadian Armed Services Identification Bureau; in 1953 went to France as commanding officer of RCAF support unit at Metz; in 1956 posted to Trenton, Ont., as Chief Administrative Officer of the air station there; in April, 1958, retired from RCAF.

He joined the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in Toronto in 1959 as Ontario representative of the membership division, and took his present position as manager of the Ontario chamber last Dec. 1.

SWITCH WAS SMOOTH

Of the change from service to civilian life, Mr. Atherton will be says:

"Practically all my life I have been organizing and now I find I am doing much the same thing, using only a different language."

One of his recent organization jobs has been to get ready for the Ontario Chamber's annual meeting in Windsor May 10-12.

His father and mother died in Vancouver in the mid-1950's, each at the age of 85, after celebrating in 1953, their 60th wedding anniversary. Of 11 children, others surviving are:

Alderman Reginald Atherton and Frank Atherton, both in Vancouver; inspector Joseph Atherton of the RCMP, Regina; Winifred, now Mrs. W. L. Watt, Kelowna; and Marjorie, now Mrs. C. S. Rees, Kelowna.

HEADS CHAMBER

Edmund Theodore (Ted) Atherton became manager of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce in December, 1960. A native of Sandon, B.C., he was a morse operator and RCMP constable before joining the RCAF in 1940. He retired from the air force in 1958 and joined the Canadian Chamber of Commerce in Toronto the following year. (CP Photo).

Angry Kenya Settlers Seek More Protection

NAIROBI (Reuters) — Two hundred angry white Kenya settlers at some with pistols in their belts—voted Sunday night to send a delegation to London to protest inadequate police protection following the murder of a white housewife by a Negro gang.

The housewife — Norah Osborne — was bludgeoned and stabbed to death early Saturday morning by six Negroes in an attack in which her husband was beaten unconscious.

The husband — Scottish-born David Osborne—has claimed the raid on their "White Highlands" home was a vengeance attack by Mau Mau terrorists.

Sunday's settler meeting demanded government compensation for the Osborne family and "immediate practical security measures to deal with a very serious situation."

Osborne said from his hospital bed that he feigned death when the Negro band entered his house and bludgeoned him and his wife with clubs.

Income Tax Explained

Written and designed for the taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. Miller
former Supervising Assessor
Income Tax Dept.

Each year there are a large number of taxpayers who are not residing with their spouses and cannot determine their status for taxation purposes.

The income tax department must determine from the information supplied on the return as to whether the taxpayer is legally separated from the spouse. In the majority of cases the information is so meager that the taxpayer must be consulted before a decision can be reached.

A taxpayer is legally separated when there exists a written separation agreement signed and witnessed by both husband and wife. A court order to pay so much money periodically for the support of the wife and children is also recognized as a legal separation. If the taxpayer is living apart from his wife while divorce proceedings are pending, is also classed as a legal separation, providing the action for the divorce has been instituted. If divorce action has not been started but only contemplated and there is no other court order in regard to support, then it is not a legal separation. The department will then treat the taxpayer as only living apart from the spouse.

Living apart by mutual consent or the desertion by either one will be treated by the income tax department according to the facts that pertain to each individual case. If you are a separated person and wish your return to be given prompt action by the tax department you should write all details on a separate sheet of paper, giving the date the separation was effected, names of the children, who they reside with and any other pertainent information.

* * *

Question? — My husband and I have agreed to live apart. I have a girl age four with me and my husband has a boy age ten with him. My husband does not contribute to my support. Are we considered to be legally separated?

Answer: — No. As your living apart is only by mutual agreement, you are not classed as legally separated.

Question?— My wife deserted me and I do not know her whereabouts; she has been gone for six years. I support my two children. Am I treating as a legally separated person?

Answer: — Yes. You would be treated as legally separated for exemption purposes.

"Before this verbal war between Hard-Hittin' Harvey McFarland of Picton and Loot-Lovin' Lou Schoenith of Detroit reaches the shootin' stage," said the crazy-faced customer, "let me tell you somethin'."

"Both of these fellows are what the Cuban Castros call cloudbursts. They're way up in the air but not quite out of the world, although if Harvey gets mad enough he'll go into orbit.

"This international speedboat classic, the Harmsworth, has brought both Picton and Detroit lots of publicity, and by the looks of recent happenings there's more to come. And I notice where you brought in the America's Cup event in one of your columns."

He waggled a gnarled forefinger. "Don't let these Picton fellers tell you they were the first to get world publicity recognition on international water racing. No strive. We had it here in Belleville quite a spell before the turn of the century."

Things were quiet in the newsroom, what with city editor Claude Tice trout-hunting in the Opeongo and his argumentative pasty, our No. 2, in the throes of pre-marital dreams. The diversion was welcome.

"Did you know," his voice was shaky with excitement, "that Canada once had an entry in the America's Cup races?"

I admitted that I did not have that pleasure, then he let me have both barrels.

"Well, she did. And furthermore the boat, a sloop, was built right here in Belleville by Belleville shipwrights and sailed by a Belleville crew.

He waited for that to sink in, then brought in the reserve artillery. "We didn't win the America's Cup, but we won the Fisher Cup what was the fresh-water equivalent of the America trophy.

"The sloop was called the "Atalanta," he said and was built from North Hastings timber cut from logs hauled down the Moira."

That was in 1861 and the man who built "Atalanta" was named Builder Cuthbert. He built the sloop for two Belleville men, J. J. B. Flint and C. F. Holton. The boat was built at the former Carthage iron works, where the Reliance Company operated during the war. Memory: What Holton operated a nearby sawmill.

"The sloop was narrowly finished when the owners challenged for the Aeneken's Cup. Mr. Cuthbert was the captain and the crew took her to New York. They had to load one side of her with iron ore to get her through the Erie Canal.

"My father told me they made a fair showing for the Americas, but later were ruled out because all American Cup entries had to be of salt water origin," the man said.

"In 1882 the Atalanta challenged for the Fisher Cup and the fresh water yaching championship. Captain Cuthbert and crew of Henry Covert, William Hazlett, Joe Lambert, Ed Ostlen and William Rogers with Mr. Holton aboard took her to Chicago.

It took them three weeks to get there via Lake Ontario, the Welland Canal, Lake Erie, St. Clair River, Lake Huron, through the Straits of Mackinaw to Lake Michigan and Chicago.

"The Atalanta met the fleen of Toronto, Cara and Wasp of Chicago over a ten-mile course in windward and back. She broke a spreader and lost the race but later won a match-race from Cara, and the Fisher Trophy and $500."

"Later," he said, "Atalanta lost a challenge race to a Belleville yacht 'Nora,' but won it back again only to finally lose it to a Rochester sloop, the Onward."

He started to leave. His parting shot was, "Let those hydroplane fellows blow their world publicity horns, but don't forget we have a rusty old trombone over here we can dig out and toot, if we want to."

Jensen Hits 'Return' Homer

If anyone had any doubts about just why Dick Farrell was the relief man all the big clubs wanted, give a look to what he's done for Los Angeles in that National League race since the Dodgers got him from Philadelphia last Thursday:

The Dodgers have won three of four in a move from fourth to third in that time, and the fire - balling righthander has saved one of those victories and collected another with a string of seven scoreless innings.

Farrell picked up his third victory of the season, first for the Dodgers, with four innings of four-hit, shutout relief against his old mates for a 4-3, 10-inning decision at Philadelphia Monday night.

BEAT BOSTON

In the only American League game scheduled, the Los Angeles Angels won their third in a row with a 5-3 decision over Boston despite a home run by Jackie Jensen, who once more returned to the Red Sox.

The Dodgers were shut out on four hits by Dallas Green for six innings, then tied it 3-all with two outs in the seventh on a scoring single by Duke Wills and a two - run homer by Willie Davis. They finally put it away when Ike Delock, third of seven Phillies who now have lost seven in a row, yielded all their runs in the fifth, capped by John Callison's two-run double.

The Angels barely saved their victory over the Red Sox with a two-man relief job by Ted Bowsfield and Tom Morgan. Bowsfield followed starter Ken Mc-Bride into the game with one out in the fifth inning, then retired the first batter he faced to preserve a 3-2 lead.

Morgan came up an RBI double by pinch - hitter Carroll Hardy for the final run, but then retired seven of the last eight batters he faced.

Great Desire to Play
Repentant Jackie Back With Sox

By CHARLES MAHER
Associated Press Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jackie Jensen has been retired twice now, and at least three Los Angeles pitchers would like to know how he did it.

They couldn't even retire him once Monday night, when the big, repentant outfielder rejoined the Boston Red Sox and gave a dramatic demonstration of why they missed him.

The Angels beat the Red Sox 5-3, but it wasn't Jenzen's fault. He walked his first two times up—scoring a run the second time—and hit his first homer of the season when he came up again in the seventh. He got a single in the next inning as Jensen also made a spectacular play on defense, sprinting to the right-field fence in the fifth to grab a line drive by Albie Pearson.

"Too bad the club couldn't win," Jensen said, but it's a good just to be back in there playing with the club.

WON'T TALK

Jensen, who walked out on the Red Sox last week without talking anyone, declined to discuss his decision to return. Instead, he issued a prepared four-line statement distributed to reporters.

It made a very hasty decision last week when I left the club in Cleveland," the style of which was very brief, "I've already told (manager) Mike Higgins my regret not only that decision but the manner in which I left the team.

"I handled it badly and I've apologized to Mike and to the club.

"My greatest desire right now is to play baseball and help the Red Sox, so I hope this is a closed incident."

HIGGINS HAPPY

Higgins also wanted to drop the matter. Everything's all right," Mike said. "I'm happy he's back and there's about all that will be said."

Arthur Ellen, a hypnotist who has tried unsuccessfully to lessen's distaste for flying, was in the stands Monday night with Jackie's wife, Zoe Ann. Ellen said he was there only as a spectator. "Jackie wanted to see the game—and Jackie in it," he said.

Jensen — the American League's most valuable player in 1958—left the club in Cleveland after playing only a dozen games this season. He had only 6 hits in 46 at bats, was hitting .130.

"I've had it," he told a reporter on his way home. "I know when my chances are gone. I'm not going to be any 250- man on the ball club."

This was the reason he gave he quit the Sox. He first announced his retirement several months after the 1959 season, saying he wanted to devote more time to his family and business interests. He stayed out of the game in 1960 and rejoined the Red Sox this spring.

Ole Arch Works Out

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP)—Archie Moore, of San Diego, Calif., a former world champion heavyweight boxer, was scheduled to his battle with the scales, fought a four - round, no - decision exhibition bout Monday night with Dave Furch of Phoenix.

Archie was appearing in the first of a series of tuneup bouts leading to his world heavyweight title defence June 10 in New York against Giulio Rinaldi of Italy.

Moore, who must weight no more than 175 pounds to defend his crown, went 186½ Monday night. Furch weigh 186.

The champion appeared sharp. He blocked most of Furch's punches and landed his own where and when he pleased.

AHL Honors Bob McCord

NEW YORK (CP)—Bob McCord of the champion Springfield Indians has been named the American Hockey League's outstanding defenceman for the 1960-61 season, it was announced today.

The 180-pound native of Timmins, Ont., received 23 of a possible 25 points in balloting by sports writers and sportscasters in each of the seven league cities.

McCord, 27, will receive the Eddie Shore Plaque. Shore, former star rearguard for Boston Bruins of the National League, owns the Indians.

Allan Gukdolia was second to McCord with 16 points. Others named in the voting were Steve Kraftcheck of Rochester Americans, eight points; Jim Morrison of Buffalo Bisons, six; Howie Yanosik, Hershey Bears, five; Ian Cushenan, Springfield, Mass., and Larry Zeidel, Rochester, two.

McCord joined the Indians in the 1954-55 campaign and later spent parts of two seasons with Shawi Riviéres in the old Quebec League.

O'KEEFE EXTRA OLD STOCK ALE IS BACK

Yankees, L.A. Deal

Ryne Duren, Bob Cerv Swap Shirts

KANSAS CITY (AP) — New York Yankees, who open a two-game series here tonight, have been bolstered in two departments by a trade with Los Angeles Angels. It was a deal in which the Angels gambled on Ryne Duren and "youth."

The Bronx Bombers, hard up for late - inning relief pitching and right - handed punch hitting, got pitcher Truman Clevenger and slugger Bob Cerv. In return they gave the Angels Duren, a hard - throwing but often erratic relief pitcher; pitcher Johnny James; outfielder Leroy Thomas; and an unnamed outfielder.

"We wanted Clevenger," said Yankee manager Ralph Houk, "to be a finisher on our relief staff. (Luis) Arroyo has been doing all of the late - inning work and we needed someone to help him."

Clevenger, a 26 - year - old righthander, has pitched super-brilliantly in relief for the Angels, appearing in 12 games and permitting an average of less than two earned runs. He has a 3-1 record.

HAD BEEN ACE

Duren, 31, one of the hardest throwing pitchers in the majors, was the Yankees' ace reliever in 1958 and 1959, when he posted ERA's of 2.01 and 1.87. He's been ineffective this year, but said Angels Gen. Mgr. Fred Haney in Los Angeles:

"I think Duren will be a better pitcher for us over the long haul than Clevenger. I didn't want to peddle Clevenger and tried two or three other guys in there, but I couldn't make a deal that way. I'll be panned on a deal, but I don't give a damn who wins the pennant this year if we can't."

The Angels' field manager, Bill Rigney, said he too was reluctant to see Clevenger go, but added:

"Remember, we got two young players and we are trying to build. . . . You have to build with youth. Some clubs, such as Kansas City, went for mature players and it didn't pay off. Baltimore went for youngsters, and it is paying off."

Thomas, who bats lefthanded and throws right, hit .246 for Richmond of the International League last season. In two times at bat for the Yankees this season he had one hit.

WON FIVE

James, a righthander, posted a 4.40 ERA with New York last year, winning five games and losing one. He also won three and lost two for Richmond.

This will be the veteran Cerv's third stretch with the Yankees, interspersed by tours with Kansas City and the Angels. He had his best season in 1958, when he hit .302 for Kansas City, driving in 104 runs and hitting 38 homers. He appeared in 18 games for Los Angeles, but was hitting only about .200.

Cerv, 34, went to the Angels from New York last year in the special player draft held to stock the Angels and the American League's other new entry, the new Washington Senators. The Yankees previously reclaimed another player drafted by Los Angeles — pitcher Duke Maas.

RUSSIA TAKES CROWN

BELGRADE (AP) — Russia won the European basketball championship Monday night, beating Yugoslavia 60-53. Russia and the Yugoslavian team both were unbeaten entering the final game.

New York Club Called The "Mets"

NEW YORK (AP) — After many months of life as a nameless unit, the New York team in the National League Monday was officially christened the Mets.

Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, majority stockholder of the club which will start play in 1962, said the final choice was made after 9,613 persons had suggested 644 names.

GET FINE PAYOFF

PORTLAND, Ore. (CP) — Members of the Western Hockey League champion Portland Buckaroos have received $1,500 each, the largest payoff in league history. The money is the players' share of the gate receipts. A record was established because some of the series was played in Portland's new 10,000-seat coliseum, filled or almost filled for the games against Seattle Totems.

100-Pound Giant Pike In Lake?

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Manitoba government says a provincial lake may harbor a giant northern pike weighing more than 100 pounds.

The big fish has been sighted by anglers in Silver Beach Lake 12 miles east of Russell near the Saskatchewan border.

The fish would be more than twice the weight of the world record northern caught in Saskadagas reservoir in New York in 1940 which weighed 46 pounds, two ounces.

The weight of the Silver Beach fish was calculated on the basis of a length of 7½ feet, an estimate provided by anglers who claim they have seen it.

Italian Ready for Ole Archie

NEW YORK (AP)—Giulio Rinaldi arrived by boat from Italy Monday feeling great and expressing confidence that he will beat and perhaps knock out Archie Moore in their light heavyweight title fight in New York June 19.

"I will try to knock him out," said the swarthy, dark - haired Italian 175-pound champion at a press luncheon. "I beat him before and I feel I can do it again. After all, I am much younger than he is."

Crowns Greatest Season

Boomer Wins Hart Trophy

MONTREAL (CP) — Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, Montreal Canadiens hard - shooting right wing, today was named winner of the Hart Trophy awarded annually to the National Hockey League player adjudged the most valuable to his team.

The achievement crowned Geoffrion's greatest season in big-time and, carrying with it an automobile and $1,000, boosted his prize money for individual performance in the 1960-61 campaign to $5,000.

He also won his second scoring title and was named to the NHL's all - star right wing for the first time after 11 years of playing in the shadow of Montreal's illustrious teammate Maurice Richard and of Detroit Red Wings' Gordie Howe, five - time winner of the Hart Trophy.

The point total of 18 hockey writers and broadcasters in the six NHL cities gave Geoffrion 84 of a possible 180 points. Goalie Johnny Bower of Toronto Maple Leafs received 31 and Howe, last year's winner, 26.

LED TEEMS BACK

Geoffrion shifted into high gear on his return to the lineup after a mid - season injury and led the Canadiens to another back into first place by a narrow margin over Chicago and determined Toronto club.

He scored 50 goals to equal the record set by Richard in 1944-45 and boost his career total to 264, second highest in team history to Rocket Richard's 324. Added to this were 45 assists, giving him a five - point edge over marginal Jean Beliveau in the scoring race.

Geoffrion has family connections with the most valuable players. His father-in-law, the late Howie Morenz, won the first Hart Trophy three times during his brilliant career with Canadiens in the 1920s and 1930s.

In his rookie season, 1951-52 with Montreal, Geoffrion split honors with Calder Memorial Trophy as the best newcomer.

Nab Men Having Gun In Park

FORT FRANCES (CP)—Three Minnesota men, fishing beside an aircraft on Quatico Lake in Quetico Provincial Park March 7, were surprised when a second aircraft landed nearby.

The men were charged with breaches of three regulations after the newly-arrived pilot, on patrol for the department of lands and forests, investigated the fishing expedition and found a gun in the aircraft.

James Valentine, 38, and Floyd Arnold, 29, both of International Falls, Minn., later appeared in court and were fined $50 each for having a firearm in a provincial park. Valentine was fined $25 for landing an aircraft at Quetico.

In charge of using live ammunition was withdrawn.

The case was investigated in this week's edition of the news release from the department of lands and forests.

The Game and Fisheries Act forbids possession of a firearm in a provincial park. The Provincial Parks Act and regulations make it illegal to land an aircraft in Quetico Park, except at an airport licensed under the Federal Aeronautics Act.

Tigers' Cash Paying Off

NEW YORK (AP)—Detroit's surprising rush to the front in the American League pennant race cannot be attributed to any one player. But the batting contribution of Norm Cash has been like money in the bank.

Cash has been the big MIM hoarded his season total to 22, includes such hefty hitters as Rocky Colavito and Al Kaline. The 26-year-old first baseman has driven in at least one run in each of Detroit's last five games and the Tigers won them all to run their victory string to six.

In all, Cash sent nine runners across the plate last week. This boosted his season total to 22, one fewer than league leader Mickey Mantle of New York Yankees.

Cash also had 10 hits in 26 tries, lifting his average 60 points to .342 and took over fifth place in the batting competition. Among his 25 hits are Cash has three doubles, one triple and two homers.

NOT WORRIED

Twenty-two games in the next 20 days will be the high-flying Tigers as opportunity to prove they belong in first place and not merely a flash in the pan. Cash is not worried about the road club.

"If the 26 games, 16 will be played on the road. The Tigers, leading the league by 2½ percentage points, cities our their longest road trip of the season.

"The boys are playing the same brand of baseball on the road as they are at home," said Schelling Monday ag the Tigers enjoyed a day off after winning six of nine on a week's road trip. "They're playing consistently sound baseball in every respect."

The manager still is avoiding any predictions about his club but he does say he thinks the White Sox can avoid a long slump.

"If one or two guys were carrying us, then we might be in trouble," he added. But everyone is playing well."

The Trots

Producer Says 'Cleopatra' One of All-Time Great Films

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — If all goes well, Cleopatra's barge may still be floating down the Nile late this year.

This week, about 2,000 years after it sailed with the original crew and one year after it was supposed to bear the latest Cleopatra, Elizabeth Taylor.

They're preparing the delayed launching at 20th Century-Fox, where new hopes are mounted by the film's mishaps so far—the replacement of a director, the building over of a script, and ceiling of shooting after bad weather in England and Miss Taylor's near-fatal illness.

Least daunted is producer Walter Wanger, despite the loss of $5,000,000 before the movie started.

"With the world-wide publicity for Cleopatra and with the best efforts of everyone involved in the making of the picture, Wanger says.

CLAMOR FOR LIZ

"No one has ever had the attention of the world that Liz Taylor has. I made a picture with Greta Garbo, another with Ingrid Bergman at her height. Neither of them matched the clamor that now exists for Liz.

"I was in London during her illness and I saw the amazing reaction. Crowds stood outside the hospital. She got messages from Russia. She was told 60,000 workers at a Boeing plant were praying for her. The send from crews of battleships.

"It isn't any wonder why I fought the insurance companies that wanted her replaced so the film could go on. That's when I coined the remark, 'No Liz, No Cleo.'"

Wanger said the shooting will resume in late August and Miss Taylor will be ready. "But it can't be before that because she must have plastic surgery to cover her neck scar, and her leg is not recovered yet."

NEW HOST

Bill Cullen, TV quiz-master, will replace Arthur Godfrey in the fall as host of the Candid Camera on the CBS television network.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Chops On owned by Gus Sarylie, of Victoria Regina, owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Taylor, Monday won the two divisions of the Star Shoot Stakes as the Toronto racing season got under Old Woodbine. Each division paid four a purse of more than $6,000.

Despite threatening weather, a crowd of 10,564 was a record for a week-day opening of an Ontario track. The purse was $2,200 above Old Woodbine's 1960 opening-day attendance.

For quite a handful of money in the second division was impressive. It ran the seven furlongs in 1:26 over a slow track. She defeated Sally Molly by three-quarters of a length. The early pacemaker, Mabel Dirt, finished third.

Victoria Regina paid $8, $8.80 and $2.10.

Chops On paid $13.80, $5 and $3.80 as she ran the seven furlongs in 1:26.4.

Jockey Avelino Gomez, out of the saddle for a month after the Fort Erie meeting, returned to duty Monday and won the first race on the card, Dividend. When Nirisso won the second race, he combined with Divided for a daily double of $65.40.

The quinella of Cloud Kid and Trying Hard in the fifth race paid $24.60.

NEW YORK (AP) — Culver Pick, racing for only the second time this season and rated no better than 5-1 in the morning line, Monday drew No. 1 position for Thursday's $82,800 Good Time Pace at Yonkers Raceway.

Bye Bye Bird of the United States drew No. 2 position. Bye Bye Bird, to be driven by Clint Hodgins of Clandeboye, Ont., was picked as the 8-to-5 favorite.

Modest, Witty Astronaut Emerges as TV Celebrity

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Astronaut Alan Shepard has emerged as the first big new TV star of the year. At a televised press conference Monday he was modest, quick-witted and showed a sense of humor.

The navy test pilot fielded questions with a poised and easy air. He used the word "no" in discussing the flight, explains that "I am acutely aware of the hundreds who made this flight possible."

Before the questioning, Shepard—with a grin — introduced his wife, his parents, his sister and his in-laws. At intervals he referred questions to officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and to fellow astronaut Gus Grissom. He made frequent reference to his six colleagues who shared the navy's big day.

The press conference was preceded by two speeches by space agency officials that could have been dispensed with. Those in charge also permitted the one-hour session to continue too long — to 1 point where the questions were slow in coming.

NBC's interest in Shepard's progress was so great that the network postponed for a week the premier of a new western, "Whispering Smith. Instead, there was a 30-minute taped repeat of highlights of the astronaut's big day.

Former president Eisenhower will make a CBS Reports program, talking about his eight years in the White House — a decision which must have made his former press secretary, James Hagerty, now as ABC official, unhappy.

Recommended tonight.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this healing substance reducing right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very startling improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very large majority of hemorrhoid conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. This new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous research institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in use in over 1,000 hospitals clinics on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Leafs Drop Five in Row

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Toronto's Maple Leafs could wind up the No. 1 disappointment in the International Hockey League this season if they continue their present baseball ways.

Exhibiting anything but the kind of ball that won them the championship in 1960, the Maple Leafs now have lost eight of their last nine games. They suffered their fifth straight licking Monday night being bombed 9-1 by San Juan's Jets.

The loss left the Leafs skidding in seventh place. Richmond's Virginians, meanwhile inched nearer the league-leading Columbus Jets by edging Syracuse 1-0 on Bill Bethel's three-hitter.

Toronto managed to get one consolation out of its defeat by San Juan. The Leafs ended a string of 19 scoreless innings by picking up a run in the ninth on a hard single by Joe Henoch.

The Marlins' Bob Sadowski marked up his third consecutive triumph, allowing only three hits and no runs before he departed in the sixth in favor of Dean Stone, who took over with the bases loaded.

Despite Bethel's fine performance, Richmond needed an unearned run to beat the Chiefs. Bethel faced only 18 batters until Willie Miranda got the first hit off the Virginian right-hander with one out in the sixth. He walked three and struck out five.

Richmond, now trailing Columbus by only half a game, scored the game's only tally in the second. Jim Lock reached base on an error and scored after singles by George Risley and Ritchie Windle.

Farm Machine Dealers Doubt Combine Exists

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Federation of Farm Equipment Dealers said Monday it is a "most doubtful" that a price combine exists within the farm equipment manufacturing industry.

A federation brief to the Commons standing committee on agriculture, which is studying farm equipment prices, said the dealers have seen no indication of price-rigging by the major companies.

The 7,000 - word brief presented a picture of dealers caught between the rigid sales demands of the manufacturers and the horse-trading of farmers unwilling to pay list prices.

"It cannot be stressed too strongly that the farm equipment dealer seldom, if ever, realizes anything near the suggested list price of his machine," the brief states.

Army Service Corps Is 60 Years Old This Month; Many Changes Since 1901

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—When the Canadian Army was sent to quell the North - West Rebellion of 1885, the government had to hire 1,800 civilian drivers and their wagons and sleighs to transport the troops to battle.

To put it mildly, this system was not altogether satisfactory. In many cases, drivers were much more interested in lining their pockets than in helping to subdue an uprising.

During a critical stage of this winter trek north of the Great Lakes the civilian drivers decided to strike for higher wages.

MOVING IN SUPPLIES — The Royal Canadian Army Service Corps lists among its battle honors the bitter fight for Vimy Ridge in France during the First World War. Wagoners and 300 men.

The first motor vehicles were tried out by the army in 1910. It was thought at the time they'd never replace the horse.

During the First World War, however, vehicles were used in increasing numbers though the horse remained the main form of transport movement.

The first convoy of five Kelley trucks set out from Ottawa in 1913 on a trip to Toronto. The journey took five days. It now takes five or six hours.

One reason it took so long in 1913 was that the wooden bridges kept collapsing under the weight of the trucks.

Between the wars, the corps had a total strength of 26 officers and 300 men.

During this time the marine transport section came into being. The small fleet supplied offshore garrisons on Canada's east coast. It grew to 14 ships before being abandoned in 1946.

In 1928, a Royal Navy warship ignored the advice of the transport section's SS Alfreda to alter course and was lost on the Thrumcap shoals off Halifax.

The corps motto is Nil Sine Labore which can be roughly translated as "You don't get anywhere without work, son."

Will Continue Efforts Toward Disarmament

NATO Will Maintain West Berlin Freedom

OP from AP-Reuters

OSLO — The 15-power North Atlantic Treaty Organization pledged today to continue its efforts for world disarmament under effective international control.

A communique issued at the end of a three-day conference by the alliance's foreign ministers here said world disarmament by stages remained one of the principal objectives of NATO's member governments.

The communique also declared the foreign ministers' belief that a settlement to the problem of a divided Germany, including Berlin, can be found "only on the basis of self-determination."

The communique said that if Russia decided to relinquish its agreements with the Western allies on Berlin by signing a peace treaty with Communist East Germany, this would "in no way deprive the other parties of their rights or relieve the Soviet Union of its obligations."

The communique also declared the hope that proposed talks between the United States and Russia would enable the resumption of East-West disarmament negotiations.

EAP NEGATIVE STAND

The foreign ministers opposed the Soviet government for its "negative attitude" at Geneva toward a new Anglo-American plan for banning nuclear tests.

The communique said the foreign ministers agreed Russia would "move promptly to join in an effective treaty as a first and significant step toward disarmament."

The communique said the ministers were "aware of the intensified efforts of the Communist bloc to foment and to exploit conflicts and to extend its domination over an ever-increasing area" and "reaffirmed their resolve to meet this challenge."

They declared the NATO permanent council in Paris to continue its studies of all aspects of the military situation of the alliance aimed at improving its deterrent and defensive power.

A brief morning session wound up the talks and the ministers prepared to head home or to Geneva for the international conference on Laos scheduled to open there Friday.

The ministers declared that they are ready "to make their contribution toward achieving an equitable and just settlement of outstanding political questions."

ACCEPT CHALLENGE

The communique described work to study the social and material standards of the world's less-developed areas as one of the "major challenges of our time" and added that it was "a challenge which the members of the Atlantic Alliance gladly accept."

During their talks, the communique said, the ministers had considered the means of assisting efforts being made by two NATO members, Greece and Turkey—to speed development programs and improve living standards of their people.

The communique said the means for the alliance to meet political, economic, scientific and psychological, as well as military.

U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk was received by the Norwegian foreign minister Halvard Lange and by Foreign Affairs Minister Green of Canada who flew here Thursday night. The U.S., Britain, France and Canada will be represented at the 12-country conference.

Rusk offered Tuesday to commit to the "NATO area" five submarines equipped with Polaris medium - range nuclear missiles. He said the subs would be under American control and would not provide the 15-nation alliance with an independent nuclear striking force.

OFFER TONED DOWN

Rusk's offer fell short of that made last December by former state secretary Christian Herter to supply NATO with 180 Polaris or similar missiles by the end of 1963.

The new offer reflected President Kennedy's emphasis on Western ability to repel an attack with conventional weapons so that nuclear forces would not be used in the early stages of any hostilities.

Green and Rusk are expected to have talks either here or in Paris with Soviet officials on Soviet proposals.

Rusk agreed Tuesday to review — with Britain, France and West Germany — arrangements for protecting the free status of West Berlin.

Ministers were agency said however, there was confusion on conference circles as to whether Khrushchev still held his proposals.

Auschwitz Survivor Tells Kiwanians of Murder Camp

Although six million Jews were systematically murdered by the Germans under Hitler's master-race idea, there were also 30 million people of other races and creeds who died because of this theory. Adolf Eichmann was perhaps the most prominent instrument in putting this theory into practice, Dr. George Liban, doctor of philosophy and law and one of the few who survived the methodical murder camp of Auschwitz, told local Kiwanians yesterday afternoon at the Kiwanis Centre.

Dr. Liban gave a brief account of the highly efficient operations of the Auschwitz camp in the overall mechanics of human extermination devised by Adolf Eichmann's department in carrying out his task of "solving the Jewish problem" for Germany. At its peak, during the two years that the speaker was a prisoner there, up to 25,000 persons were gassed, in lots of up to 2,000 at a time, and their bodies burned in large furnaces. There were even instances he advised, when women and children were thrown alive into the furnaces, their bodies splashed with gasoline by the camp guards.

He said that each time a trainload of prisoners came to the camp half were sent immediately to the "showers", which looked like shower rooms, but were actually gas chambers. Cyanide acid was sprayed on the victims resulting in death within three to five minutes. The others were kept alive for a period of some weeks before they too might meet the same fate. It was only because of a desperate shortage of laborers for the German war effort, during the latter part of the war, that these prisoners ever left Auschwitz by the front gate, he advised and vived.

The Richmonian tried, however, is not just a trial of one man's actions or even of one regime's actions, Dr. Liban suggested. It was also a trial of the free nations of the world which had the opportunity of saving some 1,000,000 Jewry lives in the closing years of the war when Eichmann set out to negotiate a trade in human lives for German war supplies. The effort failed, however, because the Allies refused to be tempted to negotiate a trade in human lives, while were essential to the German war effort.

Yet we allow discrimination against anything or anyone to continue without fighting it Dr. Liban declared. We must open the door for more extremists, more dictators and other Eichmanns, the speaker added, concluding that the next high light in the next time it may not be 1961 but 1984 — the whole human race will be murdered.

The speaker was introduced by Ralph Graham Q.C. and thanked by Art Pennington. During the course of the meeting past president and former Kiwanis lieutenant-governor Clint Barnard was presented with a 24-year perfect attendance award. Special guests of the club included the members of the cast of Follies '61, which Club Brain conducted the meeting.

All Catholic Parishes Here Plan to Increase Revenues

A city-wide increased revenue program involving all Catholic parishes in Belleville will be held Sunday, it was announced today with the formal opening of the campaign at St. Joseph's Parish tonight at 8 p.m.

Active work in Holy Rosary parish will begin with an opening ceremony on Sunday, May 14, and in St. Michael's parish on Monday, May 17.

The entire program designed to increase parish revenue, to meet obligations, and to finance parish improvements, is scheduled to be completed by June 3.

Rev. John J. V. Buckley, pastor of St. Joseph's, announced the date of his opening ceremony, and revealed that agreements for parish support from Catholics in the parish, workers who will meet the appeal have resulted in a pledge total of $14,000 of $15,079. Since the increased revenue program is based upon agreements for parish support on a three-year basis, these four years pledges represent a figure of $42,237.

BUILDING PROGRAM

The specific needs of St. Joseph's parish include the acquisition of completing and furnishing the new St. Joseph's Church and rectory, the cost of converting the present rectory to a parish hall, and the cost of converting the present rectory to a convent.

In St. Michael's, Rt. Rev. Msgr. Terence P. Millington, revealed that the program was aimed at securing a regular weekly income at least equal to meet parish obligations incurred in the reconstruction of a new rectory, in the renovation of the church, and, in the parish's case, to assume its proportional burden of supporting Nicholson Catholic College and reducing its capital debt.

Rev. Maurice Imhoff, O.F.M. Conv., pastor of Holy Rosary, revealed that increased revenue was necessary to provide the parish with a parish hall, to expand the present rectory, and to reduce the church debt. Goals for St. Joseph's and Holy Rosary parishes call for a minimum increase of 75 per cent in church giving.

In St. Joseph's, the program is under the honorary chairmanship of Mayor Lou Cavanagh with William Sweet as chairman and Joseph Saycroft and H. O. O'Neil as associate chairmen. Group leaders in the St. Joseph parish include Leo Beck; Eric Hibbig, Ban Murley and Ed Neville.

Team captains who will directly oversee the work of the parishioners are Mrs. Harold Cassidy, P. Mercier, D. Whalen, Mrs. Jack Dumiere and R. Koenders. Other team captains are: T. Clancy, J. Hanley, St. Meldrum, Bender, M. Falbert, V. Muldoon, Dr. P. McSherry, W. Lynch and L. McKee.

New Hangar Toured by 418 Wing

Thursday night, May 4, 418 Wing, with 41 in attendance, met for its monthly meeting at 6 R.D. Social Centre. After a social hour, they were taken by bus to hangars 8-10 for a first-hand look at some of the new aircraft, Cariboo and Albatross. Requests PUC Carry Out Fluoridation

The Belleville Board of Health will recommend city council that the fluoridation of city water supplies be carried out by the Public Utilities Commission.

At last night's meeting of the board, members passed a recommendation which will be forwarded to council asking that the necessary by-law be passed. The recommendation was passed by the board with little discussion.

City council at its meeting on Monday briefly discussed the fluoridation question following a motion by Alderman Rod Deacon and Eugene Harrison, chairman of the Board of Health.

The motion asked council to approve fluoridation, but members were not prepared to discuss the matter and it will be up for full scale debate at their next meeting.

The local dental society has already placed its stamp of approval on fluoridation.

Education Board Discusses End of Kindergartens

TRENTON — Reporting to the Board of Education Monday night, V. P. Carswell, supervising principal of public schools, read several letters from individuals and organizations supporting the continuance of kindergarten classes in Trenton. Town council recently passed a resolution to discuss with the board the closing of these classes.

Letters from Mrs. V. Armstrong, Mrs. Norma Lents, Mrs. Elaine Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. R. Smithrim, Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. W. M. Kenny and the home and school associations of North Trenton, Prince Charles and Dufferin Ave. schools, were received.

In response to a letter from Mrs. M. Refiuse, education chairman of the Trenton-Brighton Association for Retarded Children, the special class will be granted the use of a basement room at North Trenton school in order that the boys in the class can use it as a woodworking shop. A request that the association be permitted to divide the room at the same school over the boys' class into two classrooms, was refused.

A copy of a resolution from the North Bay council, asking that the provincial government be asked to set up junior universities in a number of municipalities where high school graduates could attend for two years at less cost than the cost incurred in attendance at regular universities, was tabled without comment.

Mr. Carswell read resignations from Miss P. J. Hill of the high school staff, and from Mrs. L. Cassidy, Mrs. L. Woodbeck and Mrs. Mezenese of the public school staff.

Rev. Ronald Reid, chairman of management, was asked to be allowed to comment on the written minutes of a special school board meeting. At that meeting which Mr. Reid did not attend, board members dealt with a number of matters which had been left in abeyance by the management committee, to do with the renewal of contracts for public school women teachers who have passed retirement age, and also with an arrangement with V. P. Carswell whereby Mr. Carswell was allowed to resign as secretary-treasurer of the board and be retained as a supervising principal. For a number of years, Mr. Carswell has assumed the duties of the three positions.

'DIRTY' ACTION

Mr. Reid intimated that he was displeased with the other board members for dealing with these matters in his absence. He referred to the action as "the dirtiest political action" he had ever experienced.

Mr. Reid also referred to Mr. Carswell's duties in asking for a release from duties as secretary-treasurer, and accepting the position of supervising principal at a slightly higher salary than that paid for the three jobs in one, as "lobbying."

Mrs. Gabrielle Griffiths said she was sure that Mr. Reid had misunderstood Mr. Carswell's motives and that she was sure he was "worth the money the board will pay him for the principalship.

Mr. Reid said that he felt the board members had indicated that they had no confidence in him as chairman of the management committee by their action in dealing with matters concerning his committee in his absence.

Paul Tripp, chairman of maintenance, told Mr. Reid that he had indeed lost confidence in him due to his present attitude towards other board members.

T. S. Ketcheson, chairman of planning, said he had understood that Mr. Reid meant to assume the role of "peacemaker" when he sought election to the 1961 board. He said that Mr. Reid had not considered his full responsibility if he had not made the board aware that Mr. Carswell had asked to be relieved of his duties as secretary-treasurer of the board on February 20th. Mr. Ketcheson also objected to a statement Mr. Reid used in a phrase with reference to five out of six board members who had voted to engage Mr. Carswell as supervising principal and allow him to retire from the position of secretary-treasurer.

Following the discussion Mr. Reid moved that Miss Eva Baker be appointed to the position of secretary-treasurer. This was seconded by George Greer and the motion was carried. Miss Baker has worked in the board office for a number of years as bookkeeper, secretary.

The spectacular fire, which was visible from Picton, destroyed thousands of creosoted telephone ties and telephone poles. Firemen from Trenton, Belleville, Frankford, Batawa, Brighton and RCAF Station Trenton battled the flames for 2 1-2 hours.

Trenton fireman "Bun" McGaughey was overcome by the intense heat, was taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital but was released a short while later when he said he felt better.

Legion Branch Head Proud Of Citizens

TRENTON — President Ken Craddock of the Trenton Legion Branch said last night that the co-operation of members of six area fire departments, Trenton police, RCAF and army personnel, organizations and individuals during Monday night's fire at the Canada Creosoting Company stock yards, proved that in an emergency Quinte residents would rise to the occasion and work together for the common good.

Mr. Craddock mentioned that the efforts of the Trenton Salvation Army corps to supply the fire fighters and other workers with refreshments, had been augmented by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion branch who prepared coffee. The branch also supplied coffee and sandwiches through a catering firm and doughnuts were supplied by a Trenton food plant.

How About The Normal Child?

Hon. M. B. Dymond, Ontario's Minister of Health, has already shown himself to be one of the "strong men" in the Ontario Cabinet. His handling of his portfolio has been marked by several important speeches. More than once he has proclaimed principles at a variance with some past practices. When he speaks, those to whom he addresses his remarks would do well to listen closely.

Careful consideration, therefore, is due his recent declaration, at the eighth annual conference of the Ontario Association for Retarded Children, that "family physicians and specialists alike" should "consider well before advising parents of a retarded infant to seek institutionalization as soon as possible after birth."

At the same time, we cannot help wondering whether the trend towards retarded children being cared for at home cannot be carried too far. It is true that the retarded child has a "right by birth of love, care, protection and security only obtained in a family environment." But other children in the family have rights too, and from personal observation we suspect that many parents overlook the impact which a retarded child in the family has on other members. There is a danger that parents, in their solicitude for the handicapped child, may devote too much of their time and attention to the weak, forgetting that even the strongest child still needs love and guidance. We suspect many a physician who urges that a mentally retarded child be placed in an institution does so not out of concern for the welfare of the retarded child, but because he is thinking of what is best for the other children or for the parents themselves. Giving the retarded child every possible care is all very well, but this should not be at the expense of the useful and potentially useful members of the family and the community.

There was a time, a quarter of a century ago, when the major concern about the retarded was that they might breed a nation of morons. This outlook has changed towards a concern for the retarded child as an individual and a desire that this is all to the good. But the pendulum should not be permitted to swing too far. Our first concern ought to be for the normal child and his or her future.

No Planned Obsolescence Here

T. J. Emmert, vice-president of Massey Ferguson Ltd., has told a House of Commons committee that Massey Ferguson does not subscribe to planned obsolescence nor practise it.

We believe Mr. Emmert, but we cannot help wondering whether the existence of this happy situation is not also a tribute to the good sense of farmers, as a group, as well as a tribute of the company's high ethical standard. In other words, if farmers had money enough to re-equip their farms with machinery every year or two, and if they were prepared to accept products as wore out quickly, would Massey-Ferguson still be able to resist the temptation to build today so they could enjoy prosperity tomorrow? One would like to answer that question in the affirmative, but when one considers how many other great manufacturing concerns, in different lines of business, have apparently succumbed to "planned obsolescence" theory, and have hired men to defend this theory as opening the road to continued progress and improvement in their field, one wonders.

Farmers, though, praise be, while they are continually demonstrating their willingness to use improved methods and machines, are still stubborn about making changes for the sake of mere style.

If it were possible for them to impart their principles to urban dwellers, particularly, perhaps, to the distaff side, we suspect that the the country would benefit. Production for mere production's sake does not appeal to us any more than work for work's sake. All man's progress is the result of his continual efforts to make his work easier. Similarly, when a man makes anything he should make it as well as he knows how, built to last as long as possible, having due regard to the extra cost involved in producing the best rather than merely something that "will do."

We now have a work force of eight to nine million married women in traditionally male employment. Any of these women who wished to do so could resign her job and receive $1,000 cash. Probably 50 per cent would choose to receive the $1,000 . . . As a result, you would have four million jobs for men with families.—V. C. Logan, Texas candidate for U.S. Senate, with a plan for unemployment problem.

Truth Enters The Open Mind Says Sydney

By SIDNEY J. HARRIS

"In what way have you most changed since your college days?" was a provocative question aimed at me from the audience recently, after I had finished addressing a university group.

It took me a few moments to absorb the question. Then I said, and I believe quite accurately: "In those days I believed that almost everything was false; now I believe that almost everything is true."

When we are young, if we have imaginative, skeptical minds (as we then should), we are interested in puncturing the explanations of most organized groups. We look for the foolishness, the inconsistency, the hypocrisy, the fraud in official religious, political parties, systems of philosophy and moral codes.

As we grow older, however, if we genuinely mature, we begin to be dissatisfied with this negative approach. What seems important is not the falseness surrounding a doctrine, but its residual truth. What is left untract from any body of thought that is valuable is the building up of our own structure of reality; how can we put together all these diverse bloody bits into some sense of our conflicting and contradictory views of life?

The end of skepticism must be a kind of provisional certainty; for the person who goes through life a skeptic is a sealed-off person, as far as he is concerned, as the person who goes through life adhering to one rigid system of thought. After all, the skeptic who refuses to see anything as all black or all white is also a self-seeing things as all gray, which they are not.

The education we receive at school is only a preliminary to the real education we have to undertake of finding and combing the various truths that subsist in different systems. This is hard, patient, and never-ending work. And it is why many people prefer to slump comfortably within a closed system, or to adopt an easy-going attitude about all beliefs.

There are truths in Marx, if you know where to look for them, and how to apply them, just as there are truths in Adam Smith, Catholicism and Christian Science, dialectically opposed as these systems both contain elements of basic truth which are valuable to our peril. There is scarcely any view held by man that does not in some way reflect some facet of reality.

All this does not mean that we should be lukewarmly "tolerant" toward all views, for we have an obligation to root out error wherever we find it. But it does mean that we can find truth in the most unexpected places, if our minds remain open to look for it. The man who concentrates on the folly of the opposition's beliefs will never acquire the power to understand them or to overcome them.

How CPR Makes Profit

St. Thomas Times-Journal

Many people may have wondered how the Canadian Pacific Railway manages to keep operating and make a profit without having to get support from the government other than what it has had in the past. Canadian National are permitted to raise their rates and cut out unprofitable lines, but when there was a reduction of seven per cent on railway revenue and there were also losses on steamship and air services. But these companies have been offset by the earnings of Consolidated Smelters, trucking, hotels, communications and oil, gas and mineral rights. Its diversification is tremendous.

The CPR has 51% per cent control of Smelters. Its mineral, coal, gas rights include over 11,500,000 acres. Thus the total income does not depend on that of most of the major railroads in the United States.

"Needs must where the devil drives," and the labor force have been cut down in the interest of economy. Five years ago the company had 90,500 personnel; last year it was 74,000. Despite an increase of 16 per cent in wages, the aggregate payroll was five per cent below that of 1936.

STRENGTH for the DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

DANGER — PROCEED SLOWLY

Every age, probably, has felt that it possessed a quite sufficient amount of knowledge. Yet the testimony has been that practically every generation has increased in knowledge, that preceding generations knew but very little.

We happen to live in an age which has discovered more new knowledge in any area than in world history. We are particularly open, therefore, to the danger of believing that we know everything, and our forebearers have known precious little. Furthermore, we have about us that complacent assurance that while the future will no doubt register considerable advance in information, the basics have all been discovered by us, the foundations laid, and the advances of the future will be from the high and definitive mark we have set.

We can be sure that in assuming such an attitude we are as mistaken as were our ancestors. To be sure, we live in a marvelous age — the most astonishing in history. But we have perceived very few limitations that past generations have had, if we assume that of ours we have is enough, we will end up as discredited as the generation which killed Socrates, or that which forced Galileo to get down on his knees and renounce truths which all the world accepts today.

Pride of achievement is one thing; a closed mind, an unwillingness to progress is something else again — a highway to destruction, a ticket to oblivion.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 18th, 1941.

Residents of South Front Street rubbed their eyes and wondered if they were seeing things or were dreaming, when in glancing out their windows they were surprised to see a large building being moved south toward the waterfront. Formerly used as a garage by the Cities Service Oil Company near the site where their warehouse and storage tanks were burned last year, the building was being moved to their new location on South Front Street.

Immediately upon making the discovery the junk dealer hastened to the police station, where upon examination the Police Chief ordered the missile tossed into the deep reaches of the bay. The shell was a relic of the First Great War, but believed too dangerous to experiment with.

Need Accord On Air Space

Baltimore Sun

In his first interview with Mrs. Maud Gagarin said, among other things:

"The day side of the earth has a clearly definite line, the coasts of continents, islands, big rivers, big surfaces of water and structural features. These clear-ly distinguishable."

Given appropriate instruments, Major Gagarin could have made and recorded a much closer inspection of the terrain beneath him. Yet no one, so far as we know, has made any reference to encroachments of the sovereign air space of other nations.

The U-2 flight which was intercepted over Sverdlovsk Russia just two weeks short of a year ago flew at a maximum height of about 14 miles. One of the principal objections to the U-flight was that it commenced on Soviet Russia's air space.

Evidently there is a point somewhere between the level above the earth and 110 miles above the earth at which the argument about encroachment on national air space becomes meaningless. Just what is that height?

Granted that the subject of "open skies", like any subject having to do with disarmament, is difficult and frustrating to discuss hasn't the time come to talk about it again?

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

In defending the right of our betters to decline what is art and what isn't, President Bissell of the University of Toronto, in a recent address, referred to the most terrible of tyrannies, the tyranny of the uninformed." That brings up an interesting point. The tyranny of the half-informed could be even worse, because their status might lend some authority to them in the poor public's mind. And with the vast recent increase in all fields of knowledge, the number of the half-informed must be increasing by leaps and bounds. Specialization has to be resorted to, with the result hait the world is filling up with people who know everything about everything and nothing about everything else.

But surely the most terrible tyranny of all is that of those who conceive themselves to be fully informed. History consists of a sequence of disasters brought on by those who, in the fulness of their information in all matters, took poor old uninformed man rose up in his wrath and dumped them. The trouble with information is that it keeps moving. And sometimes the informed are inclined to stand still, being, perhaps, a little burdened.

Transferable Vote Failure

Winnipeg Tribune

After many years of using 2-3-5 voting, Manitoba switched in 1957 to a straight X ballot. It is possible that some Manitobans do not understand the reasons for the switch.

In theory, the transferable vote looks good. It means that nobody is elected on a minority vote when more than two candidates are running for a seat. If three are running, the low man is dropped and the second choice on his ballot distributed among the other two.

But it isn't so good in practice. In the first place, it doesn't result in anything much different from an X ballot. The candidate who leads in the first count —who would be declared elected immediately on an X ballot system —is almost always the winner after transfers.

For all the difference it makes the transferable vote just isn't worth the time, effort and doubled ballots it involves.

But even if it did work, even if a large number of members were elected who really had the support of a majority, it would be a questionable system.

It would put in the legislature members who were not the first choice of a minority, not even the largest group, among the electors. Many people prefer to believe the second and third choices are the only ones that votes, cast to keep somebody out of office rather than to express a real preference for anybody. These negative votes would determine the election in a transferable voting system as really worked.

Remnants of preferential and transferable voting still exist in municipal governments in Manitoba. It would simplify and improve the voting system if these too, were abolished.

This Signal Is Too Risky

Ottawa Citizen

The Hamilton Automobile Club is embarking on a safety driving experiment which deserves to be watched closely by municipal traffic authorities everywhere. The club has decided to endorse the recommendations that their turn signals are operating unnecessarily. Unfortunately the system involves the extension of the hand, with the fingers spread apart, and thumb moving toward each other. This signal is frequently made by motorists who think their wives are talking too much.

The purpose of the signal is unexceptionable. Turn ligots flashing are supposed to reduce accidents. But have the right means of communication been chosen? It is easy to see with a man who is driving a car that a movement of the arm to turn signals flashing. But it might have disastrous effects if a woman is driving. Her attention might be eager, and a concentration momentary in danger to other drivers.

A hand signal used unofficially by a motorist recently has been reported as adding to the risk of a hazards. When a motorist sees another doing something of which he disapproves he shakes his fist head with his finger. The message is clear: the second driver is crazy. The second driver, experience has shown, tends to lay his forehead in return, indicating that he thinks the first driver is a lunatic. These signals, given at 50 or 60 miles per hour, have occasionally resulted in a number or collisions, usually with innocent parties. Maybe the Hamilton club should leave well enough alone.

High Fat Diet Increases Chance of Heart Attack

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

A diet low in solid fats may — or may not — become a significant factor over a period of years. But many can be certain that obesity is, and will continue to be an important and dangerous factor every day that it exists.

For the person who has had a heart attack, getting down to normal weight is the first rule. Also the second, third and fourth, as far as I can see, on the basis of my experience and information.

If weight is down to normal, then you can feel reasonably sure that your diet is satisfactory.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Would the prolonged use of cortisone for arthritis cause loss of a person's hair? — H. F."

It may cause an increase in hair, especially around the face. I'm not familiar with loss of hair from it.

"Dear Dr. Molner: In both of my armpits I have some things that I believe are known as skin tags. Should they be removed? "Skin tabs," or papillomas, are an innocent thickening of the outer layer of skin. No need to remove them. If they occur in a place or cause trouble or appearance, they are easily removed, however.

Seek Control Of Weather

Milwaukee Journal

In asking additional funds for ocean research the other day President Kennedy mentioned the importance of the study of weather and means of controlling it.

Scientists are sure that giving much more time they can do fantastic things — even controlling hurricanes to changing the weather.

Rear Admiral Luis de Florez, for one, claims that with "only slight improvement in precipitation and temperatures vast areas of Canada can be made available for agriculture and colonization."

Hurricanes, he says, could be diverted or broken up by "the injection of the atmospheric circulation." In wartime, opposing forces trying to destroy the enemy could be affected by weather control. Control, too, of fog could prevent air pollution which seriously affects many of our cities.

Who, in this age of scientific wonders, can deny that the admiral may be right? In time they might even give Belleville a full period of Spring.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

"THE HUGE AND THOUGHTFUL NIGHT"

The above line is from the writings of Walt Whitman. Whitman, to me, is one of the greatest of those who have made America and the world great — because of his appreciation which he expressed, and left.

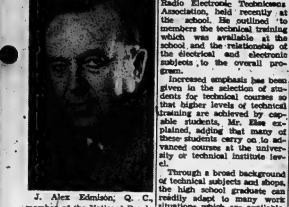
Whitman saw beauty in everything. He saw waysorry, wonder and the marvelous miracles all about him. All life was a strange revelation. All through his writings are found across expressions just as beautiful as the one quoted at the head of this Talk.

When you think of the night as Whitman did, you have to see that you have something of especial beauty wrapped up in the shadows of the dying day close in upon you.

Sometimes I think of the soul as just "getting up" at night time — because it is then when the little worries and irritations and unhappy blickerings of the day have all settled away.

"The huge and thoughtful night" — all decked out with its dome of shining stars, each individual star seeming to twinkle out a small message of love and best wishes from its soul, in the day to every pair of eyes looking up from the earth beneath.

How huge and thoughtful is this night under tropic skies, with the breezes wafting the coconut palms to and fro, through the rustling grasses and to the shore. How huge, also, even in the still mountainside where mammoth peaks, fringed with evergreens, go to greet the glitter of the heavens. And how huge also far out in the country — perhaps from the porch of some farm house, with the cricket's song and the night owl's hoot, or the whippoorwill's song to touch the ear of night.



After you have said goodbye to the day and to those whom you love — whether with your voice or spirit — take a look into the face of "the huge and thoughtful night," and then "thank God that you are alive."

Alex Edmison To Address Y Building Rally

J. Alex Edmison, Q. C., member of the National Parole Board and formerly assistant principal of Queen's University, will be the guest speaker for the YMCA's building campaign opening rally and dinner to be held tomorrow evening at the Canava Club.

A former YMCA member during his formative years and since a director and leader in various Canadian YMCA's, Mr. Edmison is perhaps best known throughout Ontario and Canada for his work in the rehabilitation of prisoners. He has been president of the Canadian Penal Association and the International Prisoners' Aid Association, director of the American Correctional Association and the executive director of the Howard Society.

A graduate of Queen's and McGill, Mr. Edmison practised law in Montreal prior to World War II. During the war years he served with the Black Watch Royal Highland Regiment of Canada, until January 1st, 1945, when he was appointed chief liaison officer to Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force for UNRRA. He received citations from both General Eisenhower and General de Gaulle for his organization of the facilities to handle and care for the refugees, displaced persons and concentration camp survivors in France and Germany.

A keen student of Canadian social history, between his speaking engagements and official duties, he collects early newspapers and other articles from pioneer days. His great grandfather was, in 1818, one of the first settlers in Peterborough County.

Over 600 persons are expected to be in attendance to hear Mr. Edmison speak tomorrow evening. The rally dinner will also be highlighted by a showing of an architect's model of the proposed new YMCA building.

Judges Named For Horse Show

Furthering plans for the forthcoming charity Horse Show to be held at the fair grounds on Saturday, June 24, the program committee met at the Moira Street fire hall Monday evening with the chairman, Allen Revell, presiding.

Mr. W. Lown of the sponsoring Lions Club was present and outlined publicity plans. The matter of trophies and ribbons was discussed, and announcement made that there will be 30 classes with a trophy for first prize in each class. There will also be two classes of musical chairs for children under and over 12 years of age.

All classes of light horses and ponies, both harness and saddle type, will take part, and Mr. Revell announced that Mr. John Rumble, former member of the Canadian Equestrian Team, will judge the saddle classes, and Mr. Bert Mann of Lindsay will judge the harness pairs.

Technicians Hear S. Else

Mr. Stan Else, electrical shop instructor at Moira Secondary School, was the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Quinte Chapter of the Radio Electronic Technicians' Association, held recently at the school. He outlined to members the technical training which was available at the school and the relationship of the electrical and electronic subjects to the overall program.

Increased emphasis has been given in the selection of students for technical courses so that higher levels of technical training are achieved by capable students, Mr. Else explained, adding that many of these students carry on to advanced courses at the university or technical institute level.

Through a broad background of technical subjects and shops, the high school graduate can readily adapt to many work situations which are available, the speaker continued, noting that 70 percent of Ontario's unemployed lack the skilled training necessary to qualify for available job vacancies.

At the club members were taken on a tour of the shop facilities in the school and observed with interest a fine display of students' work projects and assignments in the electrical shop.

Mr. Morgan Ames, president of the local chapter of IRETA, thanked Mr. Else and the staff members of Moira, who made the evening's meeting such a success.

Fair Directors Make Plans for Five-Day Show

The 1961 Belleville Fair, to be held from August 15th to 19th inclusive, promises to be the largest ever, with it being expanded to a five-day event and with an increased number of agricultural, commercial and entertainment attractions.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors it was announced that special emphasis was being laid on increased prize money in a number of the fair's competitions such as horses, cattle, swine and women's projects. A new grandstand show from General Artists Corporation under the direction of Henry Hamid of New York will be featured for a part of the fair. Horse racing and the running of the Ontario midget racing championships will also be held. As usual, the midway will feature a number of new rides provided by the Conklin Shows.

There will also be the Black and White Show, the Red and White Show and a horse show to be held concurrently with the fair's regular events. Field crop competitions and Junior Farmer and 4-H Club activities will also be a big attraction as will the Fat Steer Show and sale on the Friday afternoon of the fair.

It was announced that those wishing to enter the field crop competitions for seed and silage corn should have their entries mailed in to the fair secretary, Ben Bleecker of R. R 2 Holloway, before the end of May.

Board meetings will be held at regular intervals throughout the coming months to ensure that the first five-day Belleville Fair will be the finest which this area has ever experienced.

Urges Increase In Sawmill Efficiency

TWEED — A study made some years ago of 50 representative sawmills in Eastern Canada, showed that, on the average, approximately 50 percent of volume of sawlogs processed in the mills was lost in waste - slabs, edgings, trimmed ends and sawdust. If the efficiency of the sawmills can be increased, particularly in the small circular sawmills where the waste figure is much greater, then forest production will yield a correspondingly increased volume of marketable wood. For example, a decrease of only ten percent in waste would result in the production of another 2 million feet of sawn timber in the Tweed district.

This industrial liaison service is available free of charge. The Forest Products Research Branch are specialists in sawmilling techniques and a visit from the industrial liaison officer may well lead to solving sawmilling problems and result in increased sawmill profits.

THE PROUD POPPA — And here is the poppa of the quadruplet calves. The Dual-Purpose Shorthorn bull doesn't look so proud but Mr. Goodfellow points out that he deserves a lot of credit.

Fireman Dies At Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Lieutenant Roland Larin, 43, of the Montreal fire department, was killed early today when he fell through a roof while fighting a minor conflagration in the downtown section of the city.

Lieut. Larin, a veteran of 21 years on the force, left a wife and four young children.

A fire department spokesman said Lieut. Larin apparently fell through a hole in the roof.

Cause of the blaze at the Canadian Tube and Steel Products plant on St. Patrick Street was not determined. The building was not seriously damaged.

Roslin Cow Sets Family Record Latest Achievement, Quadruplets

Possibly an all-time record for live multiple births in cattle has been set by a six-year-old part Holstein cow owned by Mr. George Goodfellow, Roslin district farmer, 12 miles north of Belleville.

Over the past weekend the cow gave birth to four lively calves. The calves, three heifers and a bull are all in good health and normal in every way.

During the past three years the Goodfellow cow has given birth to no less than an even dozen calves.

A year ago the cow had triplets; two years ago she gave birth to twins, and three years ago had her first set of triplets.

"Daisy (the cow's name) is truly a poor man's cow", said Mr. Goodfellow.

Local veterinarians say that quadruplet calves are rare among cattle, but for all four calves to be born alive and healthy is virtually unheard of. Calves born in such multiple births are said to be almost always stillborn.

Eight Fmish In Car Rally

Although local entrants in the Trans-Canada Rally can get across the continent with a time error of not more than a few minutes it appears that their fellow club members in the Quinte district have a much tougher time right at home. In the recent monthly car rally of the St. Lawrence Automobile Club only eight of the 20 cars which started showed up at the finish of a scheduled 90-mile run.

The winning entrant, T. S. Pick in a Sunbeam Rapier, amassed a total of 594 penalty points whilst second and third place entrants, Derek Payne and John Stephenson collected 675 and 693 points respectively.

The course, which was organized by Don Reed and Frank Caggy, started in Napanee and led north to Lime Lake, west through Stoco, down into Foxboro and finished in Belleville. The event was run as a navigational exercise which stresses a competitor's ability in charting out the pace per course whilst maintaining a preset average speed at the same time.

"Artist as Social Critic" Topic At Art Appreciation Meet

The Art Appreciation Group of the Belleville Arts and Crafts Club met at the homes of Mrs. H. R. Gibson, Foster Ave., and Mrs. Lewis Anderson, Victoria Avenue.

"The artist as a Social Critic" was the first topic and although social consciousness is not a recent development in painting; it was only after the 19th century that it began to appear with any frequency, showing relationships between human issues, protesting against vice and injustice and commenting on man's folly and his achievements.

As early as 1494 Botticelli used his brush to protest against an injustice of his day in a work called "Calumny". This work was conquered with Ben Shahn's, "This Pension of Sacco and Vanzetti", a 20th century protest against the spirit of the witch-hunt.

These paintings covered more than 400 years apart show surprising similarities of pictorial procedure even though the painting styles are quite different. Goya in, "The Executions of the Third of May" and Rivera in "The Liberation of a Peon" are quite explicit in their protests.

SOCIAL MISFITS

Hogarth and Toulouse-Lautrec depicted the social misfits of their day. Works by Delacroix, Boucher, Devid, Albright, Blum and Trumbull were analyzed and discussed.

In portfolio 12, the artist as a visionary, was discussed. Not many paintings follow a formula without modifying it and formula always takes second place to invention for the artist and to perception for the observer.

Giorgione's "The Tempest", is a mystical landscape painting in 1508 and there is a continuing communication between it an observer.

The drawings and engravings of Blake are the results of ecstatic and thrilling visions as he drew from such sources as the Bible, Milton, Dante and Shakespeare. Bosch is his depiction of "The Garden of Eden" and "Hell," (two panels of a triptych), was one of the most terrifying medieval painters of the fantastic and was a forerunner of the 20th century surrealist painters, while Blake was almost alone as a visionary and with a very small audience.

The present day visionary, fantastic, grotesque and mystical painters such as Chagall, Orozco and Dali have wide and receptive audiences.

Home Economics Dept. BCIVS Shows Captivating Fashions

The large assembly last evening at the Collegiate auditorium of interested parents and friends testified to the popularity of the annual Fashion Show sponsored by the Home Economics Department of BCIVS.

The program, consisting of seven scenes, opened with a "Spring" theme, wherein wearing winter outfits, walking arm in arm and singing "Walking in a Winter Wonderland." This pretty melody, as well as the words, prepared the onlookers for the lovely scene to follow, depicting Christmas morning with little children in eye-catching costumes eagerly inspecting the presents on the gaily-lighted Christmas tree, while others in delightful unsophisticated style awaited their turn at ensembles. One little fairy with lovely curls quite stole the show with her intriguing curtsying, while the white-haired lady in green passed out Christmas gifts to each.

Two of the ensembles, one for a little lad, was a checked blazer with brown trousers, and the other the curious wee tot in her dainty little pinafore, were mute demonstrations of the fine sewing accomplished.

NEW YEAR'S EVE

Scene 2, designated "New Year's Eve," showed Father Time in his long white beard with silver scythe, amid a galaxy of dainty party dresses, eye-catching accent with sequined covered balloons and spiralling white papers adding to the gaiety of the season. At the close the "New Year," a wee tot wearing satin sash shoulder sash and diaper, drew much applause from the guests.

The dresses modelled were made by the girls of grades 11 and 12, who, as a finale, took place on the white benches, some sitting, and others standing at either end, each one wearing a golden crown. Among the dresses was a white brocaded taffeta, with deep V front neckline, and rounded back, highlighted by satin cummerbund and bow. Another was of white organdy with white eyelet bodice embossed with pink flowers, and yet another in gold brocaded taffeta with V-shaped neckline.

Scene 3 showed an Easter morning, with pretty back-ground of a white arbor, white picket fence banked by golden forsythia and baskets of red flowers. Here the home economics maidens, about 25 coloured girls, displayed their Easter finery, showing lines of youth with matching jackets and suits.

QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY

Scene 4, entitled "Queen's Birthday," was a line of outdoor beppiness with warm and sunny weather. The clothes modelled included many lovely blouses and suits, all made by the 12 Home Economics girls, in 9ft. These blowed blouses in shirt-type with set-in sleeves and buttoned cuffs, and featuring an inverted back pleat for ease in movement, with banded bottom. The tie type can either be worn inside the skirt or on the outside, and were in shades of beige, blue-green, turquoise, beige and red, and yellow broadcloth.

Others showed blouses with Peter Pan collars with back zipper closing, while some were of the draw string type in chocolate brown, white broadcloth and floral prints in yellow and orange, as well as mauve, greys and red. Others again depicted

St. Columba P.W. Sponsors Auction Sale

The president, Mrs. F. Vanthompey, opened the meeting. Mrs. R. Brain read the Scripture from Mark 1, and led in prayer.

During the business period, several projects were discussed and reports were received. It was announced that a discussion on "Liturgical Art" would be featured at the next meeting and members were invited to bring guests. Mrs. W. Partridge and Mrs. R. Ashley were appointed as a committee to form a Woman's Association.

The worship period was in charge of Mrs. L. Williamson during which Mrs. G. Miller spoke on the missionary theme from the study book, "Into all the world together".

St. George's Guild Sponsors Attractive Spring Tea, Sale

A lovely spring tea and sale was held yesterday afternoon by St. George's Guild, with Mrs. D. Donnely as convener for this most delightful event. Graciously receiving the ladies and guests at the entrance to the hall room were Mrs.-M. Welch, and the convener.

The tea table was especially attractive with its white linen cloth, centred with an artistic arrangement of colorful double daffodils, mingled with sprays of forsythia and budding spirea and flanked by tapering white and green candles in crystal candelabra. To complete this pretty setting were gleaming bordered serviettes.

silver tea services and daintily

The numerous quaint tables were most attractive in their simplicity with white embroidered luncheon cloths centred with petite containers of fragrant spring blossoms.

Those who presided at the tea were: Mrs. J. R. Creegan, wife of the rector of Christ Church, Mrs. R. Ferguson, who replaced Mrs. C. Smith, who was unable to attend due to the illness of the Rev. E. P. Smith; Mrs. R. Godden; and Mrs. H. Pitt.

Those serving the tasty sandwiches and delectable little cakes were: Mrs. F. Asky; Mrs. W. Colman; Mrs. M. Quirt; Mrs. W. Taylor and Mrs. Lawrason.

Making tea was Mrs. Button, assisted by Mrs. G. Guillver and those replenishing the plates were Mrs. W. McLeod; Miss Towner; Mrs. A. Briens and Mrs. G. Jenkinson.

HOME COOKING

One of the attractive booths was that of the homecooking. Here were a table of delicious confections which included: pies of all kinds, sherry, fruit, lemon, orange and lemon; a large variety of cookies, large and small; fragrant homemade breads, buns and scones; loaf and square cakes, both light and dark; cake and pancake squares; taffy and berry tarts, and a varied assortment of jams and jams. This was in charge of Mrs. J. Collins, Mrs. S. Turner and Mrs. Garrow.

The candy table was an alluring spot for the youthful tooths, with its cellophane bags of blixed light and dark chocolates, mints piled to the brim with an assortment of fudges and maple creams, and also packaged in large sized boxes. Mrs. W. Sharp, Miss A. Decker and Mrs. A. Hall were in charge of these.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

If there are children in your family, or if your friends have children, it will probably be evident that they are working harder at this time. Studying is something that cannot be put off any longer with any degree of safety or peace of mind. Before the "heavenly holidays" start, this ordeal must be gone through. The ominous Grade XIII examination timetable is out and those who are preparing for this final test know about with serious intent.

Final year collegiate students may have made decisions as to the direction they hope to take, but it eventually depends on the results of those examinations. Now is the time for them, with the help of teachers, to assess the possibilities of winning help for further education through scholarships, bursaries and prizes. A great deal of help along this line is available and it is to be hoped that both parents and students will avail themselves of the information which can be obtained from school principals.

SCHOLARSHIPS INCREASED

In many ways, more money is being made available to meet increasing costs. One recent local instance is the fact that the Belleville and district University Women's Club has increased the value of its two scholarships from one hundred dollars each to three hundred dollars each. Many other local groups and organizations give monetary help to students desirous of higher education. This is the time to find out about the possibilities.

It was a coincidence that at this particular time we happened to see an article entitled, "A Huge Waste: Educated Womanpower." This heading does not mean what some people might still wish it to mean. We have all heard it said, "What's the use of sending girls to college — they just get married and it's all wasted."

Of course, this is basically false since no education is ever wasted. If it were true, then logically girls might as well not go to school at all. We have the feeling sometimes that this sentiment still prevails in some quarters; however we cannot "turn back the clock". Many are the arguments around the proposition that education is an end in itself, but we will not go into that.

It is interesting to listen to some remarks on the subject. We heard a doctor say not long ago that he had felt he would not give a daughter a college education, but that no wbe has changed his mind on the point. This was probably due to the fact that when he had daughters of his own, he discovered that they were complete and thinking individuals, even as men.

MORE FINISH EDUCATION

It is significant, though, that more and more married women are working off degrees which earlier had been interrupted, and this not with the idea of making money or more money. It is pointed out in this article by Mary Bunting, mother of four, noted biologist and now president of Radcliffe College, that women can no longer expect to "finish" their educations before taking on home responsibilities. Further, it is said that studying in appropriate doses mixes wonderfully well with homemaking.

There is also much criticism levelled at the married women who works, but there the degree of education does not matter. A phrase in the Bunting article, "how much time she puts in with her children" as compared with her bridge-playing neighbor" recalled the words spoken by Esther Hymer, one of the finest and most intelligent women we have ever met. She said, "As in everything else, it is the quality of effort and not the quantity that is important in homemaking and being a mother."

Shakespeare may have been wrong in many things he said, but he could not have been more wrong than when he said: "For men have marble, women waxen minds".

White Cane Club Enjoys Social Time

The highlight of the May recreation meeting of the White Cane Club at the Kiwanis Centre was delightful music by Mrs. Pat Downes and Mr. A. E. Hughes with Mr. C. Templer as accom panist. Mrs. Downes sang "The Little Damsel," "Summertime," from Porgy and Bess, "Vespers," by A. A. Milo from Christopher Robin.

Mr. Hughes sang "Three for Jack," "I Love Life" and "You'll never Walk Alone." He joined Mrs. Downes in a duet, "Ross Mary."

Grateful thanks were given the entertainers by Violet Watts. "Happy Birthday" was sung for associate member Gladys Seldon and a rose presented to her.

Two oral contests were given by Maude Rollins with Meryle Lowe being the winner.

A clothes pin game was played and Jim McCoy won with 15 pins in one hand and Sara O'Shea, 13.

All joined in a sing-song of old favorites of president Mildred Rueliow, who expects to move to Winnipeg in June.

The Riwanis Queens served lunch and were thanked by Helen Wardhaugh.

ABANDONED CHILDREN

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Mary Kiljene, a Dutch teacher of retarded children in Brazil, says 35 to 40 children, many of them retarded, are abandoned wandering in Sao Paulo streets each day. Miss Kiljene, visiting a sister here, has personal charge of 160 such youngsters in two schools.

Vichyssoise is potato and onion soup made with chicken broth. The French serve it icy cold in summertime, but I like it better hot.

VICHYSOISSE:

I bought 2 1-2 pounds of chicken backs for 25c and added 2 cups cold water and simmered them for three hours. I strained this and measured the 2 cups of broth I needed for the soup.

(Economy note: From the bones I carefully picked off the meat which yielded 1 3-3 cups pure chicken meat. Budgeters take note — for 2 made generous chicken salads for four with this meat for another meal.)

1-2 cup new green onions and tops, chopped, 1-2 egg-size cooking onion, chopped, 1-3 cup chopped celery, tablespoon butter or margarine, finely chopped chives or green onion tops for garnish, 2 medium-sized potatoes, 1-3 teaspoon salt, 2 cups rich chicken broth (see above), 1-3 cup table cream.

Gently saute together, in the butter, the green onions and cooking onions and celery until soaked with butter, but not bit brown. Peel and quarter potatoes. Add to pan. Add salt and pour over the chicken broth and simmer covered until vegetables are tender — about 1-2 hour. Strain, pushing as much of the solids through the strainer as possible as it should have a delicate green color. Chill overnight for the flavor mallows on standing several hours. Reheat in top of double boiler, adding the 1-3 cup this cream about 10 minutes before serving time. Sprinkle each serving with chopped chives or green onion tops.

CREAMED HORSERADISH:

Beat 1-3 cup heavy cream until stiff. Fold in 1-4 cup fairly well-drained horseradish. Excellent with roast beef or broiled steak.

CUCUMBERS IN SOUR CREAM:

Wash, score lengthwise with sharp fork, and slice 1-3 cucumber. Arrange overlapping in long pickle dish. Sprinkle with 2 teaspoons lemon juice or vinegar. Spoon commercial sour cream — about 1-3 cup — over top, separating the slices to allow cream to flow between them. Sprinkle with paprika and black pepper and chill well before serving.

GONDOLA PRICE

Toast for Bridegroom

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—Our daughter is getting married and we want to toast the bridegroom. We would be pleased if you would tell us what to say.—MRS. C. L.

DEAR MRS. C. L.:—Your toast should express your good will and good wishes to the young man who is marrying your daughter. Some reference to any special virtue he has or your personal fondness for him is in order.

You might say something like this: "On this happy occasion I want to propose a toast to the young man in the case. Johnnie has been going with Mary for quite a while now and we have all come to love him. (Here you might mention some personal or amusing incident about him). We are gaining a fine young man as a son, and we know he will make Mary happy. Ladies and gentlemen, let us drink to the health wealth and happiness of the bridegroom!"

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—You spoke about the terrible effects of a fear of failure. I saw it happen to my own husband. He was in hospital after a bad heart attack, and just wasn't getting any better.

Finally a psychiatrist was brought in and he discovered that my husband was subconsciously afraid he could never support his family again. He was so sure he would fail he was afraid to even make an effort.

When he was helped to face this fear, and encouraged to try some simple things, he improved. We were all amazed. Now he has learned to keep books and is doing fine. —MATRON.

DEAR MATRON:—An orchid to the psychiatrist! He brought into the open a hidden foe—a paralyzing fear.

Your story also suggests an important truth: the way to conquer a difficulty is often to tackle it in small parts, just a little at a time. A small success can then lure us on to greater things. Thanks for telling us about your husband.

Jackie Kennedy to Get Chance To Enjoy Art, Horses at Ottawa

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two things Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy likes best—art and horses—are on the schedule for her trip to Canada with President John Kennedy.

The Kennedys' 7½ - day visit to Ottawa next week is the forerunner of a similar trip to Paris later in the month.

The Canadian trip is typical of state visits and includes a presidential address to both houses of Parliament. For much of it, including two formal state dinners and a reception, both the president and Mrs. Kennedy will follow the same schedule.

Mrs. Kennedy will take a brief look, on her own, at Canada's National Gallery and watch a drill by the RCMP.

Canadian spokesmen here note that the timing of the Kennedys' trip will give them a chance to see one of the spectacular sights of Ottawa—more than 1,000,000 tulips in bloom.

DUE TUESDAY

The president and his wife are due in Ottawa by plane late Tuesday afternoon. They will stay at Rideau Hall, residence of Governor-General Vanier.

Their first official appearance will be at Rideau Hall where they will plant a commemorative tree on the grounds.

Tuesday evening they will be guests of honor at a formal, white tie state dinner for 400 at 30 at Government House, followed by a state reception to which about 700 have been invited.

The next morning, while Kennedy goes to the National War Memorial and engages in a discussion with Prime Minister Diefenbaker, Mrs. Kennedy will embark on her own schedule.

It calls for just 30 minutes in the National Gallery, From there, she goes to the RCMP barracks. A horseman herself and a devotee of horse shows, Mrs. Kennedy will view a half-hour colorful riding drill of the Mounties.

TO HEAR ADDRESS

She rejoins the president for luncheon at the prime minister's home and watch Kennedy deliver his address in the Commons.

Winding up the official visit Wednesday night is the customary return dinner for their Canadian hosts at the U.S. Embassy.

The Kennedys are scheduled to leave Ottawa by plane next Thursday morning.

Mrs. Kennedy is planning some new additions to her wardrobe for the trip. But so far the White House has released no information about them except to say that they will be by her designer, Oleg Cassini.

Women's Activities

MELROSE W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Melrose W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. R. MacFarlane with a fair attendance. The president, Mrs. J. Milligan, presided and as it was approaching "Mother's Day" she opened with a worship service along that line.

Mrs. Clarence Hagerman read the Scripture, Luke 1:46-56, which is a song of joy, hope and thanksgiving, an expression of gladness.

During the business period it was decided to hold a bazaar on October 19th, and that the WMS canvass this month. The June meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. I. Wess.

Mrs. C. Bates, leader for the month, had sent slips covered excellent readings, which were given as follows: "The Cradle To the Cross," by Mrs. Hagerman; "The Miracle of Praise," by Mrs. R. MacFarlane; "Marks of the Christian Home," by Mrs. C. Osborne, who outlined them as follows: faith in God; outward symbols; family council; consideration of others; fellowship with the church.

Mrs. E. Embury read "A Mother's Advice To Her Son." The president led in singing of the study book "Turning World" and dealt with the work-campe under the heading, "Work Makes Us One." The purpose of these camps is to show that people, as well as their money are important in expressing the love of God to those who have not known it and to show that ecumenicity may be experienced when people of several races work together in a Christian service project.

Volunteers from some 50 different countries have given of their time and labor to such ecumenical work on five continents. Here and work with people of other faiths and traditions has widened their vision and helped them to realize the oneness of the church. "Agape" is the Greek word used by writers of the Bible to refer to the love with which God loves us. It is the name of a Toronto youth centre in N.W. Italy, where what counts most is that Christ's love is affirmed as a fact experienced in history. Work campers strive to participate in a real way in the sorrows and joys of the world in which they live. Despite their differences in belief, campers usually sum up their experiences this way: "Work makes us one."

The hostess served lunch and a social half hour followed.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Maria J. — He still won't buy a television set.

Eli J. — I still want to read and study and think.

* * *

Maria J. — My husband and I might be called eggheads. We read a lot, play fine recordings on our expensive stereo equipment, enjoy the FM stations on the radio, and also pursue our creative hobbies. He plays the cello, and I the flute.

So, up to now we've resisted the pressures of our friends, family, and, oh yes, baby sitters, to install a TV set. Our leisure time is more than filled. But our five-year-old son has been asking why everyone else on the block has one or two, or three and we, none.

The biggest reward I can offer him is a chance to watch cartoons at his friend's house. I feel we can relent now and get a set for Carl's sake. With a little boy, how non-conformist can you get?

* * *

Eli J. — I've seen what TV does to children. It dulls and drugs them. It's an anesthetic. Even the adults I know who have sets becomes addicted. They're only half there when you talk to them. The other half of them is in a daze.

Maria and I may be in the minority, but we still believe in thinking and creating for ourselves instead of having it all handed out in hour and half hour portions on a television screen.

Naturally Carl loves the cartoons he catches in other kids' homes. But I think it's being with his friends that's important to him, not the show. Surely we can find more invigorating and original activities for him and his crowd in our rumpus room.

* * *

The Council — At the risk of violations from Trendex, Nielson, and other TV biggies or bogies, we'll side with Eli for a few years, anyway.

His small son won't be under-privileged if Maria sees that he's happily engrossed in varied pursuits, even though the other mothers sweat that there's no baby-sitter like a TV set. Young Carl may not know all the commercials his pals do, but he'll be acquainted with a wider world than that of "gang bang" cowboys and "monsters" from Mars.

In a few years, however, we'd ask Eli to weaken. A three-year study of 6,000 children in 10 cities, just completed by three Stanford University professors, recommends TV viewing as a wholesome escape during the "troubled years," between 11 and 13. Before and after, the researchers found, bright children prefer the "real world."

Eli's emphasis upon freedom to think, a skill which many believe is dulled by habitual viewing and listening, is echoed by Dr. Mark D. Altschule who warns: "Only the action of God, Divine Providence, which thus far has kept the head from shrinking in accordance with the decreasing use of the brain, has saved the hat industry from ruin."

Steering Carl, in these early years, toward imaginative and self-directed play rather than hours of pre-digested and passive amusement is a boon he'll be grateful for all his life. Even the hard are rebelling against too much recreation which pushes them into "second childhood." A speaker at the recent White House Conference pleaded for more encouragement of the intellect in old-age homes!

But let's not be as extremist, as all-or-none, as Eli. TV can co-exist with cerebration. The secret is self-control. One listens sparingly, with discrimination. Surely Eli and Maria will buy a set someday. And by juggling hours, and jiggling dials they and Carl will still be able to keep their gray-matter jogging.

Take Advantage of Services Available to Brides-to-Be

By DEIRDRE McNOGOVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — If you're one of this spring's brides-to-be, by now you may be exhausted trying to make all the arrangements for your ceremony.

Or, if by chance you're one of those supremely well-organized individuals, you may have no worries beyond what to wear to the next party.

But wedding plans need not be hectic if you take advantage of some of the many services offered. Many large department stores have expert bridal counsellors without charge, they will plan your wedding down to the last detail.

If you don't live close enough to a big city to enlist their assistance, you can always write for their booklets on wedding customs and etiquette, what to do and when.

There is no limit to the number of bridesmaids but count on having one usher for 20 guests. Four attendants should wear dresses that complement your gown and in colors that both suit the season and are not lighter than yours. Gloves should be worn during the ceremony.

GIFTS AND FLOWERS

You are responsible for your wedding gown and veil, personal trousseau, linen and the things you'll need to set up housekeeping after the honeymoon, gift for the groom, gifts and bouquets for your attendants, flowers for the church and reception, church fee and limousine service.

It is customary for the bride and her father to drive to the church in one car, leaving another one for the mother and the bridesmaids. A gracious gesture is to order a car for the parents of the groom, the groom and the best man.

Your maid of honor holds your bouquet during the ring ceremony and helps you with your trousseau and changing to your travelling outfit.

Bridesmaids should be on time for the ceremony, and provide their own transportation to the church or your home.

RESERVE CHURCH EARLY

Three months before the wedding you should check final details with your clergyman to see that both he and the church are available for the rehearsal and the ceremony. Also discuss music and flower details with him.

Order either engraved or raised English printed invitations and announcement notices and thank-you stationery two months beforehand.

Out-of-town guests should receive their invitations four weeks before the wedding date and others three weeks. Send your engagement notice to the newspaper.

Record and acknowledge wedding gifts as they arrive. Gifts to bridal attendants should be presented at a luncheon, rehearsal party or just before leaving for the church. Provide accommodation for out-of-town guests.

Confine social activities and parties to the last two to four weeks. And be sure your new home will be furnished and the kitchen well stocked for your return from the honeymoon.

PAY RECORD FINES

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto motorists paid a record $1,796,-264 in fines for the first four months of 1961. This was an increase of $307,479 over last year. Parking fines, paid out of court, accounted for $330,066.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Eagger Shaw

DAILY THOUGHTFULNESS IS MOTHER'S SPECIAL GIFT

Next Sunday will be "Mother's Day." During recent weeks I have been considerably annoyed by the many suggestions offered by shops for buying everything from refrigerators to hankies. They assure us that, by so doing we will express our love for Mother.

Please don't misunderstand me. I am not against the presentation of gifts. What I resent is the placing of the whole idea of "Mother's Day" on a commercial basis. It is hard to believe that president Wilson intended this when he issued a proclamation in May, 1914, which set aside the second Sunday in May for the commemoration of Mothers.

Do you feel that a gift and effusive sentiment once a year is sufficient to express your love for your Mother? If you do, you are wrong, Kate, my mother. She will tell you that a daily gift of thoughtfulness means more than all the material things in the world.

The helping hand in the daily household chores — without a grumble, I might add — can lighten her burden. For those of you in the teen-age group, listening to her wise advice, and doing what she tells you without argument, can bring her untold satisfaction. It will also result in a happier household, not only for Mother, but for everyone else — you included.

Also remember that observance of the "little courtesies" mean even more to her. It's entirely too easy to take her for granted. Having learned so her since babyhood, we too often accept as our just due her unselfish love and protection.

Those of you who are married, and are blessed in raising your own family, can be more thoughtless than those who live at-home. A telephone call every day or so takes only a few minutes. Knowing that you are thinking of her will lighten her burden. For those of you who have moved to another city, a phone call once in a while should definitely be made. But let's be honest. Too often that call or letter is put off from day to day. All of a sudden, weeks have gone by and you have done nothing.

So, along comes Mother's Day. The advertisements won't let you forget this one! So you load her down with flowers, gifts and sentimental expressions of your love. She appreciates it, of course. But, underneath, her heart is heavy that she really is remembered only once a year.

* * *

Question — IT is true that the wearing of a carnation on Mother's Day is the correct thing to do? If so, is it proper for both men and women to wear them? — Mr. K. R. S., New York, N. Y.

Answer — During recent years this has become a custom, but it's not obligatory. A white carnation is worn if your mother is deceased, as a tribute to her. A red carnation indicates that your mother is still living. It is proper that they be worn by both sexes.

SAYS SENATE

right to tax, a prerogative of Parliament.

The two opposing views — on which debate is expected to continue today — immediately created speculation on whether a situation could be developing that might result in a general election being called over the issue.

COULD HAPPEN

This could come about if the Liberals carry out their threat to amend the bill, removing the sought - for arbitrary powers. The bill then would be sent back to the Commons.

Parliamentary rules provide that if the government majority in the Commons refuses to accept a Senate amendment, a Commons - Senate conference can be called. There are no other steps provided if this fails to resolve the issue.

However, a well - informed Progressive Conservative source described Senator Brunt's challenge as a "debating challenge."

He said that if the Senate's Liberal majority uses its power to amend the bill the incident by itself would not be big enough to bring about an election. But the issue of whether the government should act to strengthen the ability of industry to compete with imports would be a major issue in the next election when called.

MAY RAISE REFORM

Senate reform could also be an issue. The question would be whether Canada should continue to have a system under which the Opposition can command a majority in the Senate and block government legislation approved by the Commons.

The 102 - member Senate is composed of 72 Liberals, 29 Progressive Conservatives, two Independents and one Independent-Liberal. There are two vacancies.

Liberal Opposition Leader W. Ross Macdonald said the bill is not part of the government's budget and fiscal policy. It had nothing to do with the amount of taxes to be collected.

Senator Brunt objected to a statement by Senator Macdonald last week asking all senators—Liberals and Conservatives to unite and deny the arbitrary powers sought by the government.

"... I wish to state positively and most emphatically that we all—and all refers only to the government members of the Senate — support wholeheartedly this bill and are opposed to the bill being amended in any way," he said. "It would be impossible for the government members of the Senate to adopt any other attitude with respect to this bill."

He added "I am quite confident that under this particular act the powers which are given to the minister will be exercised with the same discretion that has been used over the past 60 or 70 years."

Temianka Little Symphony To Appear at Collegiate

The Temianka Little Symphony, which will appear at the B.C.I.V.S. auditorium on May 13th, under the auspices of the Community Concerts with Henri Temianka, conductor and violin solist, is the fourth, and final concert of the 1960-61 season.

The Little Symphony is a combination of distinguished artists in a highly original program. Enthusiastically acclaimed after its initial appearance in Los Angeles, the ensemble consists of virtuoso performers, including many outstanding young soloists from all over the United States, in a program which spans the musical literature of three centuries.

It presents a liberal sampling of the rich repertory of music composed expressly for small orchestras. Although this repertory contains some of the most exciting and appealing music ever written, it has been much neglected in concert halls because it lies beyond the resources of the string quartet, the most popular chamber ensemble, without demanding the resources of the full symphony orchestra. In addition, the Symphony's two pianos give it a boundless versatility.

GREAT INSTRUMENTAL VARIETY

The best proponent of the Symphony is Mr. Temianka himself, who describes his ensembles virtues thus: "... One of this group's chief distinctions is its great instrumental variety, which enables us to feature a broad and exciting repertoire of universal appeal to both laymen and connoisseurs. This is due to the inclusion of a piano, duo, as well as a wide range of percussion instruments; from kettle drums to celestes, xylophone, tambourine and triangle. We also have a top-notch clarinetist and a flutist (doubling on piccolo), and a group of strings . . . The ensemble also makes a most attractive stage presentation, because the redoubtable percussion repartment and the two grand pianos add visual lustre, not to speak of the accomplished young artists, each, an outstanding virtuoso . . ."

The two superb Baldwin concert grands which travel with the Temianka Little Symphony wherever it goes are played by William Corbett Jones and Sylvia Jenkins. Throughout the evening, Mr. Temianka adds his own personal commentary to the musical proceedings.

Ontario Doctors Disapprove Of Union Clinic at Sault, Want to Test Alternative

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Medical Association set the record straight Tuesday by announcing, the second time, that it does not approve of closed panel clinics.

This step was taken, officials explained, because following a January meeting of the OMA council some newspaper headlines left the impression that approval was given to the closed panel clinic now being planned for Sault Ste. Marie by the United Steelworkers of America there.

The clinic, as advocated by the union, would provide a panel of salaried doctors for exclusive service to union members and dependents. About 25,000 Sault residents would be covered.

Dr. Patrick Bruce-Lockhart of Sudbury, chairman of the OMA council, said Tuesday: "we believe that experience will show this is not the best system."

"We wonder," he said, "whether the people of the Sault realize they will have to pay twice for the services of specialists outside the clinic." This is because the clinic would be closed to all doctors not on its permanent panel.

WOULD BE IMBALANCE

He said the clinic would create an imbalance in the Sault. "When you take 25,000 people out of the population—the ones belonging to the clinic—what type of service would the others get?" Other doctors, especially specialists, might not be willing to stay there with that loss of income.

He said it takes up 40,000 to "open one operative" plan was offered by the association in the Sault under a plan that would give patients a free choice of doctors — but it was rejected.

However, said Dr. Bruce-Lockhart, "this is the way industry and the union is entitled to do what it wants—but just want it straight."

Dr. R. J. M. Galloway of Toronto, OMA treasurer, said the association is trying to find an Ontario community, with 30,000 and 5,000 people, where the open comprehensive plan could be tried. The plan would provide medical services to every person in the community "so that we could learn a lot about a plan that takes in the whole family unit."

If the plan ever goes into effect, he said, it would "put all medical coverage of an entire community in Canada.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Tuesday, May 9, 1961

Senator William Brunt, deputy government leader, challenged the right of the Liberal majority in the Senate to amend a government bill granting the national revenue minister arbitrary powers in certain tariff decisions.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker reported that Premier Fidel Castro is taking a personal interest in ensuring the safety of Canadian priests and nuns in Cuba and that Canadian soldiers in The Congo have been issued heavier weapons for self-defence.

Labor Minister Starr said the government is making a wholesale revision of the Unemployment Insurance Act because use of appropriations out of general tax revenues to bolster the insurance fund is not enough.

The minister defended the government against an opposition non - confidence motion accusing the government of mismanagement of the fund and the act — a motion that fell to defeat along with a CCF sub - amendment in a vote closing a two - day supply debate.

Trade Minister Hees announced that talks between Canada and the United Kingdom on a British commitment to buy 12,000 tons of Canadian uranium in 1963-68 will open in Ottawa June 12.

ADDRESSES ENGINEERS

TORONTO (CP)—The key to raising the world's standard of living is development of more effective and more profitable production methods, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers was told Tuesday. David L. Hinsdon, managing director of Production-Engineering Ltd. of London, Eng., in a keynote address to the society's annual conference, said the advantages of automation could include higher plant utilization per dollar invested, improved quality of product and savings in labor.

Capreol Boy, 14, Wins New Trial In Murder Case

TORONTO (CP) — A 14-year-old schoolboy sentenced to be hanged May 31 on a charge of murdering a woman won a new trial Tuesday.

In two other capital cases before the Ontario Appeal Court one man won a stay of execution and another had his appeal dismissed.

The schoolboy — Anthony Wayne Yensen of Capreol—was granted a new trial on the ground Mr. Justice G. T. Walsh has misdirected the jury trying him for stabbing to death Mrs. Rose Kennedy, 24, of Capreol last Sept. 24.

Deputy Attorney - General W. C. Bowman agreed that the judge's charge may have worked an injustice on the boy.

For the third time, the appeal court granted a stay of execution to Louis William Fisher, 25, due to be hanged next week for the slaying last June 10 of Margaret Bennett, 36, in a vacant lot in suburban Scarborough.

The execution was ordered postponed to June 27 because the Supreme Court of Canada still is considering an appeal.

He is under sentence to be hanged May 22.

The girl's body, wrapped in a blanket and trussed with wire, was found last Sept. 19 by a workman digging in a construction trench.

Canadian Force In Congo Given Better Weapons

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian soldiers in The Congo have been issued with heavier weapons for self-defence than they had when they were first assigned to United Nations duty there, Prime Minister Diefenbaker told the Commons Tuesday.

He said the Canadians had light automatic weapons only for self-defence or to defend points of tactical importance.

Opposition Leader Lester B. Pearson, Liberal, said he was concerned that Canadian soldiers in the Congo have had to go there without adequate weapons.

Mr. Diefenbaker said the decision to equip the Canadians with heavier weapons had been made in view of recent attacks on other UN forces, and that the UN had direct responsibility for the safety of its troops, and that Canadian commanders had been given supplementary instructions.

"We are not going to resort to force only when normal discussion and negotiation with the Congolese authorities does not get them out of personal danger."

Mr. D. F. Fisher said the new heavier arms had been issued to the Canadians within the last few months, but he did not name or give the calibre of the weapons. They originally had only side arms.

Ex-Alouettes Quarterback Says He Was Frame Victim After Police Raid Motel

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP)— Miss Hodges, who dances under the name of April Flowers, were continued to May 16 by Judge Joseph Rolf. Trial of Carinci, charged with breach of peace for allegedly trying to prevent detectives from entering his apartment without a search warrant, also was continued.

Batterman said a mutual friend, Thomas Paisley, told him Monday night Carinci wanted to talk to him. They met in Cincinnati, and went to Newport where Carinci invited Paisley and Batterman for a steak dinner at his quarters.

Batterman said he became "groggy" after having a steak and a drink and that the next thing he remembers is being awakened when several people police officers, tore off my trousers and shorts . . . I recall seeing a woman in the room with the men when I was awakened. I have no idea she was and had never seen her before."

Batterman is the father of eight children. His wife, Mrs. Anna Batterman, said she was with him "all the way."

There have been charges of gambling, prostitution and liquor law violations in Campbell County for many years.

Castro Moves To Safeguard Priests, Nuns

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Tuesday Premier Fidel Castro is taking a personal interest in ensuring the safety of Canadian priests and nuns in Cuba.

He also announced in the Commons that Rev. Paul-Emile Chenard of Montreal has been released from a Cuban prison. He was one of four Canadian Roman Catholic priests imprisoned by Cuban officials.

Representations also were being made by the Canadian Embassy in Havana for the release from prison of John Darling, a Canadian citizen.

Mr. Diefenbaker said Father Chenard has been under arrest since April 1. The other three priests were released before Father Chenard.

The prime minister said that during the weekend there was a serious deterioration in the situation in Colon where many Canadian nuns are stationed. About 40 Canadian priests and 30 nuns were known to be in Cuba.

Strong representations were made by the Canadian Embassy to the Cuban government and Premier Castro personally appointed a special representative to investigate the question.

FIND CHILDREN

TORONTO (CP) — Richard Barclay, 11, and his sister, Wanda, 10, were found healthy but hungry Tuesday after leaving home 48 hours earlier. They told police they had lived on an apple and a bar of popcorn in a west-end High Park.

Spring Floods Spread Misery Throughout U.S. Mid-West

CHICAGO (AP) — Damaging spring floods spread across the low-lands of the United States' midsection today, bringing more misery and discomfort to thousands.

The worst flooding appeared in southern Illinois, Missouri, Indiana, Kansas and Kentucky. Thousands were homeless. Some communities were isolated. There was fear in some areas of typhoid fever from contaminated water. Some major and many secondary roads were closed. Businesses closed in many of the flood-stricken towns and hailed a holiday.

But fair weather was the immediate outlook for most areas and the crest appeared past in some sections.

Soldiers, sailors, civil defence workers, school boys and women worked to hold back the muddy waters from lapping into the low-land homes or spreading into business districts. The Red Cross and the Salvation Army were at the flood scenes to give aid and comfort and shelter.

Already thousands of acres of farm land are inundated. In Illinois, the Kaskasia River, which is fed by many streams in the central part of the state, was expected to crest today at levees near Vandalia. The water spilled over more than 60,000 acres of farm land before the crest hit. Many river were evacuated. Several thousand head of livestock, cattle and hogs were on the loose.

Hundreds of men, some volunteers, national guardsmen and navy personnel sandbagged the levees in Illinois. Many were evacuated by floodwaters of the west fork of the White River. The river was four feet above the town level and civil defence officials said the river was expected to crest at about 800 would be endangered if the levee broke.

In Centralia, Ill., residents were without drinking water Tuesday after the city's water supply pumps were submerged under 20 feet of water. The city's sewage disposal plant was destroyed by fire after floodwaters surged to a short circuit in a switch.

In Kentucky, floodwaters from the Salt River covered two-thirds of Shepherdsville but no serious problems developed. The contaminated drinking water supply was replaced with a supply in the town of 1,500 in the west central part of the state.

Anglican College Seeking Funds

KINGSTON (CP)—A $275,000 campaign for funds to aid the Anglican Church Women's Training College in Toronto was launched Tuesday by national campaign chairman George Beck of Toronto at the Anglican Synod of Ontario.

Earlier Tuesday, Rt. Rev. K. C. Evans, bishop of Ontario, said the rapid growth of civilization has created an increased need for clergy in cities without substantially reducing the need for clergy in country churches.

Kennedy's Plea to Papers To Censor Selves Criticized

DETROIT (AP) — Richard Nixon, stepping up his attacks on the Democratic administration, said Tuesday President Kennedy's call for self-censorship by the press will encourage government officials to conceal facts the public has a right to know.

The former vice - president, who kept silent during the first 100 days Kennedy was in office, is on a tour in which he has become increasingly critical of the man who barely beat him in November.

He chose the Detroit Press Club to discuss a speech Kennedy made to U.S. publishers in which he urged self-restraint when national security is affected.

"The plea of security," Nixon said, "could well become a cloak for errors, misjudgments and other failings of government . . . the whole concept of a free press as opposed to that of a controlled press."

Nixon said the president appeared to blame the press for the recent Cuban events."

"But would the results have been much different had the press failed to perform its traditional role?

"If a bad reporting job was done, was it entirely the fault of the press? And how can the press be expected to get at the truth when anonymous administration spokesmen keep contradicting each other?"

Queen, Philip Are Back Home

LONDON (Reuters) — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip arrived here by air Tuesday night after a triumphant official visit to Italy.

Officials of the royal household and government were on hand at London airport to greet the Queen.

The Queen's visit to Italy was regarded as a success beyond the expectations of both Italian and British official circles.

Everywhere she went enthusiastic crowds greeted her. In Rome she received one of the warmest welcomes ever accorded to a foreign head of state.

In her third and final speech Tuesday, the Queen said in Toronto that she and her husband left Italy with a "store of glorious memories" and she thanked the people of Italy for their "wonderful kindness and hospitality."

Charge Pair Evaded Tax On Stock Sale

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto lawyer Samuel Ciglen and stock promoter Morris Black were charged Tuesday by the RCMP on a charge of conspiring to defraud the government.

An RCMP official said the charge involved the sale of about 82,000,000 of Great Sweet Grass Oil Limited and Krol Oil Limited stocks.

In 1957, Ciglen was accused by an official of the United States Securities and Exchange Commission of making $6,500,000 profit in dealings in shares of the two companies.

Ciglen, president of Great Sweet Grass from March to October, 1956, denied the accusation. Trading in Great Sweet Grass stock was suspended on the American Stock Exchange and on the Toronto Stock Exchange in 1957.

Both appeared in court Tuesday and were remanded to June 26. Ciglen on $100,000 bail and Black on $50,000.

Income tax inspector Edward Hillhouse said he is the largest such case to come before Canadian courts.

FINED $50

BRAMPTON (CP) — John Thomas, 65, of Toronto, was fined $50 and costs Tuesday for careless driving in a Feb. 18 accident that killed his wife and the driver of another car. Magistrate R. I. Blain heard testimony that the vehicles crashed head-on as Thomas attempted to pass two cars. His wife Dora, 60, and Stanley Howard, 72, of Caledon, died.

Green and Aides Disagree On Publicity for Diplomats, Green Wanting More of It

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Green and his departmental advisers do not agree on how much publicity should be given to the work of Canadians in the foreign service, the Commons external affairs committee was told Tuesday.

Two members of the committee, Art Smith (CCF—Calgary South) and Fred Stinson (PC—York Centre), questioned undersecretary Norman Robertson about the lack of a full - time press information officer in the department's headquarters here.

Mr. Robertson said the department has speeded up the publication of its annual reports and extended the circulation of its weekly departmental publication. Mr. Smith said these booklets went to too limited a field of readers, when he described as mainly intellectuals.

Mr. Robertson said the work of the information division; concerned with publicity for Canada abroad and for foreign correspondents on visits to Canada but not with domestic publicity, is steadily increasing.

ISSUE RELEASES

Mr. Smith asked what steps the department took to create more press interests in its work. Mr. Robertson said the department put out press releases periodically, and also put out statements in the House of Commons.

Mr. Stinson said foreign trade officers got a good deal of publicity for their work but advertising is heard from foreign service officers in the diplomatic corps.

Mr. Robertson said that if NATO foreign ministers meeting in Oslo, were present he would agree unanimously with Mr. Stinson that there should be more publicity given to the work of Canadian diplomats. But, Mr. Robertson added, the diplomats are civil servants, and they worked without personal publicity.

Robert J. McCleave (PC — Halifax) said he had received notice from a veteran newspaper man who was overseas recently that some Canadian ambassadors are out of touch with Canadian affairs.

New Manual On Assessment Being Drafted

HAMILTON (CP) — Preparation of a new provincial assessment manual should be under way by late fall, Municipal Affairs Minister Warrender said here Tuesday.

He told delegates at the annual meeting of the Association of Assessing Officers of Ontario and the Institute of Municipal Assessors of Ontario, that the existing manual had "rendered excellent service through the years."

Hamilton Assessment Commissioner Norman Wilkes) described the city's legal dilemma in trying to apply business assessment to property "held in common," a term which means several businesses or persons have use of a single piece of property.

He said shopping centres where various stores share a parking lot are one example. He said the association had twice unanswered sought legislation to stop this "iniquitous loophole."

"We can either continue to press for changed legislation or bury our heads in the sand and forget," he said.

R. P. Quance of Simcoe was named president of the association Tuesday. He succeeds C. C. Bricker of Waterloo.

SAYS CLIENT BRUISED

TORONTO (CP)—Lawyer M. Robb said Tuesday two boarders he hired to examine a man allegedly beaten by police had found the man severely bruised. Albert Aquest, 36, was arrested Friday by police officers investigating the March 21 beating of Constable Max Blumsteel in a Toronto night club. He was charged with possession of an offensive weapon, two counts of bail—and illegal possession of narcotics.

Double Strength in 20 Days With 78-Second Exercises

VANCOUVER (CP) — A university professor has come to the aid of wrestlers with a system he says will double the strength but a dislike for exercise.

A routine taking slightly more than a minute a day would double your strength in 20 days, says Dr. Max Howell, assistant professor of physical education at the University of British Columbia.

Dr. Howell said Tuesday the series of 13 muscular contractions was developed by a German physiologists after 10 years of research.

"It's amazing," said Dr. Howell. "We researched the problem because we couldn't believe what we heard about it."

Dr. Howell and two assistants put 36 students on the routine and compared results with 30 others who took half - hour workouts lifting weights three times a week.

Results showed the students who took the routine increased strength faster then the weight lifters.

They also produced an average increase in strength of five per cent a day. After 20 days, when strength had doubled, the students stopped. Dr. Howell says the new muscle power was maintained by going through the routine two or three times a week.

The routine takes 78 seconds a day.

It includes pushing the hands together; pushing the back and shoulders against a wall; lifting arms out of drawing clenching fists and drawing them over the head; clapping hands tightly and extending fingers with arms outstretched.

Then bending and raising feet and head from a prone position, and pushing the body at a time against the wall; standing on floor with hands on heels while balancing against the wall; sitting with soles of feet turned toward each other and toes curled under.

There's nothing here for fat boys.

Dispute Over Teachers' Pay Leads to New Iran Election

TEHERAN (Reuters) — The Shah of Iran dissolved both houses of parliament by special decree Tuesday night, clearing the way for new general elections under a revised electoral law.

The Shah's dissolution order, broadcast throughout Iran, said the parliament was dissolved "in the protection of the nation's rights and to safeguard the constitution."

The government banned all demonstrations, gatherings, and mass meetings inside Tehran.

The dissolution announced in life in Tehran was liable to be punished, according to law, by imprisonment of a ring from two months to one year, the communique said.

The Shah's decree coincided with a government announcement that a police major has been arrested and accused of shooting a demonstrating high teacher last Tuesday—the incident which set off a wave of unrest.

Air Marshal Ali Amini had earlier presented a new government to the Shah.

The appointment of Jafar Sharif Amami, who resigned as premier May 3, fell after bitter criticism of the premier's handling of a "teacher" pay strike.

The shah's decree said new elections will take place "as soon as possible the "strong and reformist" Amini will be able to carry out many badly needed reforms in the country and end prevailing difficulties.

Lack of Privacy in Modern Housing One of Frequent Complaints States Expert

By ROD CURRIE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—One of the things most Canadians look for in a home, says architect John C. Parkin, is privacy. But few find it despite the fact that it can be acquired even on a comparatively small piece of property.

Lack of privacy in modern housing was one of the most repeated complaints he and his two colleagues heard as they toured Canada compiling a report on the design of residential environment for the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada.

Interviewed in his slick black and white and glass office in suburban Don Mills, Mr. Parkin, 39, recalled some other features of Canadian housing encountered by himself and Peter Dobush of Montreal, committee chairman, and C. E. Pratt of Vancouver.

Privacy, said Mr. Parkin, could be acquired with the use of shrubs, trees and walls and, in some areas, well-planned use of the natural contours of the land. He recalled that in comparing sample photographs of new housing taken in Winnipeg, Edmonton and Dartmouth, N.S., it was impossible to distinguish the hilly, east - coast town because bulldozers had been used with a heavy hand.

TREES AN ASSET

The committee, in its first report, said "there should be emphasis on the inherent natural individuality of the given site" and only in "special soil conditions is wholesale removal of trees warranted."

Mr. Parkin, winner of more design awards than any other Canadian architect, said he was "appalled" by the poor planning of the lower mainland of British Columbia. Vancouver needed "some broad approach to metropolitan government on a cap sheaf basis" to guide planning.

Montreal and Toronto, he found, were cities of contrast with Montreal making good progress in urban redevelopment, while Toronto's major strides were in suburban areas.

Montreal, with three sky-scrapers under construction, "was assuming the most truly urban quality of any centre in Canada" while the fringe areas were becoming a scramble of commercial, industrial and residential buildings.

One of the best designed areas was the Anderson Avenue development in St. John's, Nfld. Another was the Silver Heights development in St. James, Man.—"although it probably is located too close to the airport."

FAVORS ROW HOUSING

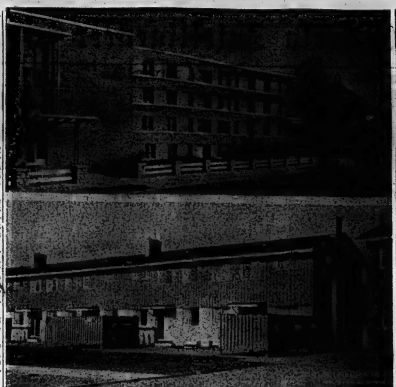
Row housing had been used to good advantage in St. John's and "we ought to investigate this type of housing more fully." Such housing in the Toronto suburb of Don Mills had proved popular and economical.

Probably the unwitting pioneer in this field were the hydrostone houses built hastily of stone to provide housing following the Halifax explosion of 1917. "They have survived, have not become slums and are quite attractive," Mr. Parkin commented.

Mr. Parkin was particularly critical of the "dull, drab rubber - stamp similarity" of much of Canada's post - war housing.

Besides being unattractive, this was not a healthy approach from a sociological point of view. One difficulty with most modern subdivisions was that they attracted only families of similar size, background, age, income and social position who were almost as similar as the homes in which they lived.

A MATURE BEST



This was bad for children who were deprived of the opportunity of associating with children of different social, economic and ethnic backgrounds. And other problem develops, Mr. Parkin said, "when children leave home and the elderly parents want to give up the home with its lawns, stairs and empty rooms but hesitate to break lifelong ties with friends, neighbors and church."

The well - designed development, he says, "should include high and low-priced homes of a wide variety of designs, apartment buildings and row houses skilfully intermingled to provide architectural punctuation marks."

Such an area would attract a greater variety of people, break the monotony and provide accommodation for those not wishing to own a home but wanting to remain in the neighborhood.

The committee blamed not only fellow architects but also the various levels of government, community planners and the general public. Thirty-two recommendations were made and R. D. Fox, public housing officer with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, was appointed to the institute as special assistant in charge of the implementation program.

Some of the recommendations were turned over to the provincial architectural associations for study and others are being handled by the institute in cooperation with the Town Planners' Institute, the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities and CMHC.

Montreal Paper Assails Toronto's Crime Troubles

"Crime in Metropolitan Toronto is at a record high, there is a bewildering rate of alcoholism and dope addiction, vice dicourtshes and divorce is breaking up homes at a faster rate than ever before. . . .

"If you've Toronto-bound for the first time and wondering when to get action, set aside 30 cents to pump a bellboy or doorman with. Otherwise it could take you half an hour instead of five minutes to get into the swing of things. . . .

"Metropolitan Toronto's crime rate was up nearly 15 per cent last year over 1959. There were 65,085 criminal offences in 1960. . . . All crime of violence in Metropolitan Toronto was up last year over 1959. . . .

"In the fashionable suburbs and just outside the metropolitan boundaries, gambling combines willingly risk big money to set up combinations of two and three joints to reap bigger money. . . ."

COMPARES TWO CITIES

In a separate story, The Star made this comparison of crime in Toronto and Montreal:

In 1959, Montreal had 24 murders, 10 attempted murders and 542 armed robberies or attempted armed robberies; Toronto had 16 murders, seven attempted murders and 623 armed robberies.

In 1960, Metropolitan Toronto had 23 murders compared with Montreal's 17 and 10 attempted murders to Montreal's nine. Montreal's holdups increased by 93 to 635; Toronto's increased by 139 to 762.

One story looked into the problems of alcoholism and drug addiction.

"Dismayed by the nightmare of drinking in Toronto and throughout Ontario, the provincial government pressed a survey on chronic alcoholism and worked and hoped for a cure.

"The province, population 6,160,000 with 1,600,000 of it in Metropolitan Toronto, had an estimated 85,000 alcoholics. H. David Archibald, executive director of the Alcoholic Research Foundation, predicted that if present trends continue the tragic array of hushes will increase to between 154,000 and 30,000 (3½ to five per cent of the population) by 1975.

"The government also is investigating drug addiction. Toronto is officially estimated to have more than 400 addicts.

Of the Toronto police department, Wardwell writes:

"Swamped by crime and vice, Metropolitan Toronto's police force has put all possible zest into the fight to maintain law and order.

"But thanks to repeated lessons of trigger - happiness, brutality and illegal detention by an over-zealous few over the years, the whole department of 3,190 men remains under consistant suspicion. One Toronto civil rights group is a self-appointed watchdog — trying to make sure that police proceed within lawful limits."

In a later article, Wardwell went back to 1956 and listed several cases of policemen being accused of manslaughter, brutality or corruption.

The final article counts 10 crime stories carried by the Monday editions of Toronto newspapers and adds:

"There was also an assortment of Toronto burglaries which acted thieves everything from a can opener to costly furs. There was a column devoted to drunkards and how to handle them. . . ."

Wardwell quotes Rev. Arthur Packman of the United Church of Canada as saying of Toronto:

"People are bored. They find life tedious. People turn to drink because they have no interests, no objectives. We are just a city of spectators. . . . Life in Toronto, I'm afraid, is rather dull."

Comments Wardwell:

"A visiting Mootreaier might deign to argue the point — at least as far as crime is concerned."

MINER KILLED

ELLIOT LAKE (CP)—Alfred Geinaris, 34, an unmarried Latvian-born miner, Monday was crushed to death by an ore car in the Pazel mine. The operator of a locomotive pushing the car told police he saw Geinaris' headlamp too late.

HOLD RED AGENTS

FRANKFURT (Reuters)—Police arrested an undisclosed number of alleged Communist agents in West Germany Monday. Although the total was not stated, the West German news agency DPA said 18 persons were arrested in Darmstadt alone.

TRIO PLANS

ICC leaders were invited to Xieng Khouang by the rebels. They were snubbed Tuesday in a meeting with lesser rebel negotiators at Hin Heup, on the front 53 miles north of Vientiane.

The Vientiane government again today sent a delegation to Hin Heup to confer with representatives of the Pathet Lao and Prince Souvanna Phouma, the salt-styled neutralist the rebels regard as premier.

Souvanna Phouma and the rebel radio contended the Laotians ought to be left to settle their own military and political affairs before the international truce teams move in to supervise the armistice.

More than 100 members of the ICC are waiting in Saigon, South Viet Nam, to move in once chairman Sen has cleared the way. They include armed Sikhs from India, Canadians and Pols.

HONG KONG (Reuters)—Pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels today demanded that the right-wing Laotian government accept tripartite talks to draw up rules for a cease-fire in the kingdom's civil war.

Pathet Lao radio, quoted by the New China news agency, said that until the cease-fire agreement was reached by the three Laotian factions — Pathet Lao, neutralists and rightists—"conditions are naturally lacking for the operation" of the international truce commission on Laos.

WON'T SEND TROOPS

ATLANTA (AP) — Governor Ernest Vandiver said Tuesday he obtained a pre - election pledge from President Kennedy that he would never send troops to Georgia to enforce school segregation. He added that he supported Kennedy only after he got such a promise. The disclosure came at a press conference as the governor joined other state political leaders in denunciation of a proposed civil rights bill which would have every segregated school system submit a plan for desegregation within six months.

a major accomplice in the Nazi extermination of 6,000,000 Jews.

Most of Meikmann's family, including uncles, aunts and cousins, were among the 134,000 Dutch Jews who died in the reign of terror. Only 6,000 of The Netherlands' Jewry survived, he is stated.

Meikmann himself was on the way to the Reisenstadt gas chambers when his death train was blocked at Torgau, on the Elbe River, by the fast-joining Soviet and American armies.

The witness told of "horrible sights" in his last few months at the Belsen camp and "even cases of cannibalism which I saw in the women's camp where they had no food at all."

He said, one prisoner reported that camp commandant Josef Kramer told the transport crews, "the more dead Jews you bring here the better."

Meikmann told of heroic efforts by the Dutch to help the Jews, even to calling general strikes and dangerously hiding children.

"That is known to the world through the diary of Anne Frank," Meikmann said, "but I should like to tell about one case."

He said a boy named Von Damm, about 10 years old, had hidden for a year, locked in a room and forbidden to speak save in the lowest whisper for fear neighbors would hear. He also was not allowed to walk around the room.

"He still spoke in a whisper. When he understood he did not have to do this any longer, he just ran around shouting."

"What happened to him?" assistant prosecutor Gavriel Bach asked.

"He was sent to Auschwitz three days later."

CRASH INJURES 16

France To Spend On Sports

PARIS (AP)—Jarred into action by the country's dismal showing in the last Olympics, the French government has gone to parliament with a bill aimed at turning willing Frenchmen into star athletes.

A five-year plan, which the de Gaulle government hopes will extend French "grandeur" to the playing fields, calls for a total outlay of $280,000,000.

The state proposes to pick up a little more than half the tab. Local governments and private groups will foot the rest.

The bill calls for 90 new stadiums, 310 swimming pools, more than 1,000 athletic fields, 923 gymnasiums and a long list of "diverse" installations.

Hitting Jim Gentile, Baltimore Orioles — became first ever to hit two consecutive grand slam home runs in majors, set record with homers in two innings and finished with nine runs batted in by adding sacrifice fly in 13-5 victory over Minnesota Twins.

Pitching—Herb Score, Chicago White Sox — allowed just two hits, neither figuring in runs, and struck out five while walking six in 4-2 victory over Cleveland Indians.

WANTS RELEASE

CALGARY (CP) — Guard Tony Pajackowski says he has been offered more than twice his 1960 salary by "more than one club in the American Football League" and is trying to get his release from Calgary Stampeders. Pajackowski, 25, was named the Western Conference's top Canadian player last year.

Loi, Ortez Meet in Title Bout

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Duilio Loi, 32, and Carlos Ortiz, 24, will carry their war of words into the ring here tonight when Loi's world junior welterweight title will be at stake in a 15-round match.

"I can beat Loi once every week," Ortiz was quoted as saying in a Milan newspaper Tuesday.

Loi also has been giving out statements about his ability to beat Ortiz.

This is the third match between the two men at the 140-pound class limit. Ortiz in the first meeting last June 15 won a split decision.

When they fought again in Milan before 65,000, two officials voted for Loi and the third called it a draw.

FISH HAVE CANCER

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — John A. Biggs, state game department director, said Tuesday that cancer has been discovered in the livers of hatchery-raised rainbow trout but there is no evidence to show the malignancy can be transferred to humans. An intensive study has been under way for nearly a year and while the liver cancer has been identified, Biggs said: "The most competent medical authorities I know have told me it poses no danger to humans."

San Juan Hottest In League

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Juan Marlins are the hottest club in the International Baseball League.

They have won six of their last eight games and have moved from the second division to within .406 percentage points of the league-leading Columbus Jets.

The Marlins overpowered Richmond Virginians 13-6 Tuesday night in a battle settled by the Marlins' five-run outburst in the sixth inning.

The loss shoved Richmond into third place, one game off the pace set by the Jets, who snapped a six - game losing streak by defeating Jersey City Jerseys 5-4 in the second half of a twin bill after dropping the opener 6-2. The Buffalo - Toronto and Rochester - Syracuse games were rained out.

San Juan ripped into five Richmond pitchers for 10 hits and came from behind by turning three hits, three walks, three wild pitches and an error into five runs.

Before that, the Marlins scored their first five tallies on home runs by John Glenn, Ron Plaza and Ken Mateosky. Jim Pisoni slammed a three - run homer for Richmond. Bob Milliken made his season won-lost record 2-0 with a two-hit, three-inning relief performance. Paul Erickson lost in relief. His record is 2-1.

In the second game of the doubleheader with Jersey City, the Jets piled up three runs in the first inning to give Ierry Alvin Jackson all the runs he needed to score his first victory against one loss. LARRY Elliot's homer produced all three of the Jets' first-inning runs.

Southpaw Rudy Arias won his second in as many decisions by beating the Jets in the seven-inning opener. Danny Kravitz contributed two home runs, good for three runs. His second broke a 3-3 tie in the sixth inning.

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP)—A lake whose waters are diluted with blood and grandiose dreams will provide the setting for this year's North American canoe championships.

Two centuries ago, Lake Banook, a three - quarter - mile fresh - water bowl now practically in the geographic centre of Canada's newest city, Dartmouth, was a waterway for raiding Indian parties.

During the same era the lake's frozen surface also provided a hockey battleground for soldiers garrisoned in Halifax and Dartmouth. Closing from Kingston, Ont., and Quebec City potwithstanding there are many who still maintain the lake was the real birthplace of Canadian hockey.

In 1826 construction began to incorporate Banook and a series of other lakes into an overland water system to carry cargo from Halifax Harbor to the Bay of Fundy.

The dream was bigger than the budget. The railway came along, finances petered out and the Shubenacadie Canal bubble burst in a crumbling mass of mortar, brick and stone. Its remnants are still visible.

In more recent years it has been the site of the International Ice Harness racing championships, but the North American paddling events Aug. 19 with some 60 to 75 United States and Canadian clubs expected to compete should be its biggest splash.

Crowds for the meet are the 38-year-old Mic Mac Amateur Aquatic Club and the 37-year-old Banook Canoe Club, whose clubhouses face each other across the narrowest neck of the lake.

It's conceivable that neither of the hosts will be represented in the six championship events. Their crews will have to pick up first, second or third placings in the Canadian championships in Ottawa prior to the North American. U.S. qualifiers will be chosen in a national meet in Washington.

The clubs are the only two active in paddling in the Maritimes. The North Star Rowing Club which uses Halifax Harbor for its courses has landed in recent years toward sculls. St. Mary's Canoe Club of Halifax dropped out of competition two years ago.

Interest in racing canoes hasn't fallen off, however. Jim Slayter, chairman for the North American meet and chief coach at Banook in previous years, says interest in canoe racing in the Dartmouth area alone has jumped threefold in the last five years. The combined membership of Dartmouth clubs is close to 2,000.

Six types of canoes, all of moulded plywood and all manufactured in Scandinavian countries, will be used in the August competitions. These include single and double kayaks, single and tandem canoes, the four-man canoe and the 15-man war canoe.

War - canoe competitions, listed only as an exhibition event, are the colorful specialty of local rivals. Oddly, kayaks are something relatively new here.

"You would think," says Slater, "the kayak would be old stuff on the Canadian scene, what with the Eskimo influence. Actually, it's a recent introduction and comes with Scandinavian immigration to this country."

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

It may not be a sign of the times but up in Sudbury at least the trend is from softball to fastball. One of that city's top loops, the Royal Trading Softball League, voted the other day to switch to the latter game.

Mounting strikeouts, no-hitters and few balls hit to either the infield or the outfield were the reasons given for the change.

A story in the Sudbury Star said: "With the addition of Bob Grier and Perry McCracken to the already powerful league pitching fraternity of Booker Thomas, Metri Sverky and Eelo Berdiacqua, many felt the fans would tire of seeing batters strike out."

In fastball the pitcher's mound is moved back 5½ feet. The batsmen are 80 feet and the ball is somewhat smaller than the type used in softball.

In Grier, McCracken, Thomas, Sverky and Berdiaqua, the Sudbury squads have a lot of the top cream of Ontario softball pitchers. Manager Harry Edwards of the Miss-Mill squad, said he had tried to get Ray Judd, the Lakefield ace, but was informed that he was leaving the Peterborough area.

No-hitters, one-hitters, two-hitters and so on have been of the concern of gardeners when it comes to Saturday over the past few years. Strikeouts usually went into double figures and some fine mound records were established by the city's ace hurlers.

But champagne, oysters and caviar can get boring with constant consumption and when this happens a change is an ordinary roast beef and trimmings fare is appreciated.

That apparently is what Sudbury fandom would like, and perhaps the Royal Trading Softball League is setting wisely, if unknowingly, in taking the twelve inch ball. It can revert at a moment's notice. Anyway teams are entering the OASA playdowns.

After all I suppose it is a thrilling sight to see a hurler out there on the mound mowing down opposition batters like a housewife slicing bananas. And there is no wear and tear on bats, gloves, infielders and outfielders. It is easy on score-keepers and coach on batting averages. There are no arguments and umpires forget the names they were labbed with the previous season.

The Sudbury fans know there is something more to the game than strikeouts garnished with a walk or two, and an occasional clout. Perhaps they would like to see an outfielder climb the ladder in a sensational homer-stopping catch. Or the thrill of a lightning fast double play, a close call at the plate and an umpire fingertipping the schnozzle of an irate coach or player.

You often hear coaches and managers say, "God, if I could only get so-and-so." Usually so-and-so is a topflight hurler along the lines of a Judd, a Zak, or a Johnson. And if you look up the records you will see that nearly all the top-bracket champions had hurlers that come within the ability range of the above-mentioned trio.

Where would the major baseball leagues be if the Spahns, Turleys, Lown, Lemon, Fords, Antonellis, Wynns, and other crack hurlers tossed no-hitters and threeshouts with the regularity of top softball hurlers. And what would Willie Mays, Mickey Mantle, Roger Maris, Ernie Banks, Hank Aaron and other batting men be doing for a living. Not to mention three-quarters of the umpiring staff.

Softball-wise, we in this city and district have been lucky in this respect. While the teams here have had and will have some excellent hurlers, there has been no really consistent strikeout kings on the rosters. True, there have been no-hitters and one and two-hitters pitched, but they were so spaced as to make them appreciated.

No one appreciates a no-hitter more than this reporter. But I like spinach too, say once a week, not as a steady diet. I like the smack of a bat meeting the ball, the home run, the double play and close decisions. These, I believe, form the major thrills of the great diamond games of softball and baseball.

Hits Two In Row

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

For a couple of guys with things to prove, Jim Gentile and Herb Score have got their points across in the American League pennant race.

Gentile, a slugger who made the grade last season but figures he has to prove he isn't a one-year wonder, Tuesday became the first major leaguer ever to crash two consecutive grand slam homers. He did it in Baltimore's 13-5 romp against Minnesota Twins.

And Score, the southpaw who has been trying to come back since that tragic injury of 1957, pitched a two-hitter Tuesday night as Chicago White Sox defeated Cleveland 4-2 and fled the cellar after losing seven straight.

A 20-GAME WINNER

Score, a 20-game winner with Cleveland in 1956, fell to a 2-7 record in 1957 when he was hit in the eye by a drive off the bat of Gil McDougald of New York's Yankees. In 1958 he had a 2-3 record and was 9-11 in 1959 after which the Indians traded him to the White Sox.

Detroit padded its first-place lodge to three games, although splitting a doubleheader with Washington. The Tigers won their initial game 7-2 in the opener, but lost the nightcap 5 - 4. Second place New York blew a three-run lead at Kadzas City and fell to Baltimore. Boston gets Angels beat Boston 8-7.

Gentile, 28, a lefty hitter who walloped 29 home runs last season after his conditional purchase from the Kansas City Athletics at St. Paul, returned to Metropolitan Stadium at St. Paul, Minnesota, and hit his stamp in the first and second innings. They came off Twins Pete Richmos and reliever Paul Giel.

TAKES LEAD

The two shots, both 410-foot baste, also gave Gentile a major league record with eight RBI in two innings. He finished with nine runs batted in, taking the AL lead with 30, and tied Mickey Mantle of the Yankees for the home run lead with nine.

Ron Hansen also homered for the Birds. He had 11 hits, eight for extra bases. Bob Allison belting two, Hal Naragon and Harmon Killebrew another for the Twins off Chick Estrada and Gordon Jones.

Score, 27, making his first start of the season, still had control trouble but pitched the sixth two-hitter of his career.

He didn't allow the Indians a hit until the sixth inning, when Jim Piersall tripled with one out, but then allowed their only runs on walks and Vic Power's two scratch hits.

HAD FOUR HITS

The White Sox had only four hits off Jim Perry but got the job done on the hitting of Jim Landis. He had two hits, one a tie-breaking, two-run homer in the eighth, drove in three runs and scored two.

Southpaw Don Mossi, after blanking the Senators on two hits in his last start, won his fourth without defeat for the Tigers with a four-hitter. He gave up the runs on consecutive homers by Willie Tasby and Geno Green in the fourth inning Joe McClain was the loser for a 3-2 record.

Tasby also homered in the second game for the Senators along with Geno Woodling whose seventh inning shot snapped it up. Bennie Daniels won his first with Dave Sisler's relief help. Paul Foytack was the loser.

The As, held to one run and four hits for seven innings, chased Whitey Ford and beat reliever Luis Arroyo with four runs in the eighth. Singles by pinch - hitter Don Lorsen and Frank Bauer, both ex-Yanks, and an infield out brought them home.

HERBERT WINS

Ray Herbert won it with a no-hit mopup by Jim Archer in the ninth. Tony Kubek and Bill Skowron homered for the Yankees, but Mantle was hitless for the fourth straight game.

The Angels won four in a row over the first time with an unearned run in the ninth on a throwing error by rookie Carl Yastrzemski of the Red Sox. Boston, twice coming from behind and blowing a 6-2 lead in between, had tied it 7-7 in the ninth on a two-run double by Jim Paglia. Orioli Eli Grba won it and Ted Wills lost, both in relief.

Starting pitcher Jerry Casale and Leon Wagner, Earl Averill and Gene Leek homered for the first seven runs by the Angels who have belted 26 in their 13 games at Wrigley Field. Yastrzemski's first major league home run made it 8-7. Total of 12—an average of four a game —for the cozy home of the Angels.

Sets Three Records

History-Making Hero Is Benched

By WHITNEY MARTIN

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Jim Gentile of Baltimore Orioles has made baseball history by hitting grand-slam home runs in two consecutive innings Tuesday. He gets his reward today — riding the bench.

"It's been our policy to take him out when the other team pitches a lefthander," Orioles manager Paul Richards said after Baltimore's 13-5 victory over Minnesota Twins. "I see no reason to change. The Twins were set to use southpaw Jack Kralick against the Orioles today.

Gentile, in addition to hitting the first grand - slammers in consecutive innings, bettered the American League mark of seven runs batted in consecutive innings held by himself, George Sisler and Vic Wertz.

Three others — Lou Gehrig, Tony Lazzeri (1936), Jim Tabor (1939) and Rudy York (1946), hit two grand-slammers in a game, but not back to back.

"I thought the only way I'd get in the record book was by breaking water coolers or something," Gentile said. "I'm not interfering obliquely to a reputation for temperamental out-

Take Over Second Place

Dodgers Win, Pirates Whip Giants

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Before San Francisco Giants' gut shy pennant ideas over the sudden comeback of Billy Loes as a starting pitcher, they better come up with an answer for the short starts of Jack Sanford, one of their expected big four.

While Loes has won three of four, including his first complete game in four seasons and first shutout in five, Sanford has dropped three of four. He's been rapped for 11 hits and 10 runs while failing to go the distance in either of his last two starts.

Sanford lost his second in a row Tuesday night, giving up five runs in the first inning at Pittsburgh as the Pirates took off on a 9-4 victory over San Francisco. That trimmed the Giants' National League lead to one game.

Los Angeles Dodgers took over second place with a 5-4 victory at Philadelphia in a game called after 9½ innings because of rain. Milwaukee belted Chicago Cubs 8-5 in the only other game played in the NL. The St. Louis - Cincinnati game was rained out.

Sanford, 31, a right hander ranked with Sam Jones, Mike McCormick and Juan Marichal as the Giants' top four starters, was lagged for five hits and gave up two walks in the Bucs' big first inning. Roberto Clemente drove in the Pirates' last four runs, hitting a two - run single off reliever Jim Duffalo for a clinching 7-0 bulge in the second inning and then banging a two-run homer off Ed Fisher in the seventh.

Southpaw Harvey Haddix won his second without defeat, but gave up a solo homer by Ken Bailey and needed Clem Labine's relief help in the seventh.

The Dodgers sent the Phillies to their eighth straight defeat behind the 5-hit pitching of Don Drysdale (3-3). Art Mahaffey (3-3) was the loser, giving up home runs by Ron Fairly and Norm Larker as the Dodgers scored in each of the first five innings.

Joe Adcock, who hit two homers, and Frank Bolling each drove in three runs as the Braves ended their losing streak at three. Bob Buhl, making his fifth start, won his first against two defeats with a four-hitter, two of them homers by Ernie Banks that drove in four runs.

Glen Hobbie (1-4) lost his third in a row when the Braves broke a 4-4 tie in the seventh. Charlie Lau doubled and scored on a single by Bolling, barely beating a throw to the plate by right fielder Bob Will in a contested call.

Outfielder Frank Thomas, traded to the Braves by the Cubs for Mel Roach earlier in the day, belted send Chicago to a fifth straight loss with a run scoring double.

Machen Hurls Challenge At Champion

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP)—Sid Flaherty, manager of second-ranked heavyweight contender Eddie Machen, had challenged world champion Floyd Patterson for a winner-take-all fight.

Patterson said last week that Machen and England's Henry Cooper do not figure in his 1961 title defence plans.

Flaherty said Tuesday: "We will fight Floyd in any state where a winner-take - all arrangement is possible.

Should my presence at Machen's manager prevent Eddie from getting a shot, I will gladly follow the same procedure as Liston's manager, without it necessary."

Sonny Liston is No. 1 contender. Patterson has said he will not meet him until Liston "is clean" of underworld connections.

Birmingham Lanark Will Play Here

LONDON (CP)—Two British soccer teams, Birmingham City and Third Lanark, play exhibition games in Canada this summer.

Birmingham, which arrives in Canada May 16, plays Montreal, Hamilton, Vancouver, Toronto and Victoria. The team will also play two games against Third Lanark in Toronto and Vancouver. Both teams will also play matches in the United States.

Birmingham, an English First Division club, has just completed a fairly mediocre season, narrowly escaping relegation to the Second Division.

The Blues — Birmingham wear blue-and-white uniforms —will take 16 players to Canada. They include former England centre-half Trevor Smith and inside - forward Jimmy Bloomfield, a recent £30,000 signing from Arsenal.

Third Lanark has had a good season, finishing third in the Scottish First Division. The club was promoted from the Second Division only three years ago.

Third Lanark was formed in 1872 and named after a famous Scottish regiment. It has won the Scottish Cup twice and the Scottish League championship once.

American Hoopster Trim Swedes

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The United States men's and women's basketball teams head for home today after winding up a triumphant tour with two romping exhibition victories over Swedish clubs.

All - American Jerry Lucas of Ohio State and former Iowa State ace Gary Thompson were out with minor ailments, but the men's team went to a 107-75 victory over the Stockholm All-Stars Tuesday night after the American girls had routed the Swedish national team 80-30.

It was the ninth victory without a loss for the U.S. men, who won eight straight games from Russian teams during their tour of the Soviet Union, including two from the Soviet team that went on to Belgrade last weekend and captured its third straight European championship.

TAL LEADS MATCH

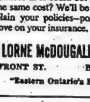
MOSCOW (AP) — The 20th game in the world chess tournament was adjourned again Tuesday, Mikhail Tal, the defending champion, had a definite positional advantage over Mikhail Botvinnik throughout the day but could not bring enough pressure to win. Botvinnik leads the tournament 11½ points to 6.5. Two draws or one victory in the remaining five games would give him the title.

Hillbilly Beef on Wrestle Card

Man Mountain Campbell, 240-lb. hillbilly from Bear Creek, Kentucky, will make his first main events appearance at the Belleville Arena Friday night.

The mammoth Campbell will team up with Frank "Farmer Boy" Townsend in the feature four-man wrestling entanglement. Opposition for the former — Hillbilly alliance will be the bearded Russians, Ivan and Nikita Kalmikoff.

The impregnable Man Mountain, he's the Yukon Eric of the south, and the high-flying Farmer Boy, should make an ideal team and between them make things plenty hot for the rough-house Ruskies.



The third Kalmikoff, Karol, will see action in the semi-final. Karol, he's reputed to own the meanest of the grunsome threesome, will vent his wrath on popular Italian ace, Tony Marino.

The opening heavyweight encounter will have two aspirants to Whipper Watson's British Empire laurels coming to grips. Stan Stasiak, the toughie from Arvida, Quebec, will charge at Toronto grappler Les Lyman.

The Trots

MONTREAL (CP) — Adios Alex, a five-year-old bay, turned in the fastest clocking of the year at Richelieu harness race track Tuesday night, winning the $2,000 featured mile pace in 2:04. It was the fastest race Adios Alex has ever run.

The Chicoutimi - owned horse paid his backers $23.10, $6.30 and $3.50.

Absolute Faith in Self Rewarded Helen Winston, Now Successful Producer

By DEIRDRE MUNGOVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—When Helen Winston came home from her London headquarters, she took a suite of rooms at a middown Toronto hotel. If anything, it was too small.

The Toronto-born film producer is a girl who likes to move around. As she talked about herself and her latest production, a 78 - minute film called Hand in Hand, she bounced from one room to another, always making sure to see "Bill" to a reporter each time she got back to home base.

A sparkling, mop-headed brunette who recently celebrated her 30th birthday, Miss Winston hasn't lost an ounce of the enthusiasm with which she tackled Hollywood in search of an acting career 12 years ago.

BUILT THEIRS SOME

In those days she was so anxious to be a success that she once had the police circulate a phony warning on a radio show in the morning, writing copy for a publicity agency in the afternoon and filling in as a switchboard operator for a film studio in the early evening.

Her absolute faith in her own ability paid off and in the next few years she appeared in more than 36 feature films. But it still wasn't what she wanted.

"Frankly, I got tired of playing the sweet girl friend of the girl who gets the boy, so I quit."

From there she went to Miami, Fla., where she worked as a television actress and production assistant; then back to Hollywood where she got a job producing her own network TV show called Wish Day, in which orphans were given a chance to take part in their own idea of a perfect day.

BOUGHT SCRIPT

It was in 1954 that she read an unfinished script written by the late Leopold Atlas. The story intrigued her so much she managed to get enough money to buy an option on it from his widow.

But it wasn't until 1959, when she took off for England, that her hopes of producing it as a film came to fruition. On her return in London she signed and called the film company with the largest ad in the telephone book.

Associated British Pictures agreed to back her financially providing she could match their contribution of $100,000. She did.

What's more, she lined up a notable list of performers, including Lionel Jeffries, Sybil Thorndike, John Gregson and Finlay Currie.

The result is a film that

PRODUCES FILM

Toronto-born Helen Winston has won praise from her latest production, a 78-minute film called Hand in Hand. It was released in February and already has made a profit. Miss Winston started an acting career 15 years ago and appeared in more than 35 Hollywood feature films before turning to film production in London. (CP Photo).

delves into the problems of two children — a Roman Catholic boy and a Jewish girl who find their friendship threatened by religious intolerance.

Since its release in the United States in February, Hand in Hand has won six awards, including the Golden Globe for the film best promoting interna-tional understanding.

GIVEN KEY TO CITY

Miss Winston has received the key to the city of San Francisco and letters of praise from Eleanor Roosevelt and Senators Jennings Randolph and Jacob Javits, who had the film shown on Capitol Hill.

On her visit to Toronto to help promote the movie and to renew ties she found it hard to ask and keep on asking. Just say "I'm going to do the best I know how." It's all a matter of energy and application of energy.

"The tragedy of our times is that everybody has energy but they don't know what to do with it and they have too many negative thoughts."

Suzie Wong Was Overlooked In Fanfare of Strumpets

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Around the lots . . . Four blogrophers are on the Clark Gable trail, but fear they'll miss their quest. Only a half dozen persons knew Gable and they're dead or not talking . . .

Universal changed the title of the Kirk Douglas - Rock Hudson outburner from Day of the Gun to The Last Sunset and dropped all western trappings from the ads . . . And will Shirley Maclaine's Spinster tell better as Two Loves? MGM thinks so.

In an academy year that sounded like a fanfare of strumpets, how come Suzie Wong was overlooked? . . . Nice direction in such Pleasures of His Company: Debbie Reynolds' tresses."

Squirt Bottles Are Hazard, Shoe Polish Bad Hair Spray

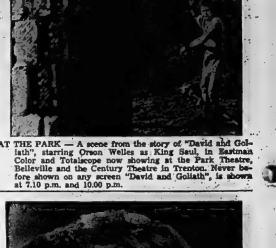
By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Last television become too heady about its accomplishments, here are a few stories about TV-related incidents on the other side of the screen:

Garry Moore uses his real surname, Morfit, in his private life, and it is his habit to lounge around his suburban New York home on many weekends in pajamas and dressing gown.

Recently his wife summoned a guest to the home to the Morfit home to fix a flat tire on her car. Garry answered the door bell and accepted the garageman's bill.

A few days later, a friend reported the garageman was circulating a choice bit of gossip: "You know the Morfits? Well, I went up there Saturday to fix their flat. Guess who answered the door — in pyjamas? Garry Moore!"



Many household and grooming aids advertised on TV these days come in squirt bottles: deodorant, hair starch, insecticides, shaving cream, toothpaste and deodorants.

My mother, a little late for an afternoon bridge party last week, grabbed what she thought was her bottle of hair spray and applied the liquid thoroughly. Then she discovered she had given her hair a heavy dose of black shoe polish. A neighbor made the same mistake except that she matched the container of liquid used to make a room smell like a pine forest.

NBC postponed Tuesday night's The Renegade, an unsponsored Civil War story made originally as a pilot film, to put on a new program about the Eichmann trial.

AT THE PARK — A scene from the story of "David ahd Goliath", starring Orson Welles as King Saul, in Eastman Color and Totalscope now showing at the Park Theatre, Belleville and the Century Theatre in Trenton. Never before shown on any screen "David and Goliath", is showing at 7.10 p.m. and 10.00 p.m.

AT THE BELLEVILLE DRIVE-IN — Academy Award Winner (Best Actor of the Year) Burt Lancaster plays an American staying at a British r'd hotel, where he is torn between his admiration for the hotel owner (Wendy Hiller) and his ex-wife (Rita Hayworth) who visits him. "Separate Tables" a United Artists release opens tonight at the Belleville Drive-In Theatre. Read bit in "Marlais 'O' Prison Camp"; featuring Jack Warner and Anthony Steele.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Thursday, May 11, 1961

General Tendencies: So many new, interesting ideas are zooming through your subconscious and you have so much enthusiasm to make them a reality that not a moment of this precious day should be lost in inaction. Go after what you want and be sure you look for new outlets instead of concentrating upon the usual and the routine.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) You now realize exactly what to say and do in order to get greater consideration at a distance from those with whom you have any alliance. Make it a point to dress in good taste and be off to social affairs to get best results.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) At last you are able to get the information you require from key people, so be sure not to waste a moment in going after it. Relax in P.M. at your TV or get out to a good movie, some social affair that is not too taxing.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Now you have a chance to get together with the individuals who can best assist you to realize your fondest desires, whether of a personal or business nature. Be particularly sociable — this evening and widen circle of friends.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) Public affairs can be handled most effectively today, but you must be careful not to be extravagant with your money or you lose a great deal. Dine out elegantly in P.M. and then off to the social affairs that most suit your mood.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Important you do not lose any time today in going after those interests that are vital to your welfare and success. New contacts are very desirable, but be sure you express yourself briefly and clearly and listen to advice given.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) If you would increase abundance and work more pleasantly with others, it is important you now are most careful and considerate in all that you do and say. You will find that the evening is most promising where romance is concerned.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Come to a far better understanding with associates during the day and hit upon the right methods for achieving greater success. P.M. Take your loved one out to dinner, the theatre, etc.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Daylight hours are fine for all sorts of work and important activities so you would be very intelligent to lose not a moment's time. However, take it easy in the evening and be sure to take any health treatments you need.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) This is one of the most ideal days to contact those persons who can assist you to commercialize on your special talents. Then the evening is fine for your particular type of recreation, cultural pursuits. Have fun.

Capricorn (Dec. 23 to Jan. 19) Take time to assist close ties with their plans, then be sure you set the wheels in motion where your particular ventures are concerned. Plan far into the future. Evening is fine for entertaining at home or just taking it easy.

Aquarius (Jan. 24 to Feb. 19) This is just the type of day most appreciated by Aquarians when you can get out and see the right people, begin an upturend in all of your important affairs. Get the assistance of good associates, too. P.M. Amuse yourself — be happy.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Important you become more efficient in your work, seek a larger income and are very careful and wise in the handling of funds. Start a fine new way of budgeting. P.M. Get your work organized properly for the future.

If your child is born today . . be, or she, will be one of those unusual people who are forever talking about travel, big business, etc., adventure, but the subconscious is actually rooted to the surroundings at birth and accumulating a sizable security. Therefore, you're sure you give as solid and substantial an education as you can to insure the degree of success that is considerable in this chart.

BATSMDE CUBS

April was a busy month for the Cubs, according to the report received from A.C.M. Mrs. Betty Moase.

Senior Sixers Bill Fell and Vince Moase, Sixer Bob Chalmers, Cubs Grant McLeod, Larry Brown, Garry Cooney, John Latchford and Sixer Bob Six, were taken to the Belleville Fall Fair. Adam Chalmers provided transportation for the firemen, who have always shown interest in Cubs and made the visit educational and thoroughly enjoyable.

Cubs Bill Fell, Dave Moase and Scouts Bob Cone and Garry Millar, presented themselves in full uniform at a special meeting of the Cub and Scout monday. They described their uniforms and explained the badges to the ladies. The boys were certainly a good example of Bayside Cubs and Scouts. Bill Fell was suffering an attack of flu but managed to get through the evening.

Badges won during the month were: Guide, Vince Moase; Observer, Bill Fell, Vince Moase, Secretary, Dave Moase, Allister; Swimmer, Vince Moase; Bob Chalmers, Gardener Ron McAllister, Cub Dennis Holtwich. We wish to thank Sergeant Bond of the RCAF, Chick Holtwich (group chairman), Adam Chalmers (secretary), and Laurie Button for looking after our boys and making our meeting a reality. These gentlemen have given a great deal of time and assistance. We are very grateful and hope we will meet again next swimming season.

The Green Six was the highest for the month.

District Commissioner Phil Rivers informs us that under the supervision of ADC Mrs. Lillian Ashley, eight leaders qualified in the Leaders' Troop Scouters' Course, and nine-teen in Akelas Course. They are: Scout Leaders Fred Partridge, Corbyville; Eugene Beamer, 11th; Alf Murray, 9th; Dewin Whittle, 9th; Gordon Cook, 9th; D. L. Sullivan, 5th; Harold Jenkinson, 1st; W. Arpott, 5th.

Cub leaders: Mrs. Akey, 6th; Miss Penny Cabcra, 4th; Mrs. Helen Wilson, 13th; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Hollister, 11th; C. Belch, 11th; Dorothy Lochhead, 11th; Martin Larne, 9th; John Jones, 11th; John Lucas, 9th; Sandra Reynolds, Corbyville; John McKinnon, Avondale; Charles Hopkins, Parkdale; William Adams, 5th; Keith Daniels, 9th; David Neal, 5th; Wilma Taylor, 7th; George Lapp, Melrose; Roy Pearson, 5th.

The courses ran Friday evening and all the leaders got the objective in the most efficient leaders for our Cubs and Scouts. We commend all our leaders for their devotion to the Scout movement.

Secretary Ted Edgson has just published his totals for uniformed members for 1961. Previous year's figures are in brackets. Cubs 786 (774); Pack Scouters 29 (34); Scouts 471 (411); Troop Scouters 50 (46); Rovers 5 (Nil); District Staff 5 (Nil); Total 1,346 (1,264). This is nearly three times greater than the overall percentage for Canada. Further comment, we feel, is not necessary.

SWIMMING

Chairman Lew Andrews announces that on Saturday, May 20th will conclude the classes for this season. The following boys qualified for badges:

Cannot Bar James Hoffa From Canada

BRANTFORD (CP) — Brantford Labor Council Tuesday answered the council's request that Teamsters U.S.A. boss James Hoffa be declared an undesirable alien and banned from Canada.

The labor council asked city council in a letter to promote the exclusion from Canada of the United States businessmen "convicted and sentenced for taking part in a criminal conspiracy to rig bids, fix and fix prices."

The letter asked: "If Hoffa is barred, why not those 980,000-to-$126,000 - a - year representatives of free enterprise?"

Immigration Minister Fairclough replied to the council's request that Hoffa had no criminal record on which he could be kept out of Canada.

amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act will be introduced to restore the full effectiveness of the scheme.

A major revision of the act—forecast in the throne speech last November — is being considered because approximations out of general tax revenues would not be enough to bolster the insurance fund, Mr. Starr said.

In other business, the Commons heard Trade Minister Hees announce that Anglo - Canadian talks will open in Ottawa June 13 on a British commitment to buy 12,000 tons of Canadian uranium in 1963-66.

OTTAWA (CP)—City Tourist Director Gerald Gelbert complained Tuesday night that some Ottawa merchants are discounting American money by as much as 10 per cent. The tourist and convention committee noted that the current bank discount on United States funds is less than three per cent.

Green Triumphs NATO Goes Out To Meet World

Will Cease Huddling Like Old Man in Storm

OSLO (CP) — Canadian External Affairs Minister Green in a long time has been hammering at the theme that NATO should not huddle in on itself like an old man in a storm.

Instead, it should go out to meet the world and all its problems, not merely those affecting the alliance directly.

What possible influence, he demanded, could the 15-nation alliance have in the 98-member United Nations, if it acted as a bloc? This could only serve to make the Africans and Asians suspicious.

At the Oslo NATO meeting which concluded Wednesday, Green got powerful support from U.S. State Secretary Rusk, British Foreign Secretary Lord Home, Foreign Minister Lange of Norway, Foreign Minister Krag of Denmark, and even Foreign Minister Couve de Murville of France.

For the first time, it can be said, the alliance crawled out of its defensive shell and began to look at all world problems in the light of how what it might do about them.

OPENS NEW ERA

The Oslo meeting may have been the dawn of a new era for NATO.

Whether if NATO can become an extrovert instead of the introvert it has been, the Communists are in for a much harder time in the political, economic and military ideological fronts of the world mentioned in the NATO communique.

Also included in the communique was the pact which remainly concerns Canada now in international affairs — disarmament.

The meeting expressed the hope that the talks between the United States of consultations with Russia on mutually acceptable proposals will permit early resumption of disarmament negotiations about the end of July.

The NATO ministers regretted the "negative attitude" of Russia in the current Geneva talks on cessation of nuclear testing.

Green said the Canadian delegation was prepared to accept the meeting, chiefly because of the "constructive approach taken."

Those in Norway where the meetings were held say Norwegians feel the government hasn't been as definite as it could have been and

Bomb Sabotage Rumored Cause Of Plane Wreck

ALGIERS (Reuters) — A French Army column and an investigation team today headed into the Sahara desert where a French airliner crashed mysteriously Wednesday, killing all 78 persons aboard.

There were rumors of possible bomb sabotage but an Air France spokesman said: "We have not yet received any information to enable us even to guess at the cause."

The casualties included the wife, three young children and mother of Alan W. Lukens, charge d'affaires at the American Embassy in Bangui, Central African Republic.

The Super-Starliner, a long-range version of the Super-Constellation, crashed 60 miles north of the oil town of Edjele near the Libyan border while on a flight to Marseille from Brazzaville, capital of the former French Congo.

Air France said 69 passengers and nine crew members were aboard and issued a second provisional passenger list showing there were 18 babies and young children on the plane.

DUKE AMONG VICTIMS

The passengers, mostly Frenchmen and African, included the Duke de Montesquiou, 53-year-ok French business executive; Ahmed Mangue, education minister of the Chad Republic, and A. R. Gonandja, planning director of the Central African Republic.

The wreckage was sighted Wednesday after a fleet of search planes scoured the desert. An inquiry team flew from Paris to an airfield northwest of Edjele and went to the crash scene.

Shortly before the crash, pilot R. M. Boulnier, 40 - year - old brother-in-law of former French defence chief Gen. Paul Ely, radioed from over Edjele that "all is well on board."

Reports from Algiers said there had been no warning from the plane of any trouble.

U.S. TO PLEDGE NO NEW MOVE AGAINST CUBA

Believe Kennedy To Give Assurance

WASHINGTON (CP)— President Kennedy likely will inform Prime Minister Diefenbaker next week that the United States has no further plans for unilateral action in Cuba.

Authoritative U.S. sources said Wednesday Kennedy will wait only willingness on the part of all or a majority of the Latin American countries to work together to isolate Fidel Castro's regime through a diplomatic and economic quarantine.

These sources described the American-backed Cuban rebel invasion of April 17 as "out of character" and as "aberration" of U.S. foreign policy. Canada and other allies would be assured the U.S. has no plans for any similar adventure.

The Latin American situation likely will be a major topic at the Kennedy-Diefenbaker talks when the president makes his first state visit to Ottawa May 16-18.

WELCOME IN OAS

American insistence that the U.S. administration would be welcome in Latin America if it could join the 21-country Organization of American States, the main inter-American body, dominated by U.S. and Latin America. The decision to invite Britain and Canada, Kennedy would do so arm-twisting.

The U.S. would like to see Canada dig down in its pockets and help support Latin American progress," the $500,000,000 alliance - for - progress Kennedy is pushing. But Latin American countries in their drive against poverty want expansion.

One qualified informant suggested that if Canada joins the western hemisphere consular committee, "the northern delegation would be able to exert greater influence over U.S. policy in the Caribbean and other Latin American hotspots.

The informant said Canada has indicated that the plan to overthrow Castro because the Americans are meddling and Canada had no direct commitment in the Latin American area.

But Diefenbaker in a statement in the British Parliament two days after the invasion was launched said:

"The United States' peace of this hemisphere affects us here in Canada."

Will Oppose Any Meddling In Cuba

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—The Brazilian Government, pressured by the United States to take a stand against the Castro regime of Fidel Castro, said Wednesday it will oppose any meddling by foreign powers in Cuba.

Foreign Minister Afonso Arinos said Brazil is against "any kind of foreign interference, directly or indirectly, (taken) in order to put an end to Cuba any form of government."

This statement from the Janio Quadros' answer to a U.S. appeal for joint action against the Castro government in the name of the Western Hemisphere.

It was considered a rejection of the U.S. contention that Cuba has established a Soviet-type government in Cuba.

Arinos told reporters earlier this week that Brazil would revive its friendly relations with Cuba if Castro proved that Soviet Union linked into the Communist orbit. But at the same time Arinos said the government had found no evidence that Castro had turned Communist.

Flee by Canoe From Prison

ELLIOT LAKE (CP) — Two youths who Wednesday became the first prisoners to escape from the new Quirke Lake reformatory there recaptured 12 hours later.

Stanley Silber, 17, and Richard Eddy, 18, both of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., escaped in a canoe stolen by a guard. Police found the Serpent River to Quirke Lake and were spotted by two fishermen. They reported them to police. They were picked up as they entered the bush.

British Lady Itches for Fleas, Looks to Russians for Supply

LONDON (AP) — Lord Rothschild's sister has worked out an exchange of fleas with Russia.

"They are grateful to us for our fleas and we for theirs," Miriam Lane, "and we are very grateful to the Russians for their fleas."

Mrs. Lane, like her father is one of the world's leading authorities on the flea. The author of 25 papers and four books on the subject, she has her base of operations at the British Museum, to which her father left his collection of more than 1,500 species of fleas.

"It will not be long before we have an example of them in every kind of flea there is," she reported.

She said that before her deal with the Russians, they possessed specimens of 96 per cent of the world's 2,000 known types of fleas.

"Most of these are rare and found only in Russia," she said. "At last we are to get them, with the help of four entomologists scattered over the Soviet Union."

One specimen she badly wants is the marmot flea, a truly elusive type.

"They are terribly, terribly hard to find," said Mrs. Lane. "They are mainly in Russia."

U.S. Holds Cuban Invasion Survivors Captive on Isle

Editor's note: For 16 days during the ill-fated anti-Castro invasion of Cuba Ben Price worked at Guantanamo Bay naval base. The following story is based on what he saw and heard during his investigation of problems in the invasion's aftermath.

By BEM PRICE

WASHINGTON (AP)—There is reason to believe that the United States is holding survivors of the Cuban invasion forces incommunicado on Guantanamo, you will—on a Caribbean island.

There also is evidence that the U.S. troubles with communism in Central and South America are just beginning.

The first rumor about the U.S.-held survivors of the invasion, some of whom were reportedly U.S. servicemen, reached the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay soon after the military effort collapsed.

The grapevine there is so efficient that a number of activities in Havana, 600 miles west, sometimes reach the base before they are broadcast by the Castro regime.

Within hours after the grapevine report of U.S.-held survivors reached the base, the Castro regime from the abortive invasion—who were being interrogated in Havana on television—began talking of a particular island, Vieques.

They said they had been trained for the invasion at the U.S. marine base at Vieques, which is just a 30-minute helicopter ride from San Juan, Puerto Rico.

While the rumor about the Vieques prisoners was seeping into Guantanamo, it was also circulating in San Juan and New York.

A U.S. Navy officer talked by radio to the naval station at Vieques. Newspaper reporters men wanting to check on the rumors could be admitted to Guantanamo.

The answer was that no one

Near-Record Flood Crests Push at Weakened Levees

CHICAGO (AP)—Near-record flood crests pressed against weakened and soggy levees in sections of the middle western United States flood basin today as workers toiled around-the-clock to hold back the surging waters.

Flood conditions appeared the most serious in the southern Illinois, where six counties have been designated disaster areas.

Although swollen rivers and streams plagued parts of Indiana, Missouri, Kansas, Kentucky and Tennessee, the threat of major flooding eased. Skies were generally clear over the Ohio Valley flood belt.

The floods, in less than a week, have caused 25 deaths, injured more than 100 persons and forced some 1,250 families from their homes in Indiana, Missouri, southern Illinois, Kansas and Kentucky. Property damage runs into the millions of dollars.

Temporary under - pinnings, flood fighters in Lawrenceville, Ill., were reinforcing a levee against the flooding Embarrass River. National Guard units were on duty in Lawrenceville and Illinois town of 5,500 Wednesday while Army engineers dispatched to other critical areas.

At New Athens, about 25 miles south of Belleville, Ill., a rain-swollen Kaskaskia River required water through the area and the 2,000 residents started a evacuation operations.

New Drugs Relieve Cancer But Are in No Sense a Cure

TORONTO (CP) — New chemicals have been found to fight cancer, Dr. Ross Pritchard told Wednesday they in no way constitute a cure.

Dr. W. B. Barton, instructor in medicine at the University of Western Ontario, London, Ont., said in a speech to the Ontario Medical Association the drugs give temporary relief only. Surgery and radiotherapy were still the most effective treatments.

Dr. J. A. McCredie, also of London, said the chief value of chemicals is to decrease the number of cancer cells present following an operation and to control pain in patients with advanced growths.

Dr. D. C. Cameron, physician-in-charge of the Montreal General Hospital, gave a similar picture in the use of antibiotics.

"Too often drugs are prescribed for the wrong reasons, used indiscriminately with no clear idea of what effect we propose they are likely to serve," he said.

He said Canada's annual expenditure of about $25,000,000 for drugs "represents a waste of needs by far any likely demand for serious purposes, and furthermore, many of these drugs are dangerous."

Delivering a paper prepared by himself and Dr. H. A. Warner, also of the Montreal General, he said Canada's antibiotics has become immense and dynamic.

"It is not surprising that many doctors are frankly bewildered when faced with the impractical decisions which arise in treating individual patients with these drugs."

Since penicillin was discovered 15 years ago, several thousand antibiotics had been developed and "only 600 showed enough promise to justify detailed characterization and less than two dozen proved useful to doctors.

Dr. Cameron said doctors who think in bacteriological terms are more likely to have success with the drugs.

He said a clinical diagnosis of pneumonia or tuberculosis is not enough when prescribing antibiotics. It must first be established that the organism is sensitive to the particular drug before it is prescribed to treat the ailment.

Dr. Cameron said that before prescribing an antibiotic a doctor should keep in mind: 1. The suspected activity of the drug against the organism causing the infection; 2. Side—and after effects.

Railway Union Head Denounces Toronto Rival

TORONTO (CP)—William J. Mahon, national president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers (CLC), called Wednesday for support of Toronto Mayor Larry Stockwell, chairman of the union's Local 26.

Stockwell, leader of a group in the 1,200-member local demanding secession from the national body, failed to get support for his policy at the local's Toronto district council meeting.

Friction between the local and the union has been simmering since March when members of the local charged the national office had hand-picked delegates to the Brotherhood convention in Edmonton next September to ensure a pro-Smith group.

Mr. Smith denied the charges, imposed a trusteeship over the local and seized its books. Mr. Mahon was charged with five counts of breaking the constitution and will face a hearing in Ottawa June 5.

The 40,000-member CBRT represents railway employees, employees on Canada's major railways, personnel on some ships, truck drivers and warehouse employees.

Buddhist Monk Found Guilty Of Murder

COLOMBO (Reuters) — A Buddhist monk, Somarama Thero, was found guilty Wednesday of the murder of Ceylonese Prime Minister Solomon Bandaranaike in September, 1959.

Along with two other persons, Buddharakkhita Thero, a former Buddhist high priest, and a businessman, H. P. Jayawardene, he also was found guilty of conspiracy to murder.

Sentences are expected to be passed today.

QUEBEC FARMER WAS PAID $3,793 TO CHANGE SIDES

Payment Was Made By Union Nationale

QUEBEC (CP) — Honore Pelletier, 55-year-old farmer from St. Pacome, Que., said Wednesday he was paid $3,793 for without a statement saying he was switching political allegiance during last summer's provincial election campaign.

He told a royal commission inquiry into the former Union Nationale administration he negotiated the deal to find out whether it was really true the UN "bought off consciences."

Mr. Pelletier said the money was from the Liberal party to the Union Nationale administration. Later, he said, he was told on the Quebec Liberal organization in the Beauce City and told them the full story.

Earlier, Hubert Ducharme, 68-year-old retired farmer from Lacharme, (UN — Laviolette) told the commission he operated two farms without having to contribute the provincial government between 1955 and 1960, and collected sales commissions.

COULDN'T REMEMBER

Mr. Ducharme said he could not remember how much his firms collected in commissions from the provincial government. He said, The commission is to question Mr. Ducharme's accountant soon for details.

The royal commission, appointed by Premier Lesage, is looking into the activities of the Union Nationale government between July 1, 1956, and July 1, 1960—the last five years of a 16-year UN administration.

The commission earlier inquired into the sale of the Quebec Hydro - Electric Commission's Montreal gas system to the privately-owned Quebec Provincial Gas Corporation. This phase was conducted in Montreal and Quebec City hearings.

Present sittings of the commission have been adjourned until next Tuesday.

Liberal Premier Jean Lesage won a sweeping victory in a political meeting last June 6 and it became one of the most controversial issues in the campaign.

Mr. Pelletier, an official Liberal candidate in the 1956 provincial election, said former colonization minister Antonio Talbot Damase Bergin gave him a $3,000 check to reimburse him for maining $593 in cash and some travelling expenses also were paid, he said.

The commission heard H. P. Thestone, president of Automotive Products Limited of Montreal, say his firm had made out a $2,000 cheque to pay for commissions that were paid on the purchases of two excavator draglines.

Mr. Pelletier, whose story day night, was found guilty of his other clothes tangled in a barbed wire fence.

Ministers Meet At Geneva For Laos Conference

Western Powers Said Ready to Take Seats

GENEVA — The Big Three Western powers were reported ready today to take their seats as East-West conference about the future of Laos opening here Friday. The decision apparently was based on word received in London today that organized fighting has ceased in the jungle kingdom.

There was no official confirmation from the United States, Britain and France that they would drop their previous conditions to participating in the conference if a cease-fire was not settled.

But sources close to the Western delegations said that, in view of the London news from Laos, they probably would agree to sit down at the conference table at the UN palace of nations Friday with their Soviet opposites.

Canada's External Affairs Minister Howard Green arrived here from Oslo today and said he hopes Laos can be cut off from outside pressure.

GREEN HOPEFUL

Green told reporters at the airport: "We hope that the conference will produce agreed arrangements which will enable Laos to remain unified and neutral Laos to live in peace with its neighbors and to resolve its internal disputes within the framework of political institutions, consistent with the traditions of the population."

Green said: "We also hope that provision will be made at this conference to insulate Laos from outside pressures."

A foreign office spokesman in London said an assurance that organized fighting had stopped arrived here from the Polish-Indian Canadian International Control Commission.

The commission's job is to verify and supervise the truce ordered between Laotian government and Communist-controlled forces on May 3.

In making his announcement, Green said Ambassador would there may be new outbreaks of fighting.

"Communications are very bad," the Britton said, "and it may be days before reports of fighting will still occur."

TALKS SUCCESSFUL

Senator Sen, Indian chairman of the commission, flew back from the rebel base of Xieng Khouang and said he had "successful" preliminary talks with the rebel leaders on a cease fire.

In Vientiane, meanwhile, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan told the pro-Western cabinet only Wednesday that the Communist-led rebel artillery was still pounding his troops', position in the Tha Thom area.

The deputy premier, military strongman of the government of Boun Oum's regime, said that, as a result, the government's 11-man delegation would leave for the conference Friday. Phoumi is the delegation.

W. Averell Harriman, President Kennedy's personal envoy at the conference, will be large, arrived in Geneva with a delegation that would afford official news will be coming soon. He cited the presence of Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, who arrived Wednesday night, as a hopeful indication of the conference, to which 14 countries were invited, is back his view.

Gromyko is to dine tonight in

Says Strikes Can Be Expected In South Africa

CAPE TOWN (Reuters)—Justice Minister Francois Erasmus said Wednesday that strikes can be expected in South Africa and the government need powers to deal with situations which might arise without having to declare a state of emergency.

He was replying in the house of assembly to criticisms raised during the committee stage of the general law amendment bill, which includes a clause empowering the attorney - general to order detention of arrested persons for up to 12 days to maintain public safety and law and order.

Erasmus said experience had shown that powers were needed to detain persons who, after having been arrested and released on bail, continued with activities for which they had originally been arrested.

Chi Rho Enjoys Bowling at Bowl-O-Drome

Christ Church Chi Rho fellowship group met in the bowling lanes on Wednesday evening at the Bowl-O-Drome. The interesting bowling saw two fellowship members come up with scores over the 300 mark, Herb Crawker in the first with 306, and Barb Bertrim in the second with the evening high of 321.

From the alleys, the group gathered once more at the home of members Betty and Al Gardiner for the remainder of the program planned by the hostess whose group was in charge of the meeting.

Keith Bertrim's team was high in each of the encounters with team score of 1007 and 975, while the members of the team added top points to the individual scoring of the fellowship's recreational program carried on bi-weekly at Christ Church. The other two teams, captained by Al Gardiner and Ted Warwick, shared honors for second place spectively, to divide the remaining points. The plan started last fall, Bill Crozier emerged atop the heap in the individual scoring in the recreation hall series with 26 points, followed by Joanne Cavalier, 24 points, Keith Bertrim tied with 22 points, and Bob Swain and Evelyn Warwick tied in fourth place with 21 points apiece. The team totals tightened as the bowlers moved to within 35 points of the Crushers and the race for top honors becomes ever keener.

SING-SONG

A short worship period, conducted by Rev. Frank James, preceded a sing-song by members decked in the occasional chairs and assembled in the Cardinal's recreation area while table tennis artists kept time on the courts. Less accelerated members "plunked" darts in a not too packed portion of the lounge, pausing only to fork the occasional bacon on cheese rolls being served by the refreshment committee.

As the evening abated, the committee of Mary Eagle, Marilyn Cutler and Mary James helped all present to really get down to some serious eating as they after tray of rolls skirted the gathering from the kitchen for refill before it cooled. Cake and cookies were served to those who were also followed by tea and coffee.

President Ted Warwick announced that flowers were being sent, on behalf of the fellowship, to Mrs. Gordon Bolair, sister of Christ Church, Rev. E. P. Smith, who is in Belleville hospital. He extended thanks to the Gardiners for the use of their home and Bertrims for concluded a well spent evening.

Four members of the Belleville Art Association were successful in having a total of thirteen paintings accepted for the Kingston Art Association's Spring Exhibition current being held at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre in Kingston.

Mr. Ian Vorres, art critic and collector from Toronto, chose the pictures for the exhibition from over 200 which were submitted. He also selected seventeen paintings which he felt were of outstanding merit. All four exhibitors from Belleville were represented in this "best of the show" section.

These included "Kwartha Rocks" painted by Mrs. Lewis Andrews on a recent sketching trip; "Rehearsal Time", a study of a young girl in black leotards by Mrs. Thornton Brown; "Books and Bottles", an abstract still life done with bold lines and clear colors by Mrs. William Ashton; and "Abstract Bottles", an intricate design in soft colors by Mrs. Peaver Williamson. All four have studied painting under Mr. Psavo Arrula.

Mr. Vorres commented that it was one of the most interesting months of his career as he has had the pleasure of judging. He also noted that among the contributors were housewives, policemen, business managers and secretaries — people who, despite the fact they are busy, find time and determine to dedicate themselves to something creative.

The exhibit will continue at the Agnes Etherington Art Centre until May 31st.

Hollinger Life Near End

TORONTO (CP)—The remaining profitable life of the Hollinger gold mine cannot be more than a few years, Jules R. Timmins, chairman and president of Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines Limited, told the annual meeting today.

During 1960, the ore reserve at the mine—main mining property of the company—was depleted by 367,000 tons to 2,296,000. Mr. Timmins said the company is having problems in obtaining enough mill feed from other mines which are widely scattered through the mine.

The Hollinger, employing 1,500 men, is located at Timmins. It began production 30 years ago.

Toastmasters' Club Receives Its Charter

TRENTON — The concept that personal business success can be achieved by deliberately setting aside a few minutes each day to visualize the things one wants from life and then speaking about the making moment working to make these planned day-dreams come true, was outlined to members of the Trenton Toastmasters Club and their guests at Tuesday night's dinner meeting, by Douglas Tufford, charter member.

"Success just doesn't happen," he said. "Learn to control your destiny. Set yourself definite goals in life, then take constructive action to achieve these goals. Think positively. Don't accept the idea that you have personal limitations. Above all, be enthusiastic about your work. Abandon pessimistic ideas. Think and dream of success and success will be yours. Nothing can hold you back."

Mr. Tufford was one of three special speakers chosen to demonstrate to members' wives and guests the type of programs arranged by the club.

Les McKinnon of the RCAF at Trenton, outlined the aims and objectives of the Air Cadet movement and its relationship to the RCAF. Leo Hagan told members and guests of portfolios to be avoided when contemplating the purchase of a home.

A panel of evaluators, with John Robertson as chairman, then discussed the evening's program.

Head table guests included Frank Hurst, governor of this area 1; WO and Mrs. J. G. Ellison, WO and Mrs. J. S. Sanderson, Kenneth Craddock, president of the Trenton Legion branch, and Mrs. Craddock, and Mrs. Jenny Wills, president of the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club.

Toastmaster for the evening was Peter Kidd.

UNION PROTESTS

Cottrell Park Will Become Playground

TRENTON — Members of the Board of Parks Management, who at last month's meeting resolved to wash their hands of control of the east side of the river, had a change of heart at Tuesday night's meeting and decided to convert the area into a play area for children.

Board members were discouraged by the attitude taken by residents living near the park, who allegedly closed their eyes to acts of vandalism which had taken place over the past few years. Complaints that gardener Bart Boers have been chased off or out of park benches have been upset from cement mountings and flowers removed in vast quantities. Sandboxes and teeter-totters will be installed in the park.

Board members decided not to honor a request from the waterfront development committee for a $500 donation, but instead will offer to build a boat ramp on parks board land in the area in which the committee is interested. The ramp would be available to boaters this summer.

Improvements in town parks were discussed, and part of the work agreed will be carried out.

At Hanna Park, pieces of play equipment may be installed; work on the roads will be undertaken; a u m o d e d dayhaul area will be created.

Part of the proposed mountain road may be built this year. More trees will be planted at Bayshore Park and some work done at the Community Gardens. It was decided to plant weeping willows on the dock area adjacent to the town bridge.

William Workman, recreation director, will be notified that the board has no objection to life saving equipment being placed on the town dock, but that this area comes under the jurisdiction of the Department of Transport, which should be consulted before any action is taken.

Permission was granted to the fire department to hold a fireworks display on Mount Pelion on the evening of May 22.

Present at the meeting were the chairman, E. M. Parker, Jr., Miss Marion Baker, secretary; John Saylor, treasurer and members Bill Ireland, Clyde Mason, Norman Armstrong and gardener Bart Boers.

King Street United Church Congregational Meet Told Expansion Is Necessary

TRENTON — Some 450 members of King Street United Church, many of them descendents of charter members of the church, attended a loyalty dinner in the Community Centre last night.

The church was erected in the 1880s and was known as Wesleyan and Methodist Church. Modifications have been made and additions incorporated into the original structure, but the main body of the church remains intact.

Last night, members of the Board of Stewards and the minister of the church, Rev. J. T. Irwin, told the congregation of the numerous needs of the church. A new organ is needed, in order to accommodate the type of organ chosen, the rear of the church must be made larger. It is also planned to re-arrange the Sunday School classrooms in the basement, and to provide for office space and a choir room. Necessary also is the enlargement of the choir loft, the chancel and the nave. An entirely new lighting program will be carried out and new pulpit and choir furniture bought. The total project will cost between $125,000 and $150,000.

Thorne Spear, recording secretary of the Board of Stewards, said that the role of the church was primarily spiritual, but that it had a definite social and spiritual home for the large congregation, physical needs must be met, and he said that many of the members were willing heirs of the labours who had built the church and that the traditions left by the pioneers must be carried on.

Bruce Ireland, a member of the Board of Stewards, explained that the canvass committee had arranged an extensive visitation program. They asked each member to pledge a weekly amount, and a three-year period to provide the necessary funds for the improvements needed. He said nearly everyone was familiar with these projects and that they were bound by the spirit in the law to make these payments.

"We are bound by the Spirit of God to contribute towards the support of our church," said Mr. Ireland, "this is a United Church let us be united."

Dr. W.A.L. McDonald, chairman of the initial gifts committee, told the congregation the attempt to achieve spiritual and material honesty and to put God first in their lives.

Mr. Irwin spoke of the evening as a "wonderful and inspiring occasion", and said that it was "one of the most important nights in the long history of the congregation".

Fred Preston served as chairman for the evening. The banquet was arranged by Ronald Hinds, Mrs. Alan Mallory in charge of the various hostesses, who welcomed and seated the guests. Members of the Hi-C group ushered.

Honorary chairman for the fund raising drive was Clarence Saylor and W. H. Ireland.

Members of the congregation will be visited in the next two weeks and are asked to pledge weekly amounts for the needs of the church.

DO $10,000 DAMAGE

LONDON, Ont (CP) — Fires caused damage estimated at $10,000 in two London homes Wednesday. A blaze in the home of jeweller and art collector Jack Nash, believed to have been caused by a painter's torch, caused damage estimated at $15,000 to furnishings in the attic and second floor. A second fire caused $2,500 damage in the basement of the home of Rev. B. L. Hodder, minister of the Dundas Centre United Church.

'Clean Up' Days Proclaimed

TRENTON — At the instigation of Mayor D. J. MacDonald and with the co-operation of the fire department next Monday and Tuesday have been proclaimed "clean up" days in Trenton.

West-side residents are asked to have their refuse out before 9 a.m. Tuesday.

Fire Chief Cecil Ellis stressed the value of the clean up drive as a way of eliminating fire hazards.

Three town trucks will collect the garbage.

Service Bureau Officer Coming

TRENTON — Ian Urquhart, Legion service bureau officer from Ottawa, will visit Trenton Branch 110 at 5.30 p.m. Monday and discuss veterans' benefits.

A Philistine's Ramblings

Canadians are not happy about their environment. So goes a report on the Canadian Conference of the Arts.

A panel labelled North American towns and cities with such adjectives as dull, drab, boring, ugly, dreary and disgraceful. Sir Julian Huxley called Toronto's suburbs "a dreary waste of ugly little identical houses placed on the earth without any imagination."

Now all this may be true. It strikes us, though, that there is something suspect about the unanimity of this criticism, that some, at least, of the critics must be forgetting that these little identical houses are inhabited by people not all of whom have little identical interests and tastes. Perhaps the uniformity of their surroundings brings pressure to bear on them to bring their interests and tastes into a comparable uniformity—which would, indeed, be tragic—but almost any person who takes the time to make the acquaintance of these dwellers in suburbia will find that this pressure is being successfully resisted by many. Perhaps, today's North American cities are not picturesque, but the little identical homes are much more efficient than many of yesterday's charming dwellings, efficiency makes for leisure and leisure provides the opportunity to enjoy the arts. Of course, leisure may not be used for this purpose. But some leisure is essential if the arts are to prosper. It may, therefore, that unless the rot of one's particular interest happens to be architecture, those ugly little identical houses in the suburbs may be doing more good than harm

It may be objected that the artistic temperament is interested in all the arts. Frankly, ignorance is sometimes bliss. There are people who are fans of literature but who do not know one note of music from another. The painter in oils may be unmoved by verse.

Tastes in all the arts differ, with individuals, with generations and with cultures. Yet the argument that whether a book, a painting or a concerto is to be considered good or bad depends entirely on individual taste will not hold water. No matter how many people may find such books enjoyable, Horatio Alger's stories are an abomination. The same holds true for Elvis Presley's "Hound Dog."

Cultivation of good taste has therefore been stressed, but Russell Lynes, managing editor of Harper's Magazine, in an address to the Conference suggested: "We should, perhaps, call a moratorium on taste entirely, and reconsider the concept of pleasure—the pleasure of surprise, the pleasure of understanding, the pleasure of shared experience."

Taste can be acquired, by study, but pleasure is a capacity which cannot be cultivated. If one has to pause to consider whether one likes a book, a painting or a musical composition, one is measuring it by an acquired taste. If one has been pleased by that book, painting or musical score, one is aware of the fact instantly.

we may ask all that question about art? Hardly! Isn't anything that gives great pleasure, which can be continually renewed, to a person capable of deep emotions—then surely that must be accepted as a true artistic achievement.

The ability to experience such pleasure does not make a person an artist, or even a connoisseur of the arts or of a particular art, but it keeps life from being dull, drab, boring, ugly, dreary or disgraceful and it is infinitely more important that lives should be freed from such circumstances than that towns should be. Indeed, how can any suburb be drab and dreary if there dwell in it people who get pleasure out of "Almayer's Folly" or "Paradise Lost of Eden," out of Philidor's Legacy or Tom Thomson's West Wind, out of Bach or Brahms or Beethoven or even the blues, out of verse iambic or free, out of a wren's twitter or a child's laugh, out of fleecy clouds or scudding sails, out of a cool moon riding in a storm-tossed sky or the urgent whisper of a lover from a shaded nook, out of a terrier chasing a cat or a baby cuddling a doll, out of the little every-day occurrences around them or the life blood of a great intellect cast into a permanent mold for all coming generations to share as their heritage?

All of which places us, of course, among what Mr. Lynes says those who believe in an elite culture consider the culturally unwashed, those who can "take the arts or leave them strictly alone, not on the basis of whether they are art but on the basis of whether they find them interesting." But is more to be sought, a cultivated taste for the correct, or a genuine pleasure in a few out of the many works of artists? Mr. Lynes appears to be voting for pleasure and so do we. True artists, we think, need not fear such a standard. What good taste might reject may give some little measure of pleasure to many, but only great art can stir deep emotions.

What Space Travel Means

Manchester Guardian

The Russians have won unstinted admiration by demonstrating that it is possible to send a man by rocket into an orbit around the earth, and then to bring him back safely. As with the first ascent of Everest, it is likely now to be found somewhat easier to send other astronauts — from the United States as well — along Major Gagarin's trail. In this sense, it is legitimately claimed in the Soviet Union that the first human flight beyond the atmosphere has "opened up a new era."

Before the skies are filled with radio transmissions of spacecraft, it should not be forgotten that the launching of the first of these vehicles for short its journey may have seemed, was an act of great courage. Even in the Soviet Union, rockets cannot be so reliable that the chance of failure and of consequent catastrophe is small. Those who closed the hatches on Major Gagarin must have known that he might never be seen again. For all concerned, it must have been an uncanny occasion. Even under a regime where concern for individuals is often disregarded in the search for more abstract targets, it must have taken some doing. By the same token, it would be foolish to expect that the launching of the first human space flight can be free from tragedy of some sort. It will be many years before rockets will have been made infallible and reliable enough for that.

It is also wise to remember that the achievement so far — though it is — is not so much scientific as technological. It has not in itself deepened our understanding of nature, or made explicit any more of the universal laws. Rather it has proved by demonstration that a complicated machine, partly mechanical and partly biological, would function as the theory had predicted — or at least hoped.

Yet,

But a new invention—such as a steam locomotive—is important not merely as a marvel, or because of what it can do, but for the benefits which it can promise. It is the same with space travel. Without detracting in any way from the magnificence of the first flight around the earth, it is fair to say that in the long run the importance of the next step will depend on what it can do to help us to understand the laws of life and to explore the universe.

Here it should be remembered that space travellers — few though they will remain for some time — will carry with their familiar senses inferences about the surrounding atmosphere. Instruments which can be controlled with precision will also be soon to be brought back will compel a wider public, and to the scientific world, to explore the horizons of our common culture. Just as the proof that the earth was round enabled Columbus provided would have given an extra impetus to freedom to the people who would never cross the Atlantic, so the Russian rocket will have emancipated people a little more from natural restrictions of thought.

It would be folly to think that space travel will become, or become a popular pastime, like boating at weekends. Going to the moon or to Mars will always be difficult, hazardous, and outrageously expensive. It will be an occupation for a few people, for decades at least to come. Journeys like these, which may become possible within a few years or so, should

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

LOVE THY NEIGHBOR

"The second great commandment which Jesus gave to his followers was, "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." The breadth of meaning which Jesus gave to the word "neighbor" is a challenge to which few of us can hope to respond adequately. But we might at least try to do better than we do by those who are literally our neighbors.

City dwellers are notoriously unfriendly to their neighbors. Thousands of people in large cities do not actually know the names of the other people living on the same floor of the same apartment house. Often this ignorance is not due to shyness; these people just do not want to know their neighbors.

Those who live in small towns and in the country are probably better off as to actual acquaintance. They are likely to know their neighbors' names, speak to them, even help them on occasion. But even this degree of friendship falls short of the commandment.

We often hear preachers say that all international problems could be solved by the universal application of Christian principles throughout the world. No doubt they could be. But you and I are in no position to bring that about. We can, however, start applying Christian principles at home in our own lives, and there is no better place to begin than to "love they neighbor."

The place to start serving God and our fellow men is right where we happen to be.

Uses Magnet To Fool Fish

Vancouver Province

The ranks of fishermen, which have been split times without number, will soon have one more to discovered, will suffer the ultimate cleavage with the introduction of a new artificial bait which takes advantage of the earth's magnetic field.

Fishermen, both purists and those who believe the only test is whether the creel is full, will have to stand up and be counted on their attitude to this.

Colonel Frederick Hughes of the U.S. Air Force has studied all existing lures, those with cup-shaped heads, spoons and flexible bodies, propellers, tail feathers and rubber skirts, and has designed his own.

He concluded that game fish are attracted by the magnet that lies still in the water and "gives an occasional touch like a light pinch." Hughes and his colonel set out to provide the twitch.

The lure contains a magnet. When the fisherman lets the line go slack, the lure sinks in the water to align itself with the earth's magnetic field. How is this wriggle which the fish are supposed to find irresistible.

For instance, if the nose is on a line from shore to shore line, the magnet is placed lengthwise so that the float will bend and head out over the line slackens.

How far should a fish be fooled? The colonel's patent will be viewed by classicists perhaps, as the ultimate in artificial deception. The magnetic bait will almost certainly revive that recent controversy in B.C. over the status of the art, whether a contest of skill or of luck.

And, of course, there is no saying that the inventive colonel has correctly read the mind of the fish. They may ignore the twitching minnow as they have ignored so many other highly imaginative invitations to disaster.

Some years back, England was famous for its export trade in fishing tackle. In spite of the fact that death rains from the Hun-ridden skies daily and nightly, the indomitable Britishers have not taken time from clearing away rubble and debris, burying loved ones and tinkering for home production, to rejuvenate an export trade that has languished for a number of years. Before the war something like 10,000 sets of fishing equipment were shipped to sportsmen the world over, chiefly to Canada, New Zealand, the United States and Argentina. The flies shown in St. James's Parlour are Canada. They form a collection to delight the heart of any knowledgeable fisherman, minute ambassadors British craftsmanship.

Strictly Personal

Belief Often Habitual Says Sydney

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices

Our fear of being dominated by machines in the future is groundless. The greatest enemy is ourselves, not the machines we create. It is worth remembering that Mary Shelley's hero, Frankenstein, did not create a human servant in his robot, until he endowed it with its human soul. One of the ills it then did it became a monster. This is the whole moral of the story.

Most revolutionaries are political reactionaries; their loyalty has shown — for they suffer from the delusion that society can be put to rights by standing everything on its head; if successful, they are forced to maintain this artificial posture by the most repressive of measures, which drives a man to no extreme before he has power — he is the same thing that drives him to the other extreme after achieving power.

Most of what we call belief is habit; for every one person who has wrestled, suffered and thought his way through to his belief, a hundred have fallen into them by inheritance, laziness and self-interest.

Greed is a form of insanity, cruelty is a form of weakness, hatred is a form of self-torture — until we openly recognize these animi-ple psychological truths, we cannot hope to have a genuine civilization.

There is a great moral gulf dividing the man who thinks "I am as good as anyone else," and the man who thinks "everyone is as good as me"; it is terribly easy for most of us to accept the first statement without any treatment centres, employment, education and insurance through the American Epilepsy Federation, 77 Reservoir Road, Quincy, Mass. It has affiliated centres in about 25 states and provinces of the U. S. and Canada.

In addition, I have in the recent past mentioned an enlightening — and inexpensive — book on "Epilepsy: What It Is and What to Do About It," by Dr. Treva Lu Putnam, published by J. B. Lippincott Co. It's a very clear and sensible discussion, and one of the so-called Keystone Books by Lippincott.

"Dear Dr. Molner; Is there anything that can be done to help mongoloid babies other than loving and caring for them? — Mrs. A. S. C."

No known method of correcting the basic condition — but a good deal can be done to maintain general health, and to train many such children. A good source of information for you might be the National Association of Retarded Children, which has pamphlets and a monthly newspaper on the subject. The headquarters is at 99 University Place, New York City.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Please tell me about cellulitis. . . — Mrs. O. C."

Cellulitis is an infection which spreads rather than localized. Actually, all infections are "cellulitis," but they affect the cells of which our bodies are made. A boil, however, is localized. Pneumonia, confined to a segment of the lung, is also a somewhat limited "cellulitis."

Erysipelas is a form of cellulitis, often on the face.

"Cellulitis," in the way we usually use the term, is more likely to occur on one of the extremities. It is caused by a germ of one kind or another invading the tissues under the skin. Treatment embraces rest of the affected part, heat, and antibiotics.

Much Can Be Done to Help Epileptics Live Normally

By Joseph C. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner; I am writing for a book on epileptic fits. Our little boy has these fits in bed, and had six of them yesterday.

"We were told there is no cure, but would like to learn more about them. He started having them last winter, so we took him to our doctor. He gave him some little white capsules with a pink band on, but they don't help. — Mrs. A. B."

Every time I receive a letter like this, or have contact in a direct fashion with such a case I still get that tired feeling inside. I guess all doctors do. It isn't just this trouble. It's any trouble that afflicts a child and promises to be a life-long problem that he must contend with.

But then a different thought comes: What of the doctors (and the parents) who succumbed this sort of a thing 25 or more years ago?

Then there wasn't much anybody could do. Now, a great deal can be done. We may be no closer than we ever were to curing this affliction, but we can control, or at least alleviate it, in something like nine out of ten cases.

Only about 15 years ago some advanced communities established special schools for children with epilepsy, and that was a wonderful thing. Now, a great deal has been the development of effective drugs, and epileptics have closed because we don't need them. We can give medication that will control most cases, prevent the convulsions, and the pattern can be followed in regular schools and in general lead an ordinary life.

No single drug does this. A whole series of drugs has been developed, and the treatment consists of using the right drug for the right patient, or sometimes the right combination of drugs.

I do not have any booklets on this topic because the problem of epilepsy is so extensive. However, it is possible to obtain pamphlets and information on

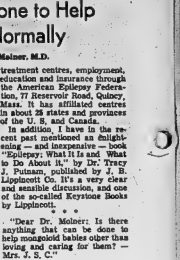
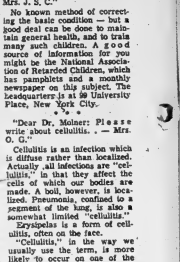
BETTER AND BETTER

What a change comes over one when he whispers to himself that he is getting better and better each day of fleeting Life.

The little plant of Aspiration is the most important flower that ever blossomed in the second as its corollary.

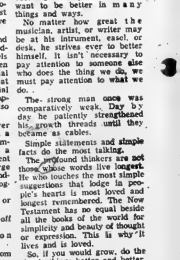


Insects co-operate to wage war against common enemies; why must Man but Man wages war against himself and will not co-operate to wage war against insects: and this is what we call Higher Evolution.



One of the most profound and perceptive statements of modern times was made by Mary Shelley's author, the Danish scientist, when he observed: "There are trivial truths and great truths. Great truths. The opposite of a trivial truth is plainly false; the opposite of a great truth is also true."

Although the laws change over the centuries, it still remains a perplexing fact that he who commits a crime, theft is given a relatively stiffer punishment than he who commits a large theft. In 1764 the New Englanders had a favorite piece of Sogers that illustrated this point:



"The law doth punish man or woman
That steals the goose from off the common.
But lets the greater felon loose,
That steals the common from the goose."

Every good writer knows that an exclamation point diminishes the force of a sentence, and is a sign of literary impotence; likewise, the use of italics reduces the force of an argument, a command, or a plea.

Let us hope the TV industry is carefully putting away in their archives some of these programs with the spectacular, and Westerns, and panel interviews with Zsa Zsa Gabor and other celebrities of our time, twenty years from now, when our children are grown up and getting a little bored with whatever TV is giving them then, the industry can always trot out an oldie to convulse them, the way we are convulsed when, for a gag, we are showed some of the thrillers of twenty years ago.

For, we have to swallow the sad fact that twenty years from now, we are going to be laughed at. When Zsa Zsa comes on the screen in 1980 are the young going to howl and fall off the chesterfield, just the way our generation howled when Theda Bara comes on now? Or will we sprawl about a little in the sight of Mary Pickford and her curls, what will they do in 1981 when Elizabeth Taylor exhibits the sophisticated air of 1961?

Of course, there are exceptions. Will Zsa Zsa survive the way Mae West has? The other day they ran an oldie with Mae and W. C. Fields, and my living room was full of the younger generation, I am happy to report that all conversation halted and all eyes were bright as the old girl went sizzled and corny through her limited routine. BEST CADET — Above may be seen Cadet William Juby as he received the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment's shield for Best Cadet from Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy, commanding officer of the Hasty Pees, at Wednesday's inspection of the Moira Secondary School Cadet Corps.

Moira's Army Cadet Corps Praised After Inspection

The 65 volunteer members of Moira Secondary School's Army Cadet Corps held their first annual inspection Wednesday afternoon and received high praise from Mayor A. McLean Haig and Lt.-Col. Angus B. Duffy, the inspecting officer.

During an hour-long inspection program at the school, members of the corps exhibited the training in marching drill, teamwork and, military manoeuvres they had learned at the hands of chief instructor Major E. C. Milliken and his assistants since the corps was established last December.

Commenting afterwards on the cadets' smartness and alertness on parade, Mayor Haig said he was a firm believer in cadet movements and was sorry that membership in them was not compulsory. He felt that cadet organizations did much to develop good citizens.

Lt.-Col. Duffy, commanding officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, with which the cadet corps is associated, also congratulated the cadets on their fine show. He warned the cadets, whose inspection was watched by the whole student body, not to become thinkers and readers to excess, instead of becoming doers when they leave school. He said the world was full of thinkers and readers and desperately needed more doers.

Lt.-Col. Duffy said the Hasty Pees were proud to be associated with cadet corps. He asked the cadets to always wear their uniforms with pride.

Earlier, Lt.-Col. Duffy, escorted by Major Milliken and corps commander Cadet Major Richard Dixon, inspected the three platoons of smartly uniformed cadets while the 18-member cadet mixed band, under the leadership of Cadet Lt. Monty Alyea, played appropriate music in the background before they themselves were inspected. Viewing the inspection from the sidelines were Mayor Haig, Lt. F. L. Parsons, Army Headquarters Eastern Ontario Area, Kingston, the corps' marking officer, A. L. Greatrix, chairman of the Bay of Quinte District High School Board, who later complimented the cadets, and W. J. Musgrove, school principal.

Following the formal inspection of the corps, the cadets moved off to the sports field where they demonstrated their skill in map reading, weapon handling, first aid and signalling in a mock battle.

Later Lt.-Col. Duffy presented the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment's shield to Cadet William Juby, who had been judged the best cadet of the year.

Will Send Darts Team To Finals

The Zone sports officer, Comrades Joe Soams stated at the Canadian Legion regular monthly meeting held Tuesday that Branch 99 would send its district darts team to the provincial finals to be held at Riverside, near Windsor, on June 3rd.

Comrade President Les Digby thanked those who attended the district rally at Lindsay on April 30th, stating they were a credit to the branch in the business-like manner they carried themselves during the rally and meal afterwards.

Comrade 2nd vice-president Harold Heasman on tendering his resignation due to a transfer from Belleville was thanked for his services and Comrade President stated the resignation was regretfully accepted and that Branch 99's loss would be sonie Ottawa branch's gain.

An election for the 3nd vice-president's office was held and Comrade William Heasman was elected and installed to office, with Comrade Ross Steeves who became the new sports officer. Comrade W. D. Rose was then appointed public relations officer, replacing Comrade Harold Beaumont in that capacity.

Quinte Sea Cadet Corps Is Inspected

Officers and cadets of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps "Quinte" were inspected yesterday evening by Lt. Michael Lansdown, RCN (R), of HMCS "Cataraqui" as a part of the events being held in observance of Navy Week in Belleville. The cadets, in the words of the inspecting officer, were "smartly turned out; especially the guard."

Following the formal marchpast and ceremony a number of displays, which are to be a part of the corps' annual inspection presentation a week this Thursday were shown. These included a precision drill routine by the guard, an exhibition of "broadside" or volley firing by several of the corps' marksmen and a rescue demonstration.

The inspecting officer was accompanied by Mr. H. Peter Wills, president of the Belleville branch of Navy League of Canada, and Mr. Ross Boyce, chairman of the Sea Cadet committee.

The next observance of Navy Week will be on this Sunday when a church parade will be held to St. Margaret's Church following an inspection of the Corps by a representative from Area Office in Toronto.

Over the weekend cadets will be busy preparing a number of the boats for the coming season as well as freshening up the appearance of the Sea Cadet building for the annual inspection.

Hasty Pees To Hold Annual Inspection

This Sunday afternoon the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will hold its annual ceremonial inspection at 2:00 o'clock. The inspecting officer will be Brigadier A. J. B. Bailey, D.S.O., M.B.E., E.D., Deputy Commander, Eastern Ontario Area, of Kingston.

If the weather permits, the ceremonial marchpast and display will be held at the Lobjaw's parking lot on Pinnacle Street; otherwise the drill deck at the Belleville Armouries will be used.

All of the sub-units of the regiment will be present for the inspection which will feature a number of tactical survival demonstrations following the ceremonial portion.

Plan to Revive Horticultural Society Here

A meeting will be held this week in the Recreation Centre here, on Monday, May 15, at 8 p.m., in an effort to re-activate the Belleville Horticultural Society, which has been dormant for the past decade.

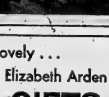
Mrs. J. S. Shepherdson, R.R. 1, Kingston, district director of the Ontario Horticultural Association for the counties of Frontenac, Hastings, Leeds, Lennox and Addington and Addington and Prince Edward, will be present and will address the meeting. It is also hoped that R. F. Gomme of Toronto, secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Association, will be able to be present. Mr. Gomme and Mrs. Shepherdson spent some time in this city recently, endeavoring to arouse interest in the re-organization of the local Society, and the response which they received has raised high hopes for the possibility of forming an active group here. At Monday's meeting officers will be elected and other business necessary to the initiation of an active program will be transacted.

New Y Building to Meet Needs of Expanding Area

Pressed to acquire new quarters because of an ever-increasing demand upon the inadequate facilities of the current 50-year old building in which the Belleville YMCA is housed, the local "Y" is tonight launching a fund-raising drive in this district for a new YMCA building.

The proposed new building seeks to not only meet the heavy needs of a current YMCA membership of over 2,400 people, but to plan for the needs of the future for an expanding area. Facilities are also planned which will be unique to the area, such as the regulation - size 60 by 25 foot swimming pool, and will be available, as have all "Y" facilities in the past, to any outside community group.

An 80 by 54 foot gymnasium complete with two lockers-rooms accommodating 80 persons each and two shower and drying rooms, will also form a vital part of the new building. The planned pool facilities alone will allow for up to six times greater facilities for the beginners' learn-to-swim classes and almost three times greater capacity for recreational swimming.



Four club rooms, an exercise room, an all-purpose room offices, a fully equipped kitchen, powder room, two lobbies plus several storage areas are also provided for in the plans for the new "Y".

Outdoor facilities on the six-acre site include handball, tennis, volleyball and softball areas with basketball, skating and track and field facilities allowed for in the future.

PROBE SAILORS' DEATHS

HALIFAX (CP) — A navy board of inquiry sat Wednesday in connection with the fatal shooting of two Quebec sailors in the Stadacona barracks early Saturday. A navy spokesman said the board's findings will be turned over to the commanding officer of the Atlantic Command who will decide on any further action. The findings will be made public only if the navy decides they are in the public interest.

Women's Activities

TABERNACLE W.A.

The regular monthly meeting of Tabernacle United Church W.A. was held in the ladies parlor last Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Earl Hunt opened the meeting by reading a poem giving a tribute to "mothers".

Treasurer, Mrs. Davidson gave a satisfactory report of funds on hand.

Group 6 had charge of the devotional. The lesson was read from John 6: 1-14 by Mrs. Robb and Mrs. Grey spoke on "Persons of Individual Life".

"When the Holy Spirit came upon the apostles, the people flocking to them understood their message. If we are to be good witnesses we must answer the call of Jesus. We must spread the gospel not only by things it, but by acting it. No amount of preaching helps unless we live what we preach." The speaker emphasized the idea of time.

"We should not be slaves of clocks and calendars. None of us know just how much time we have left in this world. Only God knows our false balance therefore we must make the most of our time while we can. Some people feel they have not time for prayer, yet some of the great leaders of the world took time from their busy life every day for prayer, as God clears our vision when we pray.

A famous poet wrote the following lines:

A whole I planned
Youth shows but half
Trust God, See all.
Nor be afraid."

A letter from Tri-M Club was read asking for books to be sent to Liberia.

The group decided to buy a good Bible story book to be sent to Liberia.

Miss Horton W.A., representative on the M and M committee for Tabernacle Church told of the 250 students going out to mission fields for the summer at this time. Miss Horton told of the great need of full time ministers. However these students make it possible for church services to be held in isolated communities for at least five months of the year.

Day of Quinte Conference United Church Women are to hold their inaugural meeting in Tabernacle United Church January 30, 31, 1962.

Mrs. Davidson was appointed to invite a speaker from Toronto to speak to the women of Tabernacle United Church concerning the new organization in October.

Meeting was closed by Mrs. M. MacFarlane.

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served by Group 6 and a social hour was enjoyed.

YEARS EPIDEMIC

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—About 60,000 refugees have poured into the lower Congo from the Portuguese territory of Angola in recent weeks, bringing fears of famine and epidemics, it was revealed here Wednesday. Gaston Diomi, vice-president of the "State of Leopoldville," said that in the Congo's own grave financial situation, the influx of refugees has created terrible problems of health, feeding and housing.

S.S. Teachers' Assoc. Names Few Officers

The regular meeting of the Belleville Presbytery Sunday School Teachers' Association was held at Tabernacle United on Tuesday evening, with an attendance of 45. The president, Mr. Orma Shaver, presided the meeting.

It was announced that reports had been made at Five Oaks Christian Education Centre for Belleville Presbytery Church Schools for the weekend of October 13, 14 and 15th. Literature was handed out so that each member present would be in a position to pass along information about Five Oaks to other Christian education workers in his own Church. Mr. Alf Hughes kindly agreed to be in charge of arrangements for the trip.

HOME OFFICERS NAMED

It was decided that the following slate of officers for the coming year be accepted as follows: president, Bill Slavin; Bible study — Glenn Shaver; devotional — Rose Fleming; as it was stated that some offices had not been filled, the officers for these positions would be elected at the September meeting.

The theme of the meeting was "Discipline". Theme present were divided into groups for Bible Study, and the Scripture lesson was for the week Jn. 10:35-45. This taught how Jesus disciplined his disciples; in-stead of the Scripture was St. Matt. 5:21-11, also dealing with Christ's way of disciplining people. A discussion following on discipline and the decision reached was that teachers should know, not only how to discipline the class, but themselves as well.

During the worship service, Mr. Hughes led in the singing and Mr. Jeadlier hymns, and Mr. Don Harvey from Holloway Church, who is a candidate for the ministry, brought a message on the "Stupidity of Jesus", saying that so often man does not even attempt to understand the Scriptures, and in not understanding, fails to follow Jesus' teachings, and to glorify Him.

Arrangements were made for the fall meeting, after which refreshments were served by the group from Mount Pleasant Church. During this time Mr. Babbah expressed the thanks of all present to Mr. Shaver for his excellent leadership during the past year.

Successful Living

Husband Seeks Reunion

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:— My wife was married before. By her first marriage she has a twelve-year-old daughter. We were always having arguments, often over the girl. I can't say that I loved her but I tried and I was willing to adopt her if it meant not breaking up the home.

Then my wife complained because I took a few drinks. Perhaps I did, but at the same time I washed floors and clothes —and baby sat for our three-year-old. One thing I never have done is cheat on my wife in any way.

Then she started staying out very late and would never say where she had been. We'd argue and a separation was mentioned. She liked the idea. I never thought she would go through with it, but she did.

Now I have tried to make up, but she says she has no feeling left for me. I love my baby very much and also my wife. Is there hope of getting back together?— H. H.

DEAR H. H.—From what you tell me (and I have only printed part of your letter), there have been faults on both sides. Your short tempers and continual quarrelling sound adolescent. Yet you both made an effort to make things go.

A separation is not a divorce and your wife is not as free to have men friends as she thinks she is—that is, not without risking her good name. If you are supporting her and your child you may certainly continue to see the child.

You cannot command love, especially since you have contributed to destroying it. But if you have grown up enough to control your temper and your drinking; if your wife means enough to you for you to keep up your support and to be a good father to your child, it is possible that her attitude could change.

A marriage counsellor should help you with your thinking and give you the moral courage you need. In Belleville, you will find such help at the Children's Aid Society of Belleville, 63 West Moira St.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:— Because I suspected that they were getting far too serious, I opened my daughter's letter from her boy friend. They are both only 17.

The letter was full of declarations of love and talk of marriage. I have faced her with it and told her what I think; that he goes with a tough crowd and is not the kind of fellow to get mixed up with. She argues with me and says he is not really bad, but I know better. Don't you think she should trust me?—MOTHER M.

DEAR MOTHER M.:—How can she trust someone who will open her mail?

If you run him down how can she do anything but build him up? In defence she paints an idealized picture of him which she then undertakes to believe herself.

Invite him to dinner and let her see him under your own roof. Keep an open mind yourself. Then if she is not fighting you she has a chance to see him as he really is. She will not be marrying a picture.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—My sister's little boy looks like a lovely blond angel and he does such mischievous things. She is always yelling, "Sit up," "Cut it out," "Don't throw that," "Behave" and so far into the night. But Billy goes right ahead.

I say she should either see that he does what she says or keep quiet.—BUNNY.

* * *

DEAR BUNNY:—Sounds like good sense. No child wants to be nagged at—and that's what it amounts to, when there is no follow through.

On the other hand, there are times, to wink at things. One mother says that people expect their first child to act better and behave himself while he is still small; that by the time you've had a few you know what corrections to make and what notice to ignore.

But she does insist that when she makes a correction which she thinks is really necessary, he be made to do what he is told. So would I.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart H. Rosenberg

All of us need to learn how to live with conflict. But be warned: Over-confidence is as poor a human condition as under-confidence.

God created, then makes when we understood that difference to the depths of our being, we may learn how to act.

Man is not God. He discovers the laws of God in Nature. But he does not create Nature. He creates nothing new; he can only rearrange old orders through new combinations.

We need confidence in our powers to work with, God in building a world worth keeping. But, too often, we make ourselves into little gods, centres of universes which revolve on our own axis.

We need the courage, strength and faith that brings power to our hands, to solve problems which are given to us for human solution. We dare not sit on our hands watching the world go by, humanity on our fate, whenever we are confructively change and improve conditions.

But when, by reason of arrogant self- confidence, we imagine that all problems can be solved by the human mind; we are as poorly oriented to life as those who lack courage to do what really can be done. Consider what happens to the over-confident man: He never face defeat, never suffer graciously a loss for he has a built-in assurance that nothing can stand in the way of personal victory.

To win we need confidence; but over-confidence does not prepare us to face inevitable failures. A man's reach must exceed his grasp or what his reach is man, shorter than he imagines. The royal road to confidence begins with the recognition of our in-built human short-comings, the mortal's capacity for weakness and even failure. For the man who has never learned how to lose can never really win.

Confidence and arrogance border one another. A half-line divides them. Those who overreach, their own human possibilities move across the boundaries which separate the two. The confident man knows when to stop relying upon himself, when to recognize how small and creaturely he really is. He feels the need to reckon constantly with a world he has not created; to submit to human conditions he has not and cannot completely shape.

Arrogance is the product of a life devoted to self-seeking and self-fulfillment. It does not understand that a recognition of human weakness is not tantamount to failure. On the contrary. He who seeks real power must learn the meaning of powerlessness. He who would know how and what to speak must sometimes stand speechless before the world.

RECRUIT GRADS

VANCOUVER (CP) — Graduating university students are being recruited here to go to Ghana, the Commonwealth nation in Africa, for 18 months as school teachers. Arts, science and agriculture grads are needed.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Glenn T. — He refuses to let me take piano lessons. Mr. G. T. — He wants to study jazz and bop, not music.

* * *

Glenn T. — I'm 14 and I've been taking piano lessons in a music academy for four years. I'm terribly fed up now with the square beard. I've been playing Beethoven, Liszt and Grieg. My friends call most of it stuffy funeral music."

A couple of weeks ago I went to a family party with my parents, and, hanging around the orchestra, I got to talking with the pianist. He played by ear and had the hottest bass beats I've ever heard. When he told me he gives private lessons in that sort of jive, I got all excited. I told him I'd ask my Dad whether I could switch from the music school to him.

But Dad's answer is no. He won't lay out money for jungle music, he says.

* * *

Mr. G. T. — That boogie-woogie business, he can pick up himself. What is there to learn? Put you do 7 with a major. You can hit the keys with your eyes shut and the lights off and it sounds as good. I suppose you know what you're doing!

No, Any music will until his litteerbug friends gave him the idea he wasn't bop. He can play just as bop as Leonard Bernstein. From what I've heard, Bernstein studied music. The jazz, he figured out himself!

* * *

The Council" — While The Council numbers several experts, don't think we've "got cat" on top to rule on the artistic merits of hot jazz. Certainly there are graduations, ranging all the way from the near classic by Aaron Copland to the rock-and-roll fragments which have been described as "elemental primal music." But we'll take a chance and cast our vote in favor of the jazz switch-over.

Certainly good jazz that's well played is more enjoyable than a mutilated Bach, ground out by dead dancers. Who knows but that, by Mr. T. financing the latest technique he learns a lot Glenn will earn enough to pay for his own lessons later. Mr. T. is a pretty astute guy.

At any rate, being included in a jam session will fill a social if not an artistic, need in Glenn's life at this stage. Even though to his Dad, his practice periods may be torture — consisting of ten-ton beats and out-of-tune chords — the boy himself will be "in the tune" with the group he wants to be part of.

Even the musical greats, people dedicated to perpetuation of the finest compositions are known to enjoy a change of pace by running through a stack of popular song sheets. We'd like to bet Mr. T. one of those dollars we hope he'll lay out for Glenn's new repertoire, that "this too shall pass."

Someday Glenn will startle the old Steinway with a spirited Scarlatti that won't sound one bit like funeral music! It'll sound right.

MODERN MANNERS

QUESTION BOX

Question — There seems to be a lot of conflict as to whether or not the father of the bride should stand in the receiving line at the reception. Do you feel that he should, or do you prefer that he mingle with the guests, seeing that they receive refreshments, etc? Miss B. P. T., Joplin, Mo.

Answer — It is considered correct that he follow either procedure. Personally, I feel very strongly that he should stand in the line on the left of his daughter, while her mother or husband is on her right. It would certainly seem that this is where Dad belongs. Let the ushers, who never stand in the line, take care of tending to the guests.

* * *

Question — In order to keep things moving at a large wedding, is it permissible to omit the bridesmaids from the receiving line? It holds up greeting the guests at the reception when they have to greet eight bridal attendants, along with the rest of the group — Mrs. G. B. V., Shreveport, La.

Answer — No, they should be in the line. However, when there is a large group, you can help the situation by having each four at a time in the line, while the others mingle with the guests. Every half hour, have them change places.

* * *

Question — You wrote a column some time ago with which I do not agree. You said that when signing a greeting card informally, the woman's name should always be given first. I always believed that, out of politeness, the husband's name should be written before yours. It also would indicate that the signatures were written by the wife, who signed last. We enjoy your columns very much, but I think you are wrong in your answer to this question. — Mrs. A. A., Argo, Ill.

Answer — Sorry, but you are still wrong! Out of politeness, the name of your husband is mentioned last, not first. Research Based on the "ladies first" concept, it should always be "Susan and Jim Dow" rather than the reverse, regardless of who actually signs the card.

On Mother's Day Take Her A Breakfast Tray

By Mary Moore

Does any son or daughter in our audience need a hint about starting Mother's Day right?

I am one of those rare birds who does not want my breakfast in bed. It is too restricting. Besides, when my children were small my ears were stretched to hear kitchen noises and smell kitchen smells while the secret preparations were going on — and I was on tenderhooks. However, when the tray was finally whooshed into the bedroom by Pete and made a safe landing on my stomach, I was relieved and enchanted.

French Toast was Marianne's and Pete's specialty. Along with a laboriously cut grapefruit and a four-minute egg and the inevitable tiny vase with a pansy from the garden — it looked and tasted wonderful.

For those of you who can wangle it have the following recipe for French Toast in sight. The directions for cooking eggs in the shell also might be welcome.

Dinner Menus
by Mary Moore

THURSDAY

Vichyoise (see Wednesday); Creamy Macaroni and Cheese; Green Peas; Parsleyed Carrot Rings; Lemon Meringue Pie; Tea.

FRENCH TOAST FLORIDA STYLE:

1 egg, 1-4 cup orange juice, 3 tablespoons sugar, 1 1-2 teaspoons grated orange rind, 4 slices day old bread. 1-4 cup butter or margarine, confectioners' sugar.

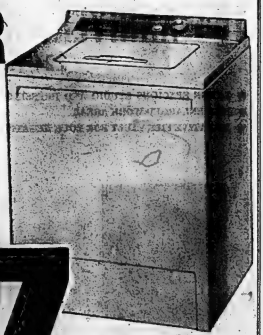
Beat egg with orange juice in shallow dish. Add sugar and grated orange rind; mix thoroughly. Cut bread slices in half. Dip bread in egg mixture for 1 or 2 minutes. Brown on both sides in butter in frying pan over low heat. Sprinkle with confectioners' sugar and serve with jam. Serve immediately.

BREAKFAST EGGS IN THE SHELL:

To cook 4 eggs for what is known as a "4-minute egg" (soft-cooked) bring 3 cups of water to boiling point in a medium-sized saucepan. Carefully add 4 eggs, slipping them gently into the boiling water from a large spoon. When 4 eggs are in the water, put on cover and remove pan from burner. Let stand 5 minutes. Then uncover and serve. If you want the eggs done a little harder leave them in the water for 6 minutes.

Note to prospective and ambitious and young mother's day cooks.

Put a pretty cloth on the tray and set it with the best china and a flower and your gift to your mother. When you take in the coffee be sure it is hot and not spilled on the saucer.



She'd love it if you ate your breakfast in her bedroom too — I think!

Happy Landings!

Small Drainage Stream Overflows, Water Pours Into Army Warehouses

By PETER BUCKLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—Capt. Blanc of Shediac, N.B., and Ottawa lawyer Ivan Birch would have cried to see his quartermaster's stores after two feet of silt - laden water had washed through them.

Capt. Birch of Victoria, left The Congo on rotation to Canada in March after sweating through a seven-month build-up of the Canadian quartermaster's depot from a one-room hodgepodge to two large warehouses a mile from the headquarters of No. 57 Canadian Signal Unit.

His successor, Capt. Leo Leblanc, had been in charge of the stores less than a month when the worst storm in 10 years hit Leopoldville the night of April 10.

A small drainage stream overflowed beside the concrete storey concrete warehouses, sending water through the stores and causing thousands of dollars damage. Meteorological stations measured more than eight inches of rain in less than nine hours.

Throughout Leopoldville, the damage was heavy. Several bridges — including one major concrete span — were washed away or undermined. Estimates place the number of homeless in the African quarters as high as 800. Stores and shops were flooded.

CREATES HAVOC

The water receded quickly, but not before creating havoc among clothing and technical stores in the Canadian warehouses, former rubber goods factories with a total of 30,000 square yards of floor space.

Capt. Leblanc, a 28-year-old Carleton University graduate in his first posting after an army ordnance course, ticked off some of the damage.

"We had just received a new shipment of about 100 complete bush uniforms," he said. "The whole thing went under water."

"All our reserve of weapons got soaked. About 250 jerry-cans of gasoline reserves—well over 2,000 gallons—took water and the gas will have to be destroyed. About 11 small buses and other vehicles in the compound were soaked.

"But the most serious, probably, is the damage to weapons and technical equipment. We don't know how much damage there is. Such things as small coils for the communications equipment will have to be dried, then tested."

As Leblanc stood on the scrubbed-down warehouse floor and talked, an ordnance sergeant came up and said thousands of boxes of safety razor blades had been found rusty. Leblanc ordered them destroyed.

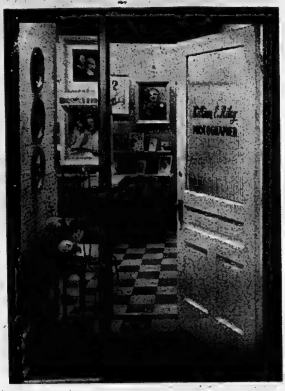
Cleaning up the mess would take three weeks or more. Three extra Congolese workers were hired to help, and other members of the signal unit were dispatched to lend a hand where possible.

SLIME AND MOLD

In one corner of the warehouse, two Congolese sat at a table, patiently hand wiping the slime from some 200 pairs of pop-glasses and leather cases. Nearby were mud - encrusted rows of rubber boots awaiting cleaning.

In an adjoining yard were stacks of brand - new leather boots covered with a green-and-white mold and ready to be destroyed. Huge pumps and generators waited under canvas for the rust to be cleaned from them.

"It took five trucks—the 2½-ton kind—to carry all the dirty laundry away to be cleaned," Leblanc recalled. "The men were literally shoveling the muddy clothing into the trucks."



The actual loss to the Canadian Army is not expected to be high, Leblanc said.

The United Nations pays for the cleaning. Under arrangements which brought the signal unit to The Congo, Canada sends stores to the unit and bills the UN. When the Canadian force's tour is finished here, all stores except weapons and some technical equipment will be turned over to the United Nations.

The storm which did the damage began about 11 p.m. April 10. By 1 a.m., water had started to creep into the warehouse. The four men on duty summoned help and began shifting material to higher ground.

"By 3:30 a.m., I was afraid the bridge leading across the stream might collapse," Leblanc said. "So we waded through waist-high water to the other side."

Red Chinese Newspaper Likens Leacock to Twain In Outlook on Imperialism

By CLARE McDERMOTT

PEKING (Reuters)—A Chinese Communist newspaper commentator has described the late Canadian humorist, Stephen Leacock, as a "genius" who long ago "tore off the mask of United States imperialism."

Leacock was described in a recent article in The People's Daily, the Chinese Communist party's organ, as "a genius who, like America's Mark Twain, perceived long ago that United States imperialism not only wanted to seize the world's material wealth by force but also to take possession of the cultural treasures of all other countries."

The article, signed by Chen Chih-jen, commented on the recent shipping of Chinese art treasures from Formosa to the United States where they are to be exhibited.

The commentator referred to a satirical piece which Leacock wrote in an essay about 1925.

"He predicted the wholesale looting of valuable articles and even scenic remains of European countries by the United States, including Shakespeare's cottage and England's Buckingham Palace," the writer said.

PALACE IS SAFE

But today, many years after Leacock's prediction, Chen Chu-jen adds, "Buckingham Palace and its occupants are still quite safe in London. All the scenic spots on the outskirts of Paris, as well as the battlefield of Waterloo, remain intact —so far. It appears unlikely that they can be moved for the time being.

"But, has Leacock's prediction failed completely? No. The pictures drawn by the artist Leacock were humorous but authentic, and he tore off the mask of United States imperialism from its acts of brigandage and piracy here.

"The stealing of 253 Chinese treasures from Taiwan (Formosa) by United States imperialism has greatly angered the people of China, and brought protests from all over the country. We do not know how many patriotic people of other countries are irritated by it in the same way.

"While United States imperialism may steal treasures from other countries at present, it can never alter the strong opposition of all the world's people, who oppose its aggression."

This Stuff Not for The Birds

LONDON (AP)—A sort of plastic jelly has been enlisted in the war on pigeons, sparrows and starlings who like to roost on the National Gallery. It works.

The way the ministry of public works explained it Tuesday, pigeons and their comrades in desecration do not like to have a bouncy feeling under their feet.

The ministry is taking advantage of this anti - bounce phobia in pigeon personality to discourage the birds from sitting on the art gallery in such countless numbers.

A jelly - like substance developed by ministry and industrial chemists has been spread on a ribbon along favorite pigeon ledges. It doesn't evaporate for months and it doesn't harden.

It is, in the opinion of fastidious pigeons, uncomfortable stuff on which to sit. They go somewhere else, along with the starlings and sparrows.

The youth's name was not disclosed because he is a minor under Japanese law.

Remember Avro Arrow Jet, Shoot Tickle Bull-Birds, MPs Ask Resources Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — Resources Minister Diefenbaker was asked a series of lectures Wednesday on the importance of remembering to Nellie McClung, the noon gun at Halifax, the tickle bull-bird and the Arrow jet interceptor.

He was entreated by MPs from all sides of the Commons to build cairns and erect markers to commemorate these people and things, and to change the wildlife laws so Newfoundlanders can shoot the tickle-as or killiwak bull-bird and sea-ducks.

Every resources minister goes through the same thing every session when the departmental spending estimates come up for debate.

For those seeking cairns and plaques, Mr. Dinsdale no intent that he will be the National Historic Sites and Monuments Board.

One MP, Drummond Clancy (PC—Yorkton), added this critical note on the board's handiwork:

"I think that our historic sites and monuments are a national disgrace. You flash by on a highway and you see a rusty, rusty sign, two posts and two garbage cans, and when you pull in from the highway you cannot read the sign anyway."

Mr. Clancy's views did not deter other MPs from offering a wide range of ideas for cairns. Among them:

George Hees (PC — Lisgar) wanted to make a historic site of the Manitou, Man., home of Nellie McClung, where the poet did most of her writing. Mr. Dinsdale said it is under consideration.

Robert McCleave (PC — Halifax) suggested that one of the 24-pounders used in the War of 1812 should be fired from the noon gun from the Halifax Citadel, instead of the relatively modern weapon now being used.

"I think he must have also been very tired," said Douglas Lange, "When we came to this country four years ago— I'm speaking on behalf of us English—I told him never to get this treacle with the milk that we were going to live here as good citizens. I think he remembered that."

The boy was complained of by Mrs. Lange to Mr. Diefenbaker, but neither he nor his parents thought anything of it. Mr. de Langé said, but he added the boy had no previous history of heart trouble.

Mr. Diesdale replied that a vintage cannon has been obtained. Now the problem is how to fire it so that it will go the right way—and with safety, he said. Commemorating the Arrow jet interceptor—the plane built by the AVRO plant in Toronto and cancelled by the Conservative government—was proposed by Gordon Peters (CCF—Hamilton mamling). Mr. Dinsdale said a model of it will be placed in the Commemorative Uplands Air terminal in Ottawa.

There were more weighty deliberations in the Senate, arising from the statement Tuesday night by Senator William Brunt, deputy government leader, challenging the right of the upper House to amend the government's controversial tariff bill on textiles after passing the majority there.

Senator Arthur Roebuck (Liberal—Ontario), former Ontario attorney-general, avowed Wednesday that the Senate is "shackled" by anybody into "abdicating" its right to propose amendments to government legislation.

The dispute revolves around a provision in the bill granting the government power to change powers in certain tariff decisions.

"The right of this chamber to amend government bills has been seriously challenged," Senator Roebuck said.

If Senator Brunt were right, the Senate is not what he would be: a chamber of sober second thought, but one after another means of making that thought effective.

But Senator Brunt really believed the Senate could not amend bill C-58, the tariff bill, as well peek his bags and return to his constituency of Halifax, and that was the further purpose to serve by remaining silent.

"If he believes that, then he is all through and so are we, if he has any judicial, hand and feet, in that manner."

Frame-up Claim Will Be Probed By Grand Jury

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) — The death of former pro footballer George Ratterman, reform candidate for sheriff in the face of investigation by the Campbell County grand jury after action by Circuit Judge Ray Murphy.

The judge and Campbell County Attorney Willard Wise said the grand jury will investigate Ratterman's contention that he was drugged and framed in a Newport vice arrest early Tuesday.

Earlier Wednesday, Mayor Ralph Mussman of Newport ordered an investigation of circumstances surrounding the police holdroom cell in which Ratterman case, set for next week.

Judge Murphy adjourned the current session of the grand jury for three days so that investigation would not conflict with police court action in the case scheduled for next Tuesday.

CLAIM WAS DRUGGED

Ratterman has said he was drugged and that he didn't know the woman found in the room until he was aroused by the police entry.

Ratterman has accused police he obeyed with Mussman.

Three Newport detectives raided the hotel room early Tuesday and seized Ratterman and Juanita Jean Hodges, 25, a stripper. They appear under the name of April Flowers. Miss Hodges was charged with disorderly conduct and Ratterman with breach of peace, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest.

Also arrested on a breach of peace charge was Tito Carlisi, a former Xavier University football player and now manager at the hotel.

Ratterman spent most of his professional football career with Cleveland Browns of the National Football League. In 1954 he played with Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four as a quarterback. In Montreal, he proved a big disappointment as he only won only three games in 12 that season.

Ratterman said in a statement Wednesday that the girl, incl., a long-time acquaintance, had asked to meet with him. Ratterman said he is a "semi groggy after a time and stretched out for the bed.

"I recall nothing more until I was awakened by the commotion," he said.

He said blood tests taken after his arrest showed no liquor in his system.

Ratterman is being sought for shared hydrative presence of chloral hydrate.

Expect Britain to Outline State of Her Negotiations With Common Market Lands

LONDON (CP)—Britain is expected to inform her Commonwealth partners on the course of discussions with the European Common Market countries when senior Commonwealth economic officials gather here for a meeting later this month.

The Commonwealth meeting opening May 24 comes at a time when a campaign to induce Britain to join the Common Market is gaining strength both within the country and in Europe.

There is growing speculation that Britain has formulated her final approach to the burgeoning European economic community formed three years ago by France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg and The Netherlands.

Prime Minister Macmillan and his cabinet colleagues, however, are avoiding a determined attempt to make clear Britain could not sign the treaty establishing the Common Market as it now stands.

Qualified informants said Wednesday that Britain would try to reassure her Commonwealth partners when the senior economic officials meet.

There is much uneasiness in some Commonwealth capitals that the government will make essential trading arrangements may not be adequately safeguarded in any British move to draw closer to Europe.

Widow of Rabbi Tells of Rescue By Underground

JERUSALEM (Reuters)—The widow of Oslo's only rabbi told the court trying Adolf Eichmann today how members of the Norwegian underground risked their lives to smuggle her and her three children out of the country during the war.

Smartly-dressed Mrs. Henriette Samuel said her three children were given sleeping pills to make sure they uttered no cry. They were driven across the border into neutral Sweden hidden in a shipment of potatoes.

She and her children were in a group of 40 Jews smuggled into Sweden in this way, she said.

"You are potatoes now," we were told," Mrs. Samuel testified.

Mrs. Samuel, whose husband was deported to Auschwitz in November, 1942, on the orders of Norway's 1,700 Jews reached safety in Sweden through the help of the Norwegian underground. The others were sent to Auschwitz and only 12 returned.

STOOD BY CONGREGATION

Mrs. Samuel said her husband was picked up by the Germans because he refused to leave his congregation. He was killed after the war that he had died in Auschwitz.

Earlier the prosecution had submitted an affidavit from the Nuernberg war crimes trial describing how Eichmann, the absolute dictator of Germany's 6,000 Jews, "demanded the head of the saboteur" who wrecked Nazi plans for a round-up of Jews in Denmark.

The Danish saboteur had been tipped off in advance of the planned roundup and succeeded in hiding 7,000 Jews, smuggling them to Sweden almost all of the country's Jewish population.

David Melchior, son of Denmark's chief rabbi, told the trial that thousands of Jews were rounded up only 472 Danish Jews, however, were sent to a "model" ghetto at Theresienstadt, Czechoslovakia. All but 62 survived the war.

The affidavit introduced today by the prosecution to which defense objections was by Eberhard von Thadden, a former German foreign office official, Englis, said:

He said that after the failure of the anti-Jewish swoop in Denmark Eichmann reported to Heinrich Himmler, the chief of the SS and the police, and "demanded the head of the saboteur."

200 Priests, Nuns Sail For Spain

HAVANA (Reuters) — Nearly 200 priests, nuns and monks were expected to sail for Spain aboard the Spanish steamship Covadonga.

They are the first to depart out of a total of 2,000 who already have applied for documents to leave Cuba in the face of an expected decree cancelling the residence permits of foreign priests.

The Roman Catholic clergy in Cuba is predominantly foreign. Most of the foreigners are Spanish, but some are Canadians, French, Dutch and American.

The decree, forecast May 1 by Premier Fidel Castro, has not yet been published, but the majority of those seeking to leave are teachers at Catholic private schools, a recent target of "intervention" of government takeover.

Meanwhile, embassies and airline offices have been swamped by applications for visas or tickets from Cubans eager to absorbine invasion and the subsequent arrest of counter-revolutionaries.

HARSH CHOICE

Many Cubans have had to decide between accepting the country's revolution or arriving in exile penniless and often branded as traitors by Cuban leaders and professional organizations.

Since the invasion many countries have tightened their Cuban holding visas for the United States, Britain and Canada.

The Danish people had been resigned to leaving the country.

But the American Embassy in Ottawa said that "hundreds" of queries have been made to the U.S. and Canadian embassies about visas for Sunday and Jamaica, only a small proportion of which have met the qualifications.

The particular problem is posed by counter-revolutionaries who have sought asylum in Latin American embassies and consulates during the arrests following the invasion.

Diplomats now are seeking safe-conduct from the foreign ministry for those in asylum.

Anglican Synod of Ontario Approves Motion Supporting Religion in Public Schools

KINGSTON (CP) — Religious education in schools was aired briefly Wednesday when the 95th session of the Anglican Synod of Ontario was given a report by the diocesan committee on religious education.

Rev. Fred Payne of Prescott, expressing concern at "the infiltration of secularization into our public school education," presented a motion passed by the board to be added to the synod report. The motion called for enforcement of sections of the Public School Act.

The delegates approved the addition to the report, but postponed debate on the motion until next year's synod.

The motion also approved the withdrawal as soon as possible of clergy and other church representatives from the religious education classes.

The fire was a false alarm, Bishop Evans explained, but the failure of parishes to make regular monthly contributions on the diocesan assessment accounts.

The dilatory shuffling of feet on the part of wardens in sending any money forward is terrible," he said.

Bishop Evans told the closing session an increased demand for multiple parish charges for Sunday morning services only is affecting the ministry of the church to all people in the diocese.

IS MORNING TREND

"We are in the midst of a process of change," said Bishop Evans, "and the trend today is to Sunday morning services. Parishes will not accept services in the afternoon or evening as in the past. They would far rather have a less effective arrangement of service in order to have the hours of service they want."

Parishes which have diminished in size due to population shifts also object to suggestions the amalgamation with nearby parishes. They do not readily be make changes in parish boundaries on the basis of the shortterm ministeries being offered to them, the bishop said.

Bishop Evans said the synod will coincide with the celebration of the centennial year in the diocese of Ontario. A steering committee headed by Frank B. Boyce of Kingston has been set up to make arrangements for the celebration of the centenary anniversary in the diocese.

Future of the project will depend largely on the outcome of a referendum Wednesday before the oil import administration.

Interprovincial also needs a permit to build from Canada's National Energy Board, and plans to apply for it.

If the go through, interprovincial would deliver oil to Mobil refineries at Buffalo and the Ashland concern in Kenawanda, N.Y. Its estimated 30,000 to 35,000 barrels a day would be carried at the start.

May Deliver Canadian Crude Oil to Buffalo

TORONTO (CP) — Interprovincial Pipe Line Company is negotiating on the possibility of carrying Canadian Crude oil to the Buffalo, N.Y., area.

President T. S. Johnston said Wednesday the project would involve the building of a spur of between 30 and 100 miles to tap the company's main line at Hamilton. The line now carries Western Canadian crude to Toronto by way of the United States.

Future of the project will depend largely on the outcome of a referendum Wednesday before the oil import administration.

Interprovincial also needs a permit to build from Canada's National Energy Board, and plans to apply for it.

Opposes Taxes For Financing Organizations

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A warning against allocating part of the tax for organizations financed by community giving was sounded Wednesday by Richard Hicks, executive director of the Buffalo Community Chest Fund.

Mr. Hicks said this would lead to registration of some community fund services.

One of the first marks of a disease-ridden city is a decline in voluntary giving, he said. Pride and belief in governments recede, and the way is open for bigots to take over.

Mr. Hicks addressed staff members of Community Funds across Canada who are attending a seminar at the University of Western Ontario.

Kiss-and-Run Boy's Death Is Blamed on Heart Failure

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—A coroner said here Wednesday that the sudden death Tuesday night of a Dutch immigrant youth shortly after he had stopped to kissed a girl was caused by fluid in the lungs and heart failure.

Dr. P. J. Sweeney said no decision has been made on whether an inquest will be held in the death of Theodore de Lange, 16, who fainted while being questioned in a police cruiser.

Witnesses said the youth appeared to be extremely frightened.

Hydro Electric Primary Income Up 8 Per Cent

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hydro - Electric Power Commission's net primary revenue for 1960 reached $229,000,000, an increase of $16,000,000 or eight per cent over the previous year, it was disclosed Wednesday in a printed review of Hydro's 1960 activities.

The increase in revenue was due in part to higher sales of electricity and in part to increases in rates put into effect during the year, the annual financial statement said.

Average cost of power supplied to municipal electrical utilities under long-term contracts with HEPC increased to $39.18 a kilowatt last year. This was due to higher labor, material and interest costs, and increased rates.

Expenditures on new facilities were $132,000,000, the lowest since 1955. This reduction in capital expenditures, combined with other measures aimed at conserving cash, enabled Hydro to reduce its borrowings from $125,000,000 in 1959 to $100,000,000 last year.

High School Students Save Average of $7.26 a Week

TORONTO (CP)—Results of a survey of high school students' financial habits will be released Wednesday by a University of Toronto professor at a meeting of the Canadian Association of Consumers.

Professor Jack Park of the household science department told the Globe and Mail the association the survey was conducted at five schools — Jarvis Collegiate Institute in the city of Toronto and schools in Sudbury, Port Arthur and Kingston.

A sample of 226 students showed weekly income from all sources, part-time work, parents' allowances, gifts and part-time earnings, at a high of $17.97 weekly in Toronto and a low of $7.56 in Sudbury, she said.

"We were amazed at their earnings," Miss Park said, "but even more amazed to learn that they saved over $7 a week out of $7.26 weekly."

Miss Park said 38 per cent of the students were planning university education and were saving toward it. Of the others, the students kept good budgets by keeping all expenses during the experiment, she found.

The survey showed parental financial assistance declined in Grades nine and 12, with the student assuming more responsibility. Only five per cent bought cigarettes and only 11 per cent were allowed to use the family car.

MUST LEAVE LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES (AP)—More than 10,000 persons have been advised by their physicians to leave the Los Angeles area because of a smog—and 2,500 have done so, a survey conducted by the county medical association showed today.

Offer Free Site At Kingston for Police College

KINGSTON (CP)—A Kingston delegation agreed Wednesday to acquire lot in the Ontario government headquarters area here for the Ontario police college.

Kingston as the site was approved provincial police training college.

John B. Sampson offered to donate the portion of 32 acres of scrub tract on the northern outskirts of the city near Highway 401.

Last week W. B. Common, deputy minister of general and chairman of the site committee, announced that Aylmer RCAF base near St. Thomas, headed the list of proposed sites. The base is to be closed by December in the fall.

William M. Wickie, minister of commerce and development and Progressive Conservative member for Kingston, believes Kingston is the logical location because there is a growing section of personnel here to lecture the policemen and they would have access to a "good college" at Queen's University.

TEST LAW

VICTORIA (CP) — A statement of claim filed in Supreme Court by Canada's provincial police Saskatchewan's new labor legislation is beyond provincial jurisdiction and is a violation of Canada's Bill of Rights. A statement of claim seeking right of dues checkoff from Imperial Oil Limited was filed Tuesday. The new law prohibits the use of union dues for political purposes and requires unions to file a statutory declaration that they will obey this in order to obtain dues checkoff rights. Imperial Oil cancelled the checkoff April 15.

African Lands Want to Keep Sovereignty

MONROVIA, Liberia (AP) Leaders of African nations meeting here Wednesday adopted a charter that pledges aimed at recognizing the sovereignty of each.

A communique said the leaders, all heads of government or top-level envoys of independent nations, "regarded as totally unacceptable any concept of unity which entails the surrender of the sovereignty of any African state to another."

This was obviously aimed at Ghana, which is part represented among the score of nations at the Monrovia talks but which has talked of acquiring territory in Togo and Ivory Coast.

The convention was called to promote better understanding and co-operation among African nations.

U.S. Leads In Anti-Sub Techniques

WASHINGTON (Reuters)—A congressional committee was told in testimony released Wednesday that the United States is "way ahead" in anti-submarine warfare and detection techniques.

The assurance was given April 4 by Robert McNamara, the secretary of defence, to the house appropriations committee when he explained why he was asking for a crash development of the nuclear-powered Polaris mitsile submariner.

Heavily censored testimony from the private session showed that Chester Clair Engle, California Democrat, had challenged McNamara over Polaris development.

"I have the feeling that you are overrating the Russians as a weapons system," the senator said. "Here we have a Polaris in a submarine capable of moving under the water, subject to all the hazards we don't know whether you can hit the broad side of a barn with it."

The defence secretary, however, said tests to date had indicated good accuracy for the Polaris.

ATTACKS IN COURT

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla (AP)—William McFadden, 33-year-old Negro, bashed his wife's throat and stabbed her twice in the back with a butcher knife in a crowded courtroom. She was reported in fair condition in hospital. McFadden was in court Wednesday on a charge of attempting to kill his common-law wife, 22-year-old Earlene Johnson, with a screwdriver Saturday night.

Claims Police Hide Evidence

TORONTO (CP) — Malcolm Robb, Toronto lawyer, charged in court here Wednesday that police withheld from him a recording evidence they obtained during more than 60 raids on a Toronto coffee bar.

He said police are holding back evidence by the club to support a pending civil case charging police with trespassing during the raids.

Mr. Robb, appearing on behalf of two of 10 men charged with conspiring to keep a common gaming house also questioned the legality of a search warrants used by police.

All 10 accused were remanded until May 24.

MANILA (Reuters) — Sixteen persons were reported killed when dynamite used for blast-fishing exploded in a motorboat off Mactan island in the central Philippines Wednesday.

Will Gradually Implement Sex Education in Churches

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian churchmen who attended the United States - Canadian conference on Christian education last week said sex education programs will be implemented slowly in their churches.

Delegates at the Green Lake, Wis., meeting expressed concern that clergy and other trained persons counsel parents and children in sex education.

Rev. A. G. Baker, editor of the Canadian Churchman, said the Anglican church should take a clearly defined stand on family life and sex before it becomes involved.

Somehow we've never gotten off the ground on this before," he said. "I think the churches will have to, and education moe seriously now."

Rev. Frank Fidler, associate secretary to the board of christian education for the United Church of Canada, said the church's general council set up a study on sex education for young church groups last fall. The church would not give instructions in biology and that it would be discussed within the context of family life.

Rev. Robert F. Carter, assistant secretary of Christian education for the Presbyterian Church of Canada, said the church should move slowly.

WON'T RUSH

"It would be unwise to rush half a dozen of the sex education — it's a pretty risky field. "Most people feel that this is a private matter — it is an honest conviction on the part of some that prudishness on the part of others."

Rev. Kenneth Gillespie, secretary of religious education for the Baptist Federation of Canada, said it is hard to predict what action will be taken.

"We are giving a certain amount of specific sex education in our young people's groups now and it is likely that we will give more," he said.

Rev. Kenneth S. Wille, executive secretary of adult work and family life for the Canadian Council of Churches, said:

"We plan to send out reports on the Green Lake conference and leave it to the churches to decide what action, if any, they want to take."

Centre Keeps Watch on Crisis Spots

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. state department has disclosed the formation of a new cold - war operation centre to keep a constant 24-hour watch on Communist crises.

Heading the agency is Theodore Achilles, 53, who played a major role in drafting the North Atlantic Treaty 13 years ago and more recently served under State Secretary Dean Rusk.

Achilles will head the new agency which will be responsible for seeing that recommendations for dealing with crises are followed through by the secretary and through him the president.

The group also is charged with the follow-through duty of making sure that the decisions reached by Rusk and President Kennedy "are promptly implemented."

SEEK STORM AID

LIBERTY, N.Y. (AP)—Sullivan County officials Wednesday night asked Governor Nelson Rockefeller to declare the county a disaster area in the wake of Tuesday night's crippling wind storm. Authorities estimate property damage of $1,000,000 in destroyed homes and farm buildings.

9 Canadian R.C. Churches May Have to Be Renamed Because of Vatican Decision

By BERTRAND TRESAULT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—At least nine churches in Canada, including a cathedral, may have to choose new names as a result of the Vatican's decision to strike the name of Philomena from the roll of saints.

The Vatican's decision was announced April 18 when the Sacred Congregation of Rites declared that Philomena, popularly venerated as a martyred virgin was neither a martyr nor a saint. The college said she had been venerated in error due to popular fervor rather than liturgical fact.

The decision, not the first of its type taken by the church, caused some surprise, but was looked on as evidence of the care the church takes to ensure the veracity of testimonies of faith in the light of the most modern historical and scientific methods of research.

Devotion to St. Philomena, known as "the little saint of the cures d'Ars," started in Italy in 1805 although her authenticity was never truly established despite minor approval in particular cases. The devotion spread to France and then to Canada in the 19th century.

In 1840, the church in suburban Chateauguay was placed under her patronage. In the early 1850s the pastor of Ste. Petronille parish on the Island of Orleans, near Quebec City, became the self-appointed propagator of devotion to St. Philomena in Canada.

MORE CHURCHES FOLLOW

Later the name was given to churches in Fortierville, Montcerf, Beauharnois and Mannheville in Quebec, Ormsby, Ont., the northern mission of Buffalo Narrows and Howe Island and the cathedral of Gravelbourg, Sask.

The name Philomena, which means beloved, was taken from an inscription on three bricks enclosing a tomb in the Priscilla catacombs in Rome. The inscription on each of the three bricks was "Pax tibi Cumfi Lumena" — Peace with you Philomena.

In 1802, Don Francois di Lucia, from the Naples parish of Mugnano del Cardinale, went to Rome to obtain from the catacombs a saintly body for his private chapel. He obtained the one buried behind the three bricks.

From that time onward, there was devotion to St. Philomena. Pope Gregory XVI fixed her feast day for Aug. 11.

In 1961, the Sacred Congregation of Rites approved the weaning of the "cord of St. Philomena," a society among her name was founded and May 21, 1922, Pope Pius X raised the society to the rank of a universal confraternity.

NO LONGER A SAINT.— This statue of Philomena and others like it in Roman Catholic churches with the name St. Philomena may have to be removed as a result of a decision of the Vatican's Sacred Congregation of Rites. The congregation ruled that Philomena had been venerated in error as a martyr. This statue is in a Montreal church. (CP PHOTO)

Early in the 19th century, an Italian archaeologist expressed doubt that the three bricks found in the tomb of the catacombs actually belonged there. A controversy developed among theologians and experts. Some claimed the bricks had been removed from some other spot and were simply used to block a hole in the tomb.

In 1920, Pope Pius XI established a historical section in the Congregation of Rites and ordered it to make a thorough study of facts and documents pertaining to the beatification and canonisation of saints in earlier centuries.

As a result of its work several names were struck from the roll of saints.

What of the miracles and favors certain people claimed they obtained through intercession to St. Philomena?

This question was put to a theologian at the Grand Seminaire of Montreal and he said: "It has to be remembered that a miracle is the result of direct intervention by God. An all-powerful God could use a fictitious saint to perform a miracle, accomplished solely because of the faith of the person asking for it.

Cecile Opposes Adoption Fees

TORONTO (CP) — Welfare Minister Cecile has rejected a proposal that fees be charged for adoption of infants.

"On the face of it," he said, "I'm against it. It would be something like selling a baby. I'd fear there might be harmful psychological reactions on the child if, when he grew up, he found he had been in a sense bought."

The proposal was made during a meeting last month of the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies. Mr. Cecile said investigation has been ordered into the problem of the operation of these societies, but added the problem of the child will come first.

IN LEGAL BATTLE — These are key figures in a lawsuit by Gaspe Copper Mines Limited of Murdochville, Que., against the United Steelworkers of America (CLC). The company is claiming $5,378,892 from the union for property damage in a 1957 strike. The strike was touched off over the firing of Theo Gagne (left), president of the Murdochville local of the union. Lawyers in the case are Gaston Pouliot (upper right), for the company, and Guy Merrill Desaulniers (lower right) for the union. (CP Photo).

Suit Against Steelworkers Union, Started in Sept., Nowhere Near Completion

QUEBEC (CP)—One of the biggest lawsuits ever launched in Canada against a union is in the eighth month of hearings and shows no sign of coming to an end.

Gaspe Copper Mines Limited of Murdochville, Que., is claiming damages [illegible] from the Steelworkers Union of America for [illegible] during the [illegible] strike.

The trial, started [illegible] has been [illegible] 23 days of sitting, More than 1,000,000 words of testimony have been taken — enough to fill 15 good-sized novels.

The strike that started the whole thing was something of a modern landmark in labor-management feuding. At the time the USW was seeking the right to bargain for Gaspe Copper employees.

About one thousand men were involved in the walkout, which lasted seven months. There were major bombings—one of which killed a union member and injured two others — punctuated the struggle.

CRITICIZED POLICE

Quebec Provincial Police sent about 125 men into the small Gaspe Peninsula town shortly after the walkout started and kept them there until it ended.

The police said their men were needed to try to keep peace. The union charged they were used for strike-breaking. The present Liberal government recently was asked to have a royal commission look into the activities of the police during the walkout.

Touching off the strike March 10, 1957, was the firing of Theo Gagne, a plumber and president of the Murdochville local of the USW. Gaspe Copper says he was laid off because of a lack of work; the union says he was fired because of his organizing activities.

One thing is clear — after seven months of fist fights, rock throwing and other abuse, the company won the fierce struggle.

The USW never did get the right to represent the Murdochville workers, who now have an independent organization—branded by the USW as a company union.

Specifically, the company accuses the steelworkers' international headquarters in Pittsburgh of responsibility for calling the strike and for the violence and damage that followed.

PROPERTY DAMAGED

Gaspe Copper bases its giant claim on its estimates of damage caused to its property and the value of production lost during the walkout. The claim for lost production is $4,800,000.

The union has adopted a two-pronged defence. First, the USW head office denies responsibility for calling the strike. It says the company goaded the men into walking out by firing Mr. Gagne and spreading rumors that mass layoffs would follow.

Union witnesses also rejected the allegation that the union was to blame for the violence and said union officials actually prevented several serious incidents by counselling the workers to be patient.

Secondly, the union says Gaspe Copper's total claim is unrealistic, swollen and unfounded in fact.

Most of the evidence so far has involved company efforts to [illegible] claim.

[illegible] the evidence [illegible] recently called more than 200 witnesses to testify. The company should fill most several weeks ago and the union has been presenting more.

Company witnesses included chartered accountants, economists and mine officials to explain why the damage claim exceeded $6,000,000.

Union witnesses—including other chartered accountants and economists, but no mine executives—have just as carefully explained why they think the claim should be rejected.

INTERIM DAMAGE CLAIM

Montreal chartered accountant Davis Small, testifying for the union, said the company's lost production claim should be reduced to $61,000 from $4,800,000 because the company had improperly included certain losses in its estimate.

Then he returned to the witness box the next day and said the claim should be wiped out because the company had saved $258,000 in wages it would have had to pay its employees had there not been a walkout.

Under Quebec's civil code a parent body is responsible for the actions of its employees and if the USW officials at Murdochville at the time of the strike are found responsible as charged by the company, the union's head office would be held responsible too, unless the court decided they acted as individuals and evaded USW directives.

Whether or not a finding under Quebec's civil code could be held valid in other parts of Canada, where such findings are based on British common law, is not known.

STRIKE WAS ILLEGAL

Under Quebec's law, the strike itself was illegal. Provincial law provides that a strike cannot take place until 14 days after a labor arbitration board has handed down recommendations in the dispute.

The Murdochville conflict never got to arbitration. The walkout occurred during negotiations for certification of a USW local as the bargaining agent for Gaspe Copper employees—negotiations that were delayed by legal proceedings.

Gaspe Copper imported two lawyers from Montreal—Gaston Pouliot and Jean Martineau—to handle its case. Another Montreal lawyer, Guy Merrill Desaulniers, has teamed with Louis-Philippe Pigeon of Quebec to act for the union.

The presiding judge in the small, dingy court room is Mr. Justice Antoine Lecourtsire, a tall, severe-looking man who jots down copious notes as the witnesses are examined.

Deal With Bruins

Habs Send B. Turner To Chihawks

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens, who promised some lineup changes after the club was eliminated in the Stanley Cup semi-finals last season, announced trades involving Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins Wednesday.

The Canadiens sent defenceman Bob Turner to the Hawks, the team that knocked Montreal out of the semi-finals in six games, and went on to win the Stanley Cup, in return for left-winger Fred Hilts of Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds of the Eastern Professional Hockey League.

They also sent Cliff Pennington and right-winger Terry Gray from Hull-Ottawa Canadiens of the EPHL to Boston for left-winger Willie O'Ree, forward Stan Maxwell, and an undisclosed amount of cash.

Hilts, 21, was the top goal-scorer in the EPHL last season with 45. He is given the best chance of the newcomers of cracking the Montreal lineup, since leftwing was one of the spots picked by club officials for strengthening after the Canadiens' upset.

O'Ree and Maxwell are expected to go to Hull-Ottawa. O'Ree started last season there but was called to Boston and proved a crowd pleaser, though a light scorer.

PLAYED FOR KINGSTON

Maxwell was with Kingston of the EPHL last season, getting 23 goals in 49 games.

Pennington, who captured the EPHL scoring title with 33 goals and 69 assists in 65 games, also was picked on the league's all-star team, got the rookie-of-the-year and the most-gentlemanly player awards and tied with Skippy Birchell of Montreal Royals as the league's most valuable player.

For Gray, the trade gives him his second shot at the National Hockey League. He was sold to Chicago a couple of seasons ago but was returned to the minors. Hull-Ottawa bought his contract at the start of last season. He scored 40 goals and 37 assists.

A spokesman for Montreal Canadiens said Turner was traded "to make room for young prospects."

He expressed regret at losing Pennington and Gray, but noted that since only 18 players can be protected in the NHL's annual player draft, it was thought best to trade them.

KINGSTON (CP)—Cliff Pennington, Hull-Ottawa Canadiens centre who was traded Wednesday by Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, may be the answer to a Bruin problem which has existed for several seasons.

General Manager Lynn Patrick of the Bruins said in a telephone interview Wednesday that Pennington possesses one of the hardest shots in hockey and will be used on the power play next season with Doug Mohns.

"Pennington shoots as hard as any of them in the NHL," said Patrick, "and that includes Bernie Geoffrion of Montreal."

"We've tried every guy on our club on the point with Mohns and haven't been able to find a player with the proper shot.

Pennington, the Bruins general manager added, reminds him of Sweeney Schriner. When there's an opening he can bust through it."

IRELAND LOSES

BERLIN (AP) — West Germany defeated Northern Ireland 3-1 Wednesday, virtually guaranteeing the Germans a place in the world soccer championship in Chile next year. The Germans have only to beat Greece at home next October to assure themselves a trip to Chile. They beat the Greeks 3-0 in Athens earlier.

Loi Verdicts Ortez Retains Welter Title

MILAN, Italy (AP)—Italy's Duilio Loi survived a last-round knockdown by former champion Carlos Ortiz of New York and retained his world junior welterweight boxing title Wednesday night with a unanimous 15-round decision. Loi, winning the rubber match of a three-fight series, weighed 138, Ortiz 136½.

Comfortably ahead on points after dropping Ortiz in the sixth round, Loi ran into a solid right from the 24 - year - old Puerto Rico-born New Yorker midway in the 15th round. He wasn't hurt seriously, however, and bounced right up before a count could start and stayed out of trouble until the bell.

Both judges and the referee, Frank Carter of San Francisco, who officiated at Ortiz' request, voted for the stocky, 33-year-old Italian. The bout was watched by 40,000 fans.

It was the first defence of the championship by Loi, who lifted the title from Ortiz in a split decision last September.

IN TOP CONTENDER

LONDON (AP) — England staked its claim as a top contender for the world soccer cup championship Wednesday by walloping Mexico 8-0 before 77,000 fans at Wembley Stadium. It was the sixth straight victory for the team in international competition.

The Bell Toiled Well

Tribe Back In Third Spot

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Gary Bell finally licked his problem — a sore arm that some observers felt was more than physical — and has the Cleveland Indians back in third place in the American League race.

The big 24-year-old right-hander was sent home early in the season with a 9-10 record because of the arm trouble. This spring he was given a physical okay but seemed timid about giving the arm a real test.

At least so thought Frank Lane, former Cleveland general manager, after a scouting visit to the Indians' spring camp this year. Lane, now with Kansas City figured "it's just something the youngster will have to work out for himself."

Bell "worked it out" Wednesday night. He went 11 innings against Chicago White Sox as the Indians made off with an 8-7 victory. The win was Bell's first after losing seven in a row —four this season — since last July 30. It was his first complete game in 12 starts since last July 4.

RETAINED LEAD

Detroit retained a three-game bulge over second place New York by hammering Washington 7-1. The Yankees defeated Kansas City 9 - 4, Minnesota whipped Baltimore 10 - 6 and Boston defeated the Los Angeles Angels 3-2.

Bell, a 16-game winner for the Tribe in 1959, took over the AL strike-out lead with 33 by fanning eight. He walked four and gave up seven hits, blanking the White Sox after Roy Sievers's solo seventh homer tied it 2-2 in the fourth inning.

The Indians, who scored on Vic Power's home run in the second and added an unearned marker in the fourth against starter Bob Shaw, broke loose for the six runs in the 11th against reliever Frank Baumann.

Tito Francona's third double of the game and Jimmy Piersall's single broke the tie. That was all Cleveland needed to send the Sox to their eighth defeat in nine games, but Woody Held tripled in a run and Chuck Essegian and Bubba Phillips each crashed two-run homers.

BEATS WASHINGTON

Detroit made it seven out of eight behind the five-hit pitching of Jim Bunning. The slim right-hander beat Washington a second time, blanking the Senators on three hits after an unearned run in the second. Bunning, who struck out seven, also singled home the clincher when the Tigers broke out for four runs in the second against Ed Hobaugh.

Tex Clevenger, winning in his first appearance with the Yankees since Monday's trade with the Angels, blanked the A's with four innings of one-hit relief after they tied it 4-4 in the seventh against starter Ralph Terry. The Yankees broke it up with five runs in the eighth, with Elston Howard's double beating Bud Daley. Norm Siebern homered for the Athletics.

Minnesota shelled Baltimore starter Dick Hall in a nine-run second inning. Harmon Killebrew and Billy Gardner each hit three-run homers in the rally and Zoilo Versalles hit a solo homer.

DROVE IN FOUR

Jerry Adair drove in four runs for Baltimore, three on a pair of homers. Jim Gentile, the lefty slugger who set a record with two consecutive grand slams Tuesday, was benched in the Orioles' platoon system when southpaw Jack Kralick started for the Twins.

Gentile came on as a pinch-hitter against righthander Ray Moore in the ninth and struck out.

• The Red Sox were held hitless for five innings at Los Angeles, then crashed through for three runs in the sixth against Bob Moeller. Singles by Pumpsie Green, winning pitcher Tom Brewer and Chuck Schilling tied it 3-3, and rookie Carl Yastrzemski won it with a two-run homer. Moeller, Tom Morgan and Ryne Duren, the latter picked up in the Clevenger deal, combined for 17 strikeouts.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

That tough pair of Siberian tovarishes, Nikita and Ivan Kalmikoff, may run into serious trouble tomorrow night unless they brush up in the weightlifting department.

They face a couple of large chunks of beef on the roof, to wit, Farmer Boy Townsend and Man Mountain Campbell. The big brain from Bear Creek, Kentucky matches 340, hillbilly jeans included and his favorite circle is a bear hug.

The foursome matches meat, mechanics and what not in the tag-team main bout at Memorial Arena.

However, what has all the earmarks of a top-flight main bout is the semi-final between the vice-president of the Kalmikoff union, one Karol, a rough - tough guy who meets up with the popular Tony Marino who made a big hit here a week ago against Gorgeous George. This should be one for the archives.

For sheer ability and agility on one side and cleverly engineered skullduggery on the other, this bout could very well steal the show. Marino is a fine, well-proportioned athlete who is fast and deadly, while Karol is a master tactician, and not averse to using tactics that don't promote his fandom popularity.

And a new touch is the famed "bad man" from Arvida, Quebec, Stan Stasiak, who meets Les Lyman, known here as a fast, clever mat-man. This should be as good a card escape as would wish.

It's a far cry from hammerlocks to harmony, but the two merge marvellously in this personality known as Farmer Boy. For this young, six-foot-four, 260 pounder has been endowed with exceptional talents in the diverse realms of wrestling and singing.

Obviously never one to do things by halves, Farmer Boy was raised on two farms. He attended school in Haddonfield, N.J., was a collegiate wrestler for four years and won the New Jersey state championships. He wrestled two more years while serving with the Marines before turning professional.

" This versatile fellow was also a member of the All-Marine Corps Rifle and Pistol team which competed in matches at Camp Perry.

Those big legs of his account for his prowess in track events, in which he specialized in the mile. He played some high school football but was more interested in wrestling and singing.

Coming from a family who liked to sing, Farmer Boy made his first vocal venture with the Haddonfield Choral Society. In high school he had the lead role in the musical "Down in the Valley" and continued his singing in the Marine Corps, performing with Johnny Long's band.

Since then he has appeared in club, radio and TV shows, including the Celebrity Club in St. Louis. He expects to make a guest appearance at the Town Casino in Buffalo also on Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts.

"People have called me 'Farmer' as long as I can remember," he chuckled. "I guess I'm just a country boy and the farm hasn't rubbed off me yet."

His wrestling ideals are Whipper Watson, Pat O'Connor and Lou Thesz. His top singers are Bing Crosby, Harry Belafonte and yes, Elvis Presley. "I admire Presley's commercial approach," said Farmer, who has nothing against money, either.

While he sings everything from serious composition to Rock 'n' Roll (he's made 'em squeal too), he prefers ballad types that tell a story, such as "Birth of the Blues" and "Galway Bay."

Does he prefer wrestling to singing? He'd like to be tops in both and doesn't think one needs interfere with the other. He'd surely like to be a combination of Eddie Fisher and Whipper Watson. He makes you feel he'll do it too.

At the moment, his most absorbing aim is testing opponents with the type of bars that will make them sing "UNCLE."

Giants' McCormick Plank-Walks Bucs

Podres First To Win Five

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

If Mike McCormick, Johnny Podres and Stan Henry, not to mention a guy named Warren Spahn, keep it up this could be the year of the southpaw in the National League pennant race.

McCormick pitched his second three-hit shutout of the season Wednesday night as first-place San Francisco Giants beat Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0. The Giants also managed just three singles, but bunched them for all their runs with two out in the fifth inning—the only frame in which they put a man on base.

Podres became the first pitcher to win five this season in the majors, extending his shutout streak to 15 innings with a five-hitter as second-place Los Angeles Dodgers remained within a game of the lead by defeating Philadelphia Phillies 5-0.

And Henry, who hasn't allowed a run in 8 2-3 innings of superb relief this season, gained his third consecutive save by striking out the side in the ninth as Cincinnati Redlegs beat St. Louis Cardinals 3-2. It was the Reds' ninth straight victory and put them in third place.

ERROR AIDS GIANTS

An error by Pirates third baseman Don Hoak gave the Giants the big break after McCormick (2-1) and Bob Friend (4-4) had dueled through four innings of perfect pitching. Felipe Alou beat out a roller to third and went to second when Hoak's throw to first was wild. That left first open and Friend walked Orlando Cepeda intentionally. Jose Pagan followed with a run-scoring single and Giants' centre fielder Bill Virdon bobbled the ball. Bailey went to third and Pagan took second. McCormick brought them in with a single. McCormick struck out 12 and walked three, didn't allow a base runner until Hoak singled with one out in the fifth. It was the Giants' fifth victory in six games and the third shutout of the season for the world champion Pirates—who were blanked only four times all last year.

The Dodgers, winning four in a row for the first time this season, made it on four RBI by Ron Fairly, whose second home run in two nights—a three-run shot in the second—beat Frank Sullivan (1-3). Podres, still unbeaten, gave up nothing but singles, while sending the Phils to their ninth straight defeat.

A two-run homer by Vada Pinson in the first inning and an RBI single by Chico Cardenas in the third beat Curt Simmons (1-2) for the Reds. Henry saved it for Joey Jay (2-3) in the ninth against four pinch-hitters.

The Braves handed Cubs' rookie lefthander Don Elston (4-1) his first defeat on a bases-loaded error by second baseman Don Zimmer that let in the tie-breaking run in the ninth. It was Burdette's second victory in three decisions.

LANE NOT QUITTING

KANSAS CITY (AP)—Charles Finley, owner of Kansas City Athletics, said Wednesday a report general manager Frank Lane is leaving the club to accept a similar post at Houston, Tex., was untrue as far as he knew. Lane was not immediately available for comment. Rumors have circulated that Lane would replace Gabe Paul as general manager of the Houston club which will join the National League next year.

Eliminate Red Line?

CAHA May Adopt Masks, Helmets

MELVILLE, Sask. (CP) — Face masks and helmets will be compulsory if the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association annual convention adopts suggested rule changes.

Gordon Juckes of Melville, CAHA secretary-treasurer, said Wednesday the mandatory face mask for goalies and helmets for other players are among the 144 resolutions to come before the four - day annual meeting opening May 22 in Port Arthur.

Elimination of the "red line" and a quick call on "icing the puck" also are sought at amateur hockey's most important meeting of the year.

Other resolutions ask for stronger penalties against players for repeated serious infractions, such as spearing.

During the conference a special committee will sit to consider a complete revision of the CAHA regulation book. The report says there is a tendency to misinterpretations and also make the regulations easier to read and understand.

MAY SWITCH GAMES

It is quite likely also that the CAHA executive will be asked the time now is ripe to have the Memorial Cup classic played in the east one year and west next season. In the past the seven - game finals have been played either entirely in the west or entirely in the east.

Also polled for discussion with regard to professional amateur relations will be that of televising National Hockey League playoffs. This spring the television of six games in the Stanley Cup semi-finals in eight cities paved the way for a massive playoff schedules, resulting in delayed series and poor ratings.

Also to be squeezed into the agenda are reports from the CAHA's minor hockey committee, the Hall of Fame committee and a number of special committees.

To date some 46 accredited delegates, alternate delegates and visitors have registered for the meeting, and it is expected many of the general sessions will be attended by upwards of 50 hockey men from across Canada and some from the United States.

Five-Team Circuit In Softball

Trenton Halloran's, league dicaliists two years ago and loop leaders for the better part of last season, have withdrawn from the Belleville and District softball league, it was officially announced at a meeting here last night.

Trouble fielding a team at practices this spring and some differences of opinion among the team executives apparently led to the disbandment of the club. The Halloran players are expected to show up in the B and D. players lists, however, in the other five teams' lineups.

This leaves the loop with five solid entries, the Belleville Bobcats and Joyce Real Estate, Colonge Merchants, RCAF Flyers, who will play their games on the Trenton town diamond this year, and the Picton Wolfs.

A new five-team schedule was approved last night and the opening game will be between the Bobcats and Colonge at the Belleville Fairgrounds at 8.15 on Monday, May 22. Opening ceremonies will be held. A complete schedule will be published in tomorrow's Ontario Intelligencer, along with the Bobcats' interlocking schedule in the Kingston league.

League president Bill Hurst announced at the start of last night's meeting that he had been unable to secure umpires outside of the Bay of Quinte Umpires' Association.

The league had passed a motion earlier not to pay the officials the raise from $4.25 a game per man to the requested $5. However since outside officials could not be located, it was decided to offer the Quinte Association the $5, providing they would sign a long-term contract.

After some discussion and the matter was put to a vote, the league signed a five-year contract, for the $5. per man, plus 15 cents mileage per man, one way. Thus the officials cannot sue for another raise for at least five years. The motion was passed by a 4-1 majority, with the Bobcats the only team sticking to their "no" vote.

With lights being used for night games, throughout the league this summer, all games will start at 8.15 p.m. except in Picton. Because of a 10.00 p.m. curfew, games in Picton will commence at eight o'clock there.

The teams will play a 16-game schedule, eight home and eight away, with the possibility of more games being added later.

The league's new constitution and by-laws were read in detail with some minor changes being made. Overall, they met with the team representatives' approval and a vote of thanks was given to league secretary-treasurer Cliff "Scotty" Belch for the great deal of work involved.

It was decided that each club must submit a set of ground rules to Belch by June 1. These ground rules will be printed and given to all umpires and team managers.

It was also announced that the league standing will be kept on a points system, with two points for a win and one for a tie.

The schedule games will be played as follows; at Bobcats and RCAF on Tuesdays, at Picton on Wednesdays, Joyce Real Estate on Thursdays and at Colonge on Saturdays. Both Belleville teams will play some Friday games while Picton may have some Wednesday games changed to Saturdays. Most of the Bobcats' home games against Kingston teams will be on Saturdays.

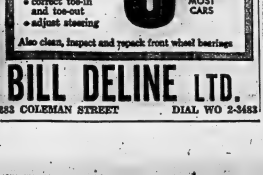
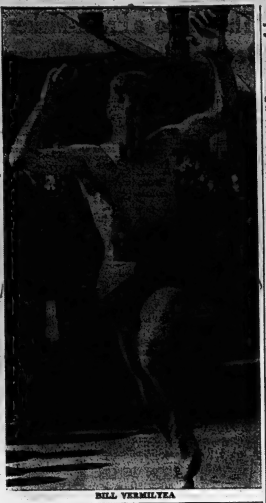
WHITNEY HORSE WINS



NEWMARKET, England (AP) — The Aga, a colt owned by former United States ambassador John Hay Whitney, won the Newmarket Stakes Wednesday, finishing ahead of three horses named for the Epsom Derby May 31.

Aurelius, a derby hope, started favorite at 13-8 but The Aga, a 100-7 shot, beat him by a neck. Primius, starting at odds 9-2, was third, six lengths behind.



The victory netted $7,604 for Whitney. The Aga ran the mile and a quarter in 2:07 4-5.

BILL VERMILYEA

Breaks Own Record

Vermilyea Wins Harrier

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Bill Vermilyea, fleet-footed grade eleven student from Moira Secondary School, outdistanced 50 other Bay of Quinte district harriers yesterday afternoon to capture the 17th annual running of the Ken Colling Memorial cross-country run.

Vermilyea ran away from the pack by a wide margin, romping home at least a quarter of a mile ahead of runner-up Eugene Fowler, and surpassed his own record in the bargain.

This was the second win in a row for the Moira youth and he made it a convincing one. He ran the four-mile course last May in 20.9.3 and yesterday set a new mark of 19.39.3.

Following the presentations in the BCIVS gym, Vermilyea said he had felt good during the race and had been trying to better his old record. "I broke my record more than once in practice runs, and was sure hoping I could do it today when it counted," he told this department.

Asked if he would be back for a third attempt next year, Vermilyea said that he would. Another victory next year would give him permanent possession of this edition of the beautiful trophy, donated along with crests, by Mr. Cleo Colling, brother of the late sports editor of this newspaper.

During the presentations following the race, prize money was divided among the top six finishers while the top 36 received crests. Sixty-four boys were slated to go with the gun but four late scratches cut the field slightly. The boys were still coming across the finish line long after the leaders had headed for the showers. A rather stiff breeze and a warming sun combined to make it a colorful affair as hundreds of students and other spectators lined the BCI campus and Church Street, where the finish line was located.

Eugene Fowler was a popular second as he led a couple of his fellow students from the Ontario School for the Deaf across the line. Fowler's second-place time was 20.54.9 while Fred Kreiger took third in 21.3 and Don Richardson grabbed fourth with the time of 21.5. This gave OSD three of the four top spots and the boys were given a rousing hand in the gym.

Alex McNaught of Quinte Secondary School, expected to be Vermilyea's main opponent for the honors, came in fifth in 21.24. Don Ishbel nabbed a finish dropped McNaught back a place or two.

Lee Smith of Moira was sixth in 21.34 while Harvey Brant of Moira finished in seventh spot, just out of the money.

Rod Follwell handled the master of ceremonials job for the presentations and he and Homer "Flash" Townsend handed out the crests. Pete Annis and Father McGee presented the "Big Six" prizes while Mr. Colling presented Vermilyea with his trophy and called on a damp-eyed, aging and proud grandfather Vermilyea to take a bow along with "this younger fellow."

Although one lad was reported sick in the school shower room, most of the runners appeared to be in good condition when it was all over.

Schools represented in the race were Albert College, QSS, BCIVS, Nicholson College, Moira Secondary School, OSD, Campbellford, Tweed, Madoc, St. Michael's and Picton.

WINS RACE FEATURE

MONTREAL (CP) — Punch Herbert, seven-year - old bay horse owned by Napoleon Laberge of Montreal won the featured $1,700 seventh race purse at Blue Bonnets Park Wednesday night. Punch Herbert covered the mile in 2:06 and returned $4.40, $2.80.

Coach Job 'Appeals' To Harvey

VANCOUVER (CP) — Doug Harvey says the idea of being player-coach of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League "appeals some."

In an interview here the Montreal Canadiens defenceman said:

"I read where Mr. (Frank) Selke said the Rangers can have me as a player-coach and the idea appeals to me.

"I want to become a coach, but never thought it would be suggested that I start at the NHL level."

Harvey, here as part of a goodwill tour of a brewery, said he has not talked to the Rangers or Selke, Montreal managing director.

Selke said last week Harvey could be freed for New York "but only as a player-coach."

BRUINS GET GOALIE

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Goalie Don Head of Portland Buckaroos of the Western Hockey League was traded Wednesday to Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League for two players, plus the loan of a goaltender. Portland gets defenceman Jack Bionda outright, plus another player to be named at the NHL meeting in June. The Bruins will loan Portland a goalie who will be named later.

Major Leagues Cutdown

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

More than 20 expendables — rookies who failed to win regular berths and old - timers whose baseball talents weren't badly needed — joined minor league clubs today as the major leagues passed the cutdown date.

Only 25 players now may be carried on major league rosters until after Aug. 31, when the limit goes up to 40 until the opening of the next season. The 18 major clubs have been optioning, selling and trading their surplus for several days and there was a flurry last night just before the midnight deadline.

Washington Senators and Chicago White Sox, who opened the season a day earlier than the others, had to make the cut Tuesday. The limit is 30 days from the opening.

The White Sox then picked up Wes Covington from Milwaukee Braves and had to make another cut. Boston Red Sox and Chicago Cubs got down to the 25-man limit the same day.

Here's how the other teams were trimmed:

National League

St. Louis Cardinals — Traded outfielder Bob Nieman to Cleveland Indians of the American League for Joe Morgan; Assigned Morgan and pinch-hitter George Crowe, 38, to San Juan Marlins of the International League.

San Francisco Giants — Optioned rookie second baseman Ernie Bowman and outfielder Bob Farley to Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League.

Los Angeles Dodgers — Removed relief pitcher Ed Palmquist from the roster. If he is not sold to another National League club he will be sent to Spokane of Pacific Coast League.

Pittsburgh Pirates — Sold pitcher Tom Cheney to Columbus Jets of the International League.

Philadelphia Phillies — Optioned infielder Bob Sadkowski to Buffalo Bisons of the International League.

Milwaukee Braves—Sent outfielder Wes Covington to the White Sox on waivers; optioned rookie catcher Phil Roof to Yakima of the Northwest League.

Cincinnati Redlegs — Unconditionally released veteran infielder Willie Jones; sold pitcher Claude Osteen and outfielder Harry Anderson to Indianapolis of the American Association; obtained first baseman Dick Gernert from Detroit Tigers of the American League.

American League

Minnesota Twins — Unconditionally released outfielder Pete Whisenant.

Cleveland — Optioned pitcher Schaeffer to Salt Lake City of the Pacific Coast League on 24-hour recall.

Los Angeles Angels — Sent pitcher Ray Semproch, no longer than those onto of the International League sold first baseman Jollo Recuer to Buffalo, but gave him time to reconsider his threat to retire.

Baltimore Orioles — Optioned catcher Frank Zupo to Rochester of the International League on 24-hour recall; cut one other player, reported to be pitcher Gordon Jones, but withheld announcement of his name.

New York Yankees — Sold pitcher Ted Wieand and optioned outfielder Jack Reed to Richmond of the International League.

Detroit — Traded first baseman-outfielder Dick Gernert to Cincinnati for infielder Jim Baumer and cash; optioned Baumer, a veteran catcher Harry Chiti and rookie pitcher Joe Grzenda to Denver of the American Association.

Kansas City Athletics — Optioned outfielder Leo Posada to Shreveport of the Southern Association.

Twins Park Homer Haven For Batters

By WHITNEY MARTIN

Yet the park has become a homer haven. Even athletes who usually consider a good single a triumph, step to the plate and eye the distant barriers menacingly.

"It seems to be the same as when I played here with St. Paul Saints of the American Association in 1956," Jim Gentile of Baltimore Orioles said after hitting grand - slam home runs in two consecutive innings Tuesday.

"Something will have to be done," moaned manager Cookie Lavagetto after watching seven balls disappear as his Twins took the 15-6 beating from Baltimore. "I don't know whether it's the park dimensions or the pitching, maybe a little of both, but I never thought balls would jump out of here the way they do."

NOBODY KNOWS

In the Twins' 12 home games to date, 34 home runs have been registered. Maybe it's the altitude — 850 feet. Maybe the pitchers get shorn-indoned. Pedro Ramos of the Twins has thrown seven home-run balls in 21⅓ innings. Maybe a vagrant breeze lies in wait to whisk balls over the walls.

Nobody has come up with the answer. The fans go for home runs, so they aren't complaining.

Five homers were hit Wednesday as the Twins exploded for a three-run second inning to defeat the Orioles 10-6.

AT THE PARK — Jack Ging and John Goddard co-star with Stanley Clements and Doug Henderson in "Snipers Ridge" Belleville and Century Theatre, Trenton as the companion feature with "David and Goliath," starring Orson Welles as King Saul.

Price Right But Tape Not, NBC Unreels Wrong Show

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—It has to happen sometime, with all the taped TV shows around, and it finally happen Wednesday morning: NBC started to run the wrong tape of the show, The Price is Right.

The program scheduled for Tuesday night's production of the show started unreeling, and almost im m e d i a t e l y somebody discovered the mistake.

"please stand by" sign was flashed on the screen while a substitution was made. There came a brief pause, and organ music, and soon the right tape was unveiled—with the show already in progress.

Television industry, deals a hard blow Tuesday by criticism of its programming practices by Newton N. Minow, chairman of the Federal Communications Commission. Newton N. Minow, appears to be handling it in general with stunned silence.

Minow, addressing the National Association of Broadcasters, described much of TV as a "vast wasteland." He spoke of a "procession of game shows, violence, audience participation shows, formula comedies about totally unbelievable families, blood and thunder, mayhem, violence, sadism, murder, western badness, western goodness, private eyes, gangsters, more violence and cartoons.

"And endlessly, commercials —many screaming, cajoling and offending. And, most of all, boredom."

None of his criticism was new. But it had enormous impact coming from the head of the government agency which, with its licensing powers, has life-and-death authority over the industry.

In essence, Minow told the broadcasters to improve the quality of their output or risk losing their licenses to "the public's air" for their profitable businesses. It was tough talk and it might even have some effect on programs, as soon as next season.

"101 DALMATIANS"

'101 Dalmatians' Returns Disney To First Love — Humor

Swerving from the classics for which he is so famous, Walt Disney strides into cartoon features he has followed since the day his first, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," amazed the world.

"Dalmatians" follows in the footsteps of his five-time cartoon oddies, "The Shaggy Dog," released last year, and a Fred McMurtry starrer, "The Absent Minded Professor."

Humor, of course, has long been Disney's forte. The hundreds of cartoon shorts which put his name on the world map of entertainment were almost invariably comedies.

As production of shorts grew less and the output of features increased at the Burbank studio, Disney turned more to adventure, history and romance. "Shaggy Dog" swung him back on the laugh track in live-action and now "Dalmatians," much more sophisticated than anything he has done in any field, follows suit in cartoons. "One Hundred and One Dalmatians," in color by Technicolor, starting today at the Belle Theatre, is The One To See, time after time, the laughs follow one another right up to the exciting climax. It's a comedy-adventure-romance-mystery thriller—and delightfully different.

An added feature on the same program is Walt Disney's "The Horse With the Flying Tail," offering 48 minutes of hilarious entertainment.

On Friday, continuous showings of "Dalmatians" will begin at 2.00 with a special afternoon matinee Friday at 4.30, the happy family program concluding at 6.30 at the Belle Theatre in Belleville.

'The Alamo' a Profit-Maker Despite Knocks Says Wayne

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor John Wayne was relaxing on the Hatari set and talking again about The Alamo.

It will earn a profit despite the scoffers, he said. "The latest figure is a world gross of $17,000,000 and it may go higher. It's doing fantastic business in Japan, also in Scandanavia and England. Over here, it's doing fine. . . .

"The way it looks now, we'll all make a little profit. Not much; but some. I'm happy not only. because I had my own dough in the picture for the first time. I talked my friends into investing, too. I was sweatin' it out for those Texans who backed me.

"I took a chance and I'm glad of it. I went against the trend and showed Americans as heroes. I could have showed them as heels, but I didn't want to."

WOULD HE?

Would he wear the three hats he produced, directed and starred in?

"You bet! I had a ball."

But he'll follow others' directions this year. He does The Connaccers for Fox, then returns to Paramount for a film with John Ford — "I dunno much about it, but what Ford wants me for a picture, I'm there."

All these pictures call for the kind of big man of action Wayne epitomizes. He admitted that the ranks of stars in that category are thinning.

"There aren't many of us left," he said, "and not many coming up. I think Jim Garner has the potential and this guy we went into television—Brian Keith.

CHANGE VOICES ONLY?

"But the young actors nowadays don't have the studios behind them, to bring them along and put them in picture after picture. And too many of them change characters just like they were in radio — by changing their voice only.

"Some critics claimed that guys like Gable and Cooper and Stewart and we were always playing ourselves, Bahney!

"Sure, there's something of ourselves in it, but we also get into the character, we become the character. . . .

"The trouble with some of these new actors is they're more concerned with what their psychiatrists think of their roles."

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER
Friday, May 12, 1961

General Tendencies: Not a good day for taking up legal problems or matters from the past. Look forward and not backwards if you wish to make best use of today and tonight's best influences. One who is older and more serious may think he's giving the right advice but it just doesn't fit in with your plan of things. Be diplomatic, helpful.

Aries (Mar., 21 to April 19) Not a good day to handle civic or credit affairs. Labor conscientiously at your regular job instead and endeavor to use any new mechanisms or methods that will save time and energy. P.M. Take it easy. Don't get into anything risky.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Important you come through with any promises made before you go on to new and more interesting outlets. Then be sure to study matters thoroughly before you make any serious investments or commit yourself in any way at all. Think.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Take care not to follow the advice of that usually accurate counsellor today who does not have all of the facts, but listen to the suggestions of one much closer to you who also has a far greater admiration for you as a person.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) An argument between a higher-up and an associate could be very disturbing to you, if you do not get on the side of the one who is right and remain steadfastly loyal. P.M. Keep busy with practical matters that are important right now.

Leo (July 22 to August 21) Don't make this a day for drudgery, but get vital tasks out of the way early and then off to look into new interests and more lucrative outlets. And don't be narrow-minded.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 23) You are in the mood to be extravagant in order to have a happy time, but one close to you wisely suggests your doing otherwise, for which you should be thankful. P.M. Be happy with loved one at some inexpensive delight. Grow.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Good day to converse with associates and hit upon better system of operation for the future. Don't wrangle over quite mistakes. Change your attitude with those vital to your welfare.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You at least realize that old-fashioned systems are keeping you from getting ahead as quickly as you should. Get together with co-workers and co-operate with them in taking steps to modernize. They will co-operate gladly.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) Rather than worry over finances, make sure you adopt a better system of operation and a policy that is sure-fire. By thinking positively, you realize that you are far better off then you had imagined. Work.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are not thinking very cleverly today, so be sure you listen to the excellent suggestions of close ties and follow them for greatest benefits. Cheer up and accomplish a great deal. You get nowhere if you look glum.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) That private anxiety could deter you from advancing, if you permit. So, be sure to step out early and look into new outlets, make a better impression upon those who mean much to you ,keep active. Generosity helps too.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Get in touch with that well-informed oldster who can give you the most valuable advice for advancement today. Don't worry over finances or this could ruin whole day and evening for you. Be alert and a go-getter instead.

If your child is born today .. he, or she, will be one of those delightful youngsters who will forever be wanting to study and never quite get down to specializing in anything while always almost afraid to gamble on anything. Early teach that knowledge per se is of little value if not put to practical use. Then the chart becomes very successful, since there is a most retentive mind here.

CHARGE DISMISSED

HAMILTON (CP)—A charge of criminal negligence against Massimi Scattoion, 20, was dismissed Tuesday but Magistrate Albert Marck reserved judgment on a careless driving charge. Both charges were laid after a passenger, Umberto Sforissa, 27, died in the wreckage of Scattoion's car April 29.

Name Katz Liston's Manager

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Boxing's No. 1 contender for the heavyweight title, Charles (Sonny) Liston, named George Katz his new manager Wednesday with the indirect blessings of Senator Estes Kefauver and his Senate investigating committee.

Katz, a slightly built former politician who managed former welterweight champion Gin Turner, pledged as his first order of business to get Liston a title fight with champion Floyd Patterson.

Liston told a press conference that with Katz as his manager he had in effect "cleaned his slate" of ties from Frankie Carbo, Blinky Palermo and Patterson described as an underworld element in the challenger's management.

In New York, Patterson called his lawyer, Cyrus Vance, to aid him from his training camp to prepare a statement which said in part:

"I want to stand on my statement of last week that if Sonny Liston can show the Kefauver committee that he has severed his connections directly and indirectly with the people the committee has talked about, he will get his chance next year."

WILL VISIT DIOCESE

MINISTERS MEET

Geneva with British Foreign Secretary Lord Home to discuss prospects for the conference, a foreign office spokesman announced. Gromyko and Home are co-chairmen of the conference.

MAY MEET FRIDAY

Observers said it appeared a first meeting of the Laos conference was likely to take place Friday if only to consider whether or not to hold further sessions.

U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk, arriving Wednesday night, said he would take part in the conference "only if information from Laos permits it."

Harriman is to replace Rusk as head of the U.S. delegation when the secretary returns to Washington, perhaps next week.

Communist Chinese Foreign Minister Marshal Chen Yi arrived today.

Chen said that, given sincerity, the conference could achieve positive results that eventually would ensure "the sovereignty, independence, unity and territorial integrity of Laos. . . ."

Rusk, who flew to Geneva from the NATO meeting in Oslo, told reporters, at the airport he hopes the conference will provide Laotians with a chance "to live their own lives in peace and tranquility."

'STAMP OUT WAR'

Gromyko in his arrival statement said Russia wants to "stamp out the hotbed of war in Southeast Asia."

Other delegations arrived Wednesday from Communist North Viet Nam and from the neutralist and pro-Communist rebels in Laos.

The north Vietnamese delegation was headed by Foreign Minister Ung Van Khiem and the rebel delegates by Quinim Pholsena, a backer of the former Laotian neutralist premier, Prince Souvanna Phouma.

The conference was called by Britain and Russia in their capacities as joint chairmen of the 1954 conference in Geneva which settled the Indochina War by partitioning the former French territory into four states, one of which is Laos.

Invited to the conference are the United States, Canada, Communist China, France, Poland, India, Burma, Laos, Thailand, North and South Viet Nam and Cambodia.

Attendance at the session by a Cambodian delegation was virtually ruled out last week when head-of-state Prince Norodom Sihanouk withdrew his country's sponsorship of the conference.

Meanwhile, a three-country truce commission was reported to have set up bases in the Laotian administrative capital of Vientiane and the pro-Communist Pathet Lao headquarters at Xieng Khouang in the rebel-held Plain of Jars.

The commission, headed by India and with representatives from Canada and Poland, arrived in Laos Monday.

The Associated Press in a Vientiane dispatch said informed sources reported Maj. Eckarath Souvanarath, Phoumi's air-force chief and a prominent young right winger, was shot to death Wednesday night as he drove toward the airport at the edge of Vientiane. There was no indication of the motive. If his death was a political assassination, it would be the first in the current Laotian crisis.

The draglines were ordered by Alfred Hardy, 54, former director of the Quebec government purchasing bureau.

Mr. Hardy testified Tuesday that Mr. Begin directed him to make the order on May 17.

On the assumption that training bases are normally open to visitors, efforts were made to gain access by Vieques through the Central Intelligence Agency and the White House.

WOULDN'T ASSIST

The CIA was non-committal. A White House spokesman said it would not assist in the matter of entry.

Presumably the United States wants no one to talk to these survivors until the furore over the Cuban debacle — and the CIA's role in it—has died down.

While the Vieques operation was kept secret, the New York Times has reported the story of Dr. Rodolfo Nodal Tarafa, 27-year-old lawyer and member of the anti-Castro invasion forces.

Nodal said he and 16 other volunteers had been held captive at gunpoint in Guatemala by CIA agents because they refused to serve in the invasion forces under a man they "ascribed as a murderer in the regime of dictator Fulgencio Batista.

The Washington Post reported these men were arrested as mutineers.

One consequence of the invasion flop apparently has been an upsurge in Communist activities in central and South America.

TO HAVANA

Early this month a chartered Cuban airliner landed at Kingston, Jamaica, to refuel. Out stepped 35 Communists, including two women, who said they had departed from Recife, Brazil, for Havana.

They made no bones about the fact that they were going to Havana to learn how Fidel Castro carried Cuba into the Soviet orbit.

There are reports that Cuban airliners are flying around the Caribbean picking up Communists and depositing them in Havana.

At a post - Cuban invasion background briefing, a high Pentagon official said the United States could expect more revolutions and more Castros south of the border.

And what's been going on in Laos outside the 81 miles of barbed wire - topped fence surrounding Guantanamo?

From conversations with Cuban workers at the base who live in Oriente Province at the eastern tip of the island, I gathered that the answer is nothing. They are raising crops as they have always done.

Consideration of policy statements started on Wednesday's opening session of the three-day annual meeting, was to continue today. Final adoption is subject to approval Friday, but ordinarily few changes are made from policy session decisions.

On motion of Sudbury, a change was made in a statement regarding provincial grants to mining municipalities.

As the statement stood, the chamber asked the Ontario government to review the policy with respect to such payments, with a view to having them substantially increased during the early development period of a mining community.

Sudbury said problems of mining communities continue long after the early development period. The words "early development period" were deleted.

About 300 representatives of Chambers of Commerce and Boards of Trade in Ontario are attending the meeting.

Vice-President Says U.S. Will Help Viet Nam

Johnson Outlines Four Point Plan to Assembly

SAIGON (Reuters) — Vice-President Lyndon Johnson today offered South Viet Nam a sweeping program of increased American aid to assist the hard-pressed country in its fight against communism.

Johnson outlined the four-point program in a speech to a session of the National Assembly following talks with President Ngo Dinh Diem.

He told the assembly that Diem and he were "very determined" to stop the advance of communism in the strategic Southeast Asian state.

The United States has "a growing faith in Viet Nam and the strength you can build here," he said.

"We shall back your efforts, we shall stand with them because they are based on honesty, affection and trust for you."

WOULD ADD TO ARMY

Johnson mentioned no dollar figure, but he said the increased aid would bolster South Viet Nam's 150,000-man army by a "substantial number" of recruits.

He said the new aid also would be directed toward training and equipping the 50,000-man civil guard and improving the rural self-defence corps.

In the sphere of national development, Johnson promised U.S. assistance to education and aid for rural and industrial development.

He told the assembly the U.S. was making these proposals "out of a great desire to serve you in a common cause at this critical time."

There was made no reference to a reported proposal to send U.S. troops into South Viet Nam to "show the flag."

WANTS ONLY TOKEN

Sources close to the government said Diem was likely to prefer that the bulk of American aid be used to finance the Vietnamese army and that only a token American troops be based here.

They estimated that the new aid would total "substantially about $50,000,000.

South Viet Nam's ranks has pumped more than $2,000,000,000 into South Viet Nam since 1954 when it was partitioned by the Geneva at the end of an eight-year war against French rule.

FAA BANS RADIOS

Howard Graham Gives Counsel To Investors

WINDSOR (CP)—Howard D. Graham, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, Thursday night gave counsel both to people who don't invest and those who do.

Addressing the annual dinner of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce, he said:

"It is a great pity that many people feel stocks and bonds are not a great lottery where you either get rich quick or lose your shirt. If anyone here wishes to learn how to double his or her money overnight I can give them some helpful advice — don't try!

"But by person who shuns the market may be shunning one of the best ways of providing for his future. A person who cannot be bothered to learn how the market works or who continually postpones his first investment because the time is not right — that person is hardly more wise than the optimist who hopes to double his overnight."

TOURISM SECOND BEST EARNER SAYS MINISTER

Trans-Canada Road Has Been Helpful

OTTAWA (CP) — Within the next few years, Canada will find itself rocked by an explosion — in tourists.

Resources Minister Dinsdale told the Commons Thursday night that tourism is clicking ahead faster and faster as Canada's No. 2 dollar - earner—the runner-up to the newsprint industry.

He went on to say that what we may call an explosion in the tourist business, he said.

He went on to say that while Canada's biggest tourist pitch may be quite a number of Americans, there is no reason why quite a number of Europeans might not also be convinced of the merits of visiting Canada.

Said Mr. Dinsdale, speaking in the first-reading debate on his spending estimates covering the department of northern affairs and natural resources:

"We feel the time has come for a direct assault on this market, especially in view of the increased prosperity in Europe and the United Kingdom. We feel, especially in that part of those people to travel more than they have in the past."

USE HIGHWAY LURE

For Americans, the new map as the theme of come — Canada advertising will be the Trans-Canada Highway, in major newspapers and prestige magazine, Canada will "create a lure for the highway and a lure for the 70,000,000 Americans who motor."

As could be expected in the debate, MPs acted like travel agents in half the genius of their own bailiwicks as tourist havens.

H. W. Herridge (CCF—Kootenay West) thumped a drum for the scenic splendor of Lake Superior, he said, "is unsurpassed even by the magnificent Rocky Mountain area of British Columbia."

Progressive Conservative MP—J. M. Macdonnell, who represents Toronto Eglinton, touted Mr. Dinsdale's claim.

Hussein, Nasser Appear Ready to Bury Hatchet

AMMAN, Jordan (AP)—King Hussein of Jordan and President Nasser of the United Arab Republic appear to be ready to bury the hatchet, they have been brandishing since 1958.

The two Arab leaders agreed to an early meeting on the interests of Arab unity but no definite date was fixed.

The 25-year-old king took the initiative in patching up the feud—"forgetting the past and turning over a new leaf."

He made the first overture in person and got a reserved reply from Nasser.

But the U.A.R. president gave a direct "yes" to another letter last month suggesting the two get together.

"I believe this meeting will contribute toward serving the Arab nation's cause and toward working and in whose glorious future we believe," Nasser replied.

The U.A.R. leader took implied credit for the recovery of Jordan's dependence on British support saying:

"Every Arab country has the right to proceed in its policy to the extent that it remains loyal with its circumstances. I do not believe it possible that all Arab governments could have a similar pattern due to the difference in their stages of development."

Hussein, whose little kingdom was created by the British after the war, had pledged his support of all Arab causes.

He told Nasser that he had never sought aid from a friendly country "but for the sole reason to stand solidly in face of international Zionism."

He also said he is seeking to strengthen Jordan to be able to "share the responsibility of the Palestine case and counter communism, which threatens our convictions and Arab nationalism."

Jordan has maintained a pro-Western foreign policy.

Nasser calls himself a neutralist but is charged with close ties with Western policy. Both Arab Communists, he is on friendly relations with Communists abroad—both the Moscow and Peking brands—and has accepted large Soviet arms and financial aid.

German Jews Died Like Flies Of Starvation and Dysentry

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — A survivor of the Nazi "death camp" at Auschwitz described today how elderly Jews in camps "died like flies of starvation and dysentery" in concentration camps.

But Mordecai Anbacher, a 44 - year - old German - born Israeli, told the court trying Adolf Eichmann that the elderly Jews retained their dignity despite the treatment they received.

At one camp, near Prague, Jews were given no clothing but they were still polite to each other, he said.

They crowded ravenously around a pile of scraps they would say: "Excuse me, Herr Doktor, allow me to get to the potato peelings."

He said: "Jewish authorities within the camp organized illegal classes for children. . . . The leaders tried to instil in all some form of cultural aid, generosity.

"It was extremely difficult because the youths became selfish, each trying to look for his own bit, to get himself fed. . . .

"But many youths went to

Green's Statement Brings Expression of Surprise

WASHINGTON (CP)—A White House source said Thursday any attempt by Canada to mediate differences between the United States and Cuba would be swiftly rejected by the U.S. administration.

He was commenting on a Geneva dispatch quoting Canada's External Affairs Minister Howard Green as saying Canada is prepared to mediate differences that Britain and Mexico are prepared to assist.

Green's statement, given in an interview, brought expressions of surprise and a touch of anger from American officials. They feared the statement may be interpreted as getting British American countries to agree to some form of collective action against Fidel Castro's regime.

A White House informant, who asked not to be identified, said he was surprised and shocked by Green's suggestion that this was a dispute between the U.S. and Cuba.

"This is a matter of communism and the menace to the Western Hemisphere," the informant said. "The United States can take care of itself. We are not in dispute with the Cuban people."

He said President Kennedy does not intend to discuss the matter publicly in his speech to the joint session of the Canadian Parliament on May 18 but that the matter will be brought up privately in the current talks in Ottawa with Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some air force officers are chipping at navy claims that the Polaris submarine is invulnerable, sure - shot deterrent weapon.

Air Force Secretary Dudley Sharp and Gen. Thomas White, air force chief of staff, called the Polaris a "great weapon" but "only" a weapon system. However, he said "it is not a panacea" which, if history repeats itself, we can be assured that the enemy will attempt to counter.

And Senator Clair Engle (D—California) charged that Russians ever get a breakthrough on being able to see underwater. Polaris subs, he said, just like a turtle going across a road."

"I have the feeling that you are oversold on the Polaris as a weapons system," Engle told Defence Secretary McNamara in questioning the accuracy of Polaris-launched missiles.

Truce Certified But Delegations Not All Ready

Representation of Laos May Be Stumbling Block

GENEVA (Reuters)—The Geneva Conference on Laos today was postponed to allow time for more delegations to reach Geneva.

An authoritative source said it was hoped to get the talks under way Saturday.

Postponement of today's scheduled opening came despite a report by the three-country truce supervisory commission for Laos that it was satisfied a cease-fire existed in the Indochina kingdom.

Britain and the United States had insisted on confirmation by the commission of a cease-fire before the talks could begin.

One of the main factors holding up the start of the conference was the absence here of any representatives of the rightwing Laotian government and a dispute over who will represent the kingdom at the conference table.

Delegations have arrived from both the pro-Communist Pathet Lao guerilla organization and the left-wing supporters of ex-Laotian Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma. But the United States was reported to be opposing full admission of the Pathet Lao representatives to the conference.

POSTPONED LIKELY

There was speculation that a compromise would be worked out to allow the rightwing government and Souvanna's representatives, recognized as the official government by the Communists, to attend as observers.

In that event each of the two groups could bring in extra representatives as advisers and the Pathet Lao members could be attached to Souvanna's delegation.

Conference sources said the cease-fire was "no surprise" but which would prevent the conference from opening.

The truce supervisory commission reported that although there was no formal agreement yet, a cease-fire had taken effect and both sides had been ordered to enforce it.

It said there had been some complaints of local incidents in the cease-fire.

The truce commission, headed by Sarwe Lal of India and also comprising Leon Mayrand of Canada and Albert Markal of Poland, went to Laos four days ago on instructions from British Commonwealth and French

Foster Mother of Year Tells Of Taming Boy Deaf and Blind

BALDWEN, N.Y. (AP)—Deaf and blind — locked away from sight and sound — for four years, Ira-gold boy was a wild animal in diapers when they took him into Mrs. Joseph Purvis' home.

"My son couldn't talk, weighed just 25 pounds and had to be fed from a bottle when I got him," she said.

"There was no way to ask or tell him anything."

How she reached a little boy who can't see, hear—and who hasn't learned to talk—even the simplest things like using the bathroom?

Mother Purvis found out.

There are four rules for the wonderful people like her who take foster children. Work with the child, feed it, dress it and—most important—love it.

To these Mrs. Purvis added a fifth rule: Become a specialist in the subject. Which means learn the treatment and work hard at applying it.

She studied the treatment and teaching of the blind-deaf, from the rescue of Helen Keller to today's most modern methods.

She still studying, learning, searching for new material even though her four years of endless labor with her blind - deaf boy have produced dramatic results.

Today, "her boy" is at the Perkins Institute in Massachusetts, a good student who is making tremendous progress at learning to talk.

"Now, when he's home on holidays and for the summer, he dresses and feeds himself, reads my lips with his fingers, knows where all the chairs are in the yard," she said.

The miracle she could tell with that boy is only one of the reasons she's been chosen as "foster mother of the year."

She was picked because she—and her husband, still his dad—were always willing to take those foster children with extra problems — the ones no one else wanted.

Among the lucky children have come to the Purvis home in the last 19 years.

Nearly all had the emotional problems caused by the upheavals and rejections that made them foster children. Many had physical handicaps.

Many of the boys and girls—she calls all of them "her children" just like her own five girls—are grown now. They all come home regularly to "Mother."

K. 'Welcomes' U.S. Space Feat But Says It Does Not Match Orbit

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet Premier Khrushchev said today he welcomed the successful launching into space of a rocket by the United States but the achievement was far short of Russia's "triumph" in orbiting a man around the world.

Yuri Gagarin, a major in Tsiolkovsky, capital of the Republic of Georgia, said Maj. Yuri Gagarin's space flight "has forever given priority to manned space flight to our country."

The Russian leader said he was sure the United States "will repeat what we have done."

"The question is merely one of who does it first," Khrushchev said. "The whole world fairly considers that the flight of our space ship Vostok was preceded by no one. And it is actually so."

He said Gagarin's flight into space April 12 "marks the scientific and technical development of our country."

"It is evidence of the mighty upsurge from backwardness to progress."

President Kennedy had admitted that in 40 years Russia had achieved great successes in rocket science and might export a power of attraction and "we are glad to hear such an admission."

He branded as an invention of the detractors of the Soviet Union a statement by Khrushchev in the Soviet Union.

There was a reaction here by those who creates material values to enjoy the fruits of his labor, but it is the duty of freedom for those who exploit another man's labor.

Khrushchev said he and Kennedy have different views on social truth but it is necessary for them to find 'a common language" on some problems.

"We live on one planet, we must exist and in some questions find a common language," he said.

"The question of peace—that is the most important question on which the Soviet Union is prepared to build its relations with any state."

Had 103 Pounds Of Pickerel Out of Season

Caught with 103 pounds of freshly-caught pickerel while his three companions escaped, Donald Earl Hay, 31, of Belleville today was fined $100 in Magistrate's court when he pleaded guilty to a charge of being in possession of pickerel during a closed season.

Conservation Officer George Warren testified that at 3 a.m. April 5, while patrolling the east side of the Moira River south of Bridge St., he spotted "an operation" going on on the west bank of the river. He watched a group of men spearing fish and running them into an alley behind a Coleman St. factory. The conservation officer crossed to the west side, went into the alley behind the factory and found the fish hidden under a box and in sacks. He waited until 8 a.m. when a car appeared. About 30 minutes later four men left the car, entered the alley and picked up the fish. He heard something being placed in the trunk of the car and moved over a half dozen feet to identify the car and the fish.

In answer to a question from Magistrate T. Y. Wills, the conservation officer said the fish at the time were valued at about 70 cents a pound if they had been offered for sale.

Hay's $100 fine was described by the magistrate as "exemplary" because of the commercial aspect of the case. Hay said he would pay the fine and $3.50 court costs immediately.

New Apparatus Will Check on Air Pollution

Belleville residents will soon be able to learn just how pure the air is that they are breathing.

Late this month special apparatus to check on air pollution in the city is to be moved Building and its readings mailed on to the city where Toronto will determine the percentage of smoke in Belleville air.

Belleville Medical Officer of Health, Dr. McColl Metcalfe, said today the equipment will be provided by the Ontario Department of Health which sought permission to install the apparatus at Belleville.

Fillers in the apparatus will be changed weekly by Robert Westlake, city sanitary inspector, and forwarded to Toronto for reading.

High School Activities

By GALE BRADEN

Amid the soft color and gay fun of the spring formal, the 1961 Queen of Diamonds was announced. The suppense and excitement built as the moment and the orchestral fanfare greeted the new monarch — Miss Glenna Dickey. On her throne her highness (attended by her two princesses, Betty Wallbridge and Helen Walsh) was officially crowned "Queen of the Hearts". She was presented with long stem roses and an engraved silver bracelet.

The annual contest sponsored by the Keyette Club is governed by a five panel of judges. They choose the queen on the basis of that evening.

FASHION PARADE

The Home Economics girls have recently been in a flurry of activity. In preparation for their Fashion Show on May 9, they spent many hours at sewing and rehearsing, for they made and modelled all the clothes on display. In accordance with their theme, "Sewing for Holidays", many attractive styles were modelled and it was evident that much thought and work went into their production. Congratulations are extended to Miss Snell and the girls for a fine display.

BROOM BALL

Broom ball anyone? In case you haven't realized, it's a wierd concoction recently played in the gym. The Keyettes and Key Club members challenged each other to a contest decided on this game, for while the boys definitely considered Volleyball out, the girls found floor hockey just too much. The spectators were treated to a rollicking time in the back of which ensued. Armed with brooms and a variety of novel costumes, the contestants banged the ball around the gym in vain attempts to score. At last report, the girls had won by a narrow margin.

MATHEMATICS

In an annual mathematical contest held in March, B.C.I. received top honors and collected score yet. This nation-wide contest often draws numbers of up to 1,000. Of the eight entrants from B.C.I., Evelyn Bedford, Robert Wease and Harry Tom placed first, second and third respectively in the senior class. For her achievement as highest scorer, Evelyn was presented with a gold pin during Wednesday's assembly.

Youth Ordered To Pay Fine Within 2 Weeks

Charis E. Lucas, 19, of Belleville, who acted as a runner for a group of poachers taking fish from the Moira River April 15, today was fined $20 in magistrate's court when he pleaded guilty to being in possession of pickerel during a closed season.

Conservation Officer Allan Rourke of the Department of Lands and Forests testified that at 5 a.m. April 15, while patrolling the west bank of the Moira River south of Bridge Street, he saw Lucas make four trips from the river to an alley behind a factory on Coleman Street. He called out on the last two trips he noticed that Lucas was carrying fish. He investigated and found two pickerel in an alley which Lucas had entered.

The conservation officer said seven or eight were on the bank of the river and that Lucas was picking up the fish they caught and carrying them behind the factory for safe-keeping. The first two trips, he said, were decoy runs "to see if I would bother them."

Lucas asked for three weeks in which to pay his fine and the $3.50 court costs because he's "not making much money," but Magistrate T. Y. Wills told him to pay up within two weeks.

School Integration Proceeds At Various Paces in South

WASHINGTON (CP) — In a southern county of Virginia, some 20 public schools have been gathering dust for two years, their doors locked and barred by white men determined to keep their children out of white classrooms.

In parish, colorful New Orleans, fleeting anti-Negro demonstrations have turned to silent brooding while only a handful of Negro and white children daily have met in two schools that formerly housed more than 1,000 students.

Southern United States resistance against school integration, the mixing of white and Negro children in the same school buildings, is still strong.

But these are only opposite extremes. They say the likelihood of another Little Rock—the 1957 episode in the Arkansas capital where federal paratroopers had to protect Negroes in order that a state law to flout the 1954 U.S. Supreme Court order against segregation could be enforced.

FEW NEGROES ATTEND

Little Rock is quiet, though in all of Arkansas only 11 per cent of the more than 100,000 Negro students are allowed into integrated schools. In Texas it's only about 800 of 210,000 Negro children attending integrated classrooms while in Louisiana only four of 276,000 Negroes are allowed to mix with the 400,000 white students.

Across southern states, integration is developing smoothly. In others, every move is met with opposition and each Negro child is admitted to the white children's stronghold is hailed. In at least four states the Supreme Court order is ignored, in Missisippi, South Carolina, Alabama and Georgia.

Georgia is to be a testing spot next fall. Atlanta is to begin token integration in the next school year. But all eyes of the South will be watching. Will federal troops have to be sent in? Governor Ernest Vandiver thinks not. He maintains he has the situation under control. President Kennedy that he never will send troops to Georgia to enforce integration.

PLEDGED ACTION

Kennedy had pledged the Negro press speedy action to give often Negro rights once he won the presidency. He got strong Negro backing in his election campaign.

A new bill is before Congress to increase protection of Negroes and other minorities against discrimination, but the White House emphasizes the bill is not backed by the administration.

As an indication of the seriousness of his intentions, Kennedy's aides point out that currently the administration is intervened in six countries to demand equal rights to separate Negro-white schooling.

COMMITTED 12 BREAKS

KITCHENER (CP)—William Marshall Arias, 16, was sentenced today to 22 months definite and 23 months indeterminate for his part in 12 break-ins involving some $6,000 in cash and merchandise. Arias had pleaded guilty to all charges April 27.

'Bob' Lanning New President Curling Club

At a meeting of the directors of the Quinte Curling Club held at the clubhouse on Tuesday evening, E. G. "Bob" Lanning was elected president for the coming year. Bob Lanning has been the efficient secretary of the club for the past two years and will no doubt be a welcome choice of the membership for the high office.

Mr. Ev. Gowsell, who so successfully occupied the chairmanship of the games committee during the past year was the unanimous choice of the directors for the position of vice-president. J. C. "Pat" Houston, the second president of the club, was elected secretary, while Jack Murphy, assistant manager of the bank of Montreal was elected treasurer.

After the election of the officers the board sat down to the business for the season of the club's activity. All the previous minutes of meetings were read and in turn were discussed. The members of the board were unanimous in their desire to work and have plans for the advancement of the club. Ouh-Kay Day will be challenged each other to a contest decided on this game, for while the boys definitely considered Volleyball out, the girls found floor hockey just too much. The spectators were treated to a rollicking time in the back of which ensued. Armed with brooms and a variety of novel costumes, the contestants banged the ball around the gym in vain attempts to score. At last report, the girls had won by a narrow margin.

Parking Meters Taking Beating From Thieves

Parking meters on the city owned parking lots are taking a beating from sneak thieves this morning. Police think they are having their work for nothing. City hall officials today said that in recent days a dozen or more parking meters on the Front and Pinnacle Street parking lots had been broken open in attempts to get money.

The dozen or five meters on the two lots were found broken this morning. Police think they have been previous similar occurrences.

To guard against theft the parking authority had directed that the meters be emptied each evening.

But it is the meters themselves which are taking the beating. The damage to each broken meter amounts to around $4, it was stated.

Both East and West say they are in favor of a neutral, independent and unified Laos removed from the cold war. But how this objective would be translated into reality at the negotiating committee was the big question.

STRENGTHEN BRANCH

Mr. Roberts said that the criminal investigation branch has been strengthened by four more inspectors and the OPP anti - gambling squad will be substantially increased in the near future.

Mr. Roberts referred in his speech to the St. Paul's Progressive Conservative Association's meeting in Belleville to Federal Justice Minister Fulton.

Mr. Roberts said law enforcement is being continually improved because "we both realized that some of the lawlessness and crime syndicates which were rampant even recently in parts of the United States could develop rapidly here but if we were not prepared to meet them and to show them it does not pay to operate here."

The state department declined to make any formal comment on Green's views but some American diplomats suggested privately that Canada seemed to be keeping itself aloof from the Communist menace in the Western Hemisphere.

Senator Mike Mansfield, Senate majority leader, also expressed surprise but declined to make any direct comment on Green's statement. It was a matter for the U.S. government to consider, he said.

Mansfield would be delighted if Canada would occupy that vacant chair in the Organization of American States," but no Montana Democrat said. "Canada would be handy as a middleman in the organization."

The 20-country organization is to make room for its 21st member, Jamaica. Latin American countries have repeatedly urged Canada to accept membership in this body. This action is reported to be made under active consideration by the Canadian government.

DDGM Visits Masonic Lodge For Last Time

TRENTON — For his 17th and final official visit in Masonic lodges in the area, District Deputy Grand Master Harold Haggarty chose the theme, "What I Feel Free Masonry Means", for his address to the Trenton Masonic Lodge, No. 38, Tuesday night. Mr. Haggarty has spent the nine months of his appointment visiting district lodges and attending various district functions.

Mr. Haggarty said that the Masonic orders of Entered Apprentice, Fellow Craft and Master Mason were symbolic of the three stages of man: youth, manhood and old age. He explained the spiritual and physical aspects of the progression of any Mason from his initiation into the Craft, using the highest order, as being similar to a man's gradual acceptance of responsibility as he becomes older.

There were 175 lodge members present at the Trenton meeting, including visitors from the surrounding area. The banquet was prepared and served by the Order of the Eastern Star, No. 118. The convener was Mrs. Hazel Hastie.

During the evening a quartet, composed of Len Conard, Claude Huffman, Jim Wallace and William Hyde, accompanied by A. Roy Kendall, entertained.

Melville Johnson was the candidate for the evening and Rev. Percy Gardner, chaplain, commended the officers on the manner in which the ceremony was carried out.

Howard Aziz Kiwanis V-P

Following the meeting, the club members were taken on a tour of the Erie Resistor plant by Kiwanians Jim Walsh and Geoffrey Robinson. Captivated from the silvering discs to the testing of the product on the final test line were explained in detail.

Guests of the club were a number of teen-aged boys, potential Key Club members.

Child Mauled By Big Dog

TRENTON — Debbie Blakley, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Blakley, R. R. 3, Trenton, was admitted to Trenton Memorial Hospital Friday morning after being badly mauled by a German shepherd dog, owned by a neighbor. The police have not as yet secured the name of the owner of the dog.

The police said the child's face was badly cut and would require a number of stitches to close the wounds. It was not known whether the child was attacked by the dog or was playing with the animal when she was mauled.

The MPs put out their welcome mat for tourists during study of the $82,707,036 spending estimates of the northern affairs and mines and resources department for the current fiscal year.

After approving them, the Commons turned to the estimates of the fisheries department, amounting to $23,651,360.

Earlier, there was a storm over the power development plans on the Columbia River in British Columbia.

Justice Minister Fulton, who negotiated the Canada - U.S. Columbia River development treaty, said British Columbia was fully aware of every word, phrase and implication in it before it was signed with the Americans.

But Opposition Leader Pearson and Mr. Herridge charged that Canada acted too quickly in signing the treaty without getting an agreement with the B.C. government.

The treaty, ratified by the American Congress, is bogged down in a bickering between B.C. and the federal government.

Prestige and Power

Pictures differ with the viewpoint. It is somewhat surprising, though, at first reading, to find people with such widely differing views, points as Hon. Howard Green, Canadian Minister of External Affairs, Lord Home, Britain's Foreign Secretary, and Paul-Henri Spaak, until recently secretary-general of NATO but now Belgium's foreign minister, all taking a more optimistic view of the international situation than does U.S. States Secretary Dean Rusk.

Perhaps it may be argued that Rusk's pessimism could have been forecast from the campaign theme of his chief, President John Kennedy, who time and again declared that his predecessor had brought U.S. prestige throughout the world to a dangerously low point.

Paradoxically enough, it is possible to conceive of Green, Lord Home and Spaak basically agreeing with President Kennedy's contention, but it now appears evident that, if they did, they and others of like mind, misinterpreted the precise meaning which the speaker gave to the word "prestige."

Outside the U.S., and perhaps for many of Kennedy's supporters in that country, reference to the low prestige of the U.S. immediately called to mind such matters as the "brinkmanship" of the late John Foster Dulles, the frequent insistence that neutralism made a country a fellow-traveller with the USSR and the U-2 blunder which provided Khrushchev with an iron-clad excuse for breaking up his long-sought Summit Conference. In this sense, U.S. prestige has since received several powerful shots in the arm, provided by President Kennedy's pronouncements and by the calibre of men he has selected as his aides.

It must be added that the Cuban situation, and the manner in which it has been handled by the Kennedy administration, have severely eroded, if not completely wiped out, the enhanced prestige earlier achieved. One can hardly argue, though, that recognition of this fact explains Rusk's pessimism at the NATO conference now in session. Rather it is evident that this is based on an evaluation of the world situation and the respective strengths of the contending camps, which have not been basically altered by the events of the past few weeks. Here Green, Lord Home and Spaak apparently feel that the strength of the western alliance is being under-estimated.

This strength, though, could be seriously undermined if the U.S. fails to grasp the concern of its allies over the Cuban situation, the handling of which was in precisely the same pattern as certain events during Eisenhower's time.

Hon. Howard Green was acting like a true friend when he warned the U.S. against unilateral action in Cuba. The price which the U.S. would have to pay in prestige elsewhere would be too high for the relief it could obtain by plucking this little spinter from its hide.

Ask Not for Whom the Siren Wails

The recent cross-Canada alarm test, Tocsin II, should prove one point. Outside of government and other officials, whose safety should be the major concern of the civil defence people, very few others knew what was going on, if they knew anything was going on at all.

According to the reports from now have filtered into various newspapers from across the country the most notable achievement of the test was that it was conducted with very few knowing anything had happened. In a number of instances the sirens which were to warn the people to seek shelter did not function. In a number of other cases, even though they did function, people could hear them. Such was certainly the local case where some people in a building located just across the street from the warning siren could not hear it.

In Peterborough a similar situation occured but then the inefficiency of the siren was explained by the fact that nothing that it was to warn people out of doors and not those in buildings. We wonder just how much protection people in buildings, who have just as much right to know if an attack is imminent, would have in an emergency.

Underground shelter appears to be the only sure defence for people in the event of nuclear attack. We hope that the government is not going to introduce a further defence budget cut before a truly adequate alarm system, if such we must have, can be installed from coast to coast. It may be all very well to ensure that the cabinet and other important people are well protected and removed to a place of safety in the event of an attack but we wonder just what they expect to find left and just whom do they expect to represent after the attack is over under the present circumstances. Two un-equipped missile bases and useless sirens seem to form an inadequate defence for the people of Canada.

Space Program Analyzed

The Times of London

The approach of the Soviet Union to space research has differed from that of the United States in having emphasized from the beginning the element of human exploration.

For this, big launching rockets are essential, and the Russians may have been encouraged in that direction by their capture after the war of German plans for a big rocket.

They have had plenty of their own, however, to build on.

As early as the battles for Moscow and Stalingrad, Soviet artillery rockets had been proved better than German. Hence, though making good use of Germans who worked for them after the war, they were already well placed to do so — and in the final stages of design and construction it was the Russians' heatseeome category. His suspicion is the price all of us have to pay for the commercial instinctsfor of modern communication.

who did the work.

In particular, credit for the high standard of precision attained appears to be largely their own.

The first launched in Sputnik I showed the way that they were thinking, and from May, 1960, onwards they have followed a systematic course of experiments and trials leading up to success.

Viewed superficially, their record was three successes out of five — beginning with the space cabin and dummy man which marked the start of the present series.

All appear to have used the same launching rockets. But after the first two there were changes in detail.

In the case of the third there was an error in launching, so that intentions could not be judged.

In their final two trials they reduced slightly the period of the orbit — and with it the rate of acceleration necessary — and they altered the shape of orbit which in the first two launchings had been nearly circular to one that is markedly elliptical, which would modify the path followed during re-entry.

These changes, it is natural to suppose, were with a view to the human launching to follow.

Since both of the last two trials using dogs were launches and not failures, and launching followed the same procedure, they too had gone far in advance to justify their claim that they would send a man up only when success of the test-shot was bringing him down again.

The only other country important in launching was in giving Major Gagarin only a single circuit of the earth, whereas the dogs had had more — again a change in the direction of safety.

Also significant is the fact that the weight of the last launching rocket, not the bigger rocket that have been used, can place the satellite in orbit from which the Venus space probe was in turn launched.

There can be little doubt that they plan to further their most important segment of my professional life, and because the questions raised at these functions often work themselves into columns of print. In fact, I already have too many lectures, and I may problem is, in many ways, he inquires scornfully, "of letting groups know that you are available for engagements."

Actually, I mention the lectures from time to time because I think they contain important segment of my professional life, and because the questions raised at these functions often work themselves into columns of print. In fact, I already have too many lectures, and my problem is, in many ways, then tactfully rather than seeking them out.

The latter, however, like so many people today, has been conditioned to look for a to motives and to suspect some commercial purpose in the most innocent of activities.

That we live in an increasingly cynical age, no one can deny. Children begin to leer with a jaundiced eye upon television ads from the time they can toddle — or from the time their parents candidly point out to them the virtues of essential foods is in the package and premiums, not in the products themselves.

This cynicism is fed by the whole vast structure of entertainment and promotion in the modern world. Even the corner grocery store now has a "Dish Room next week, are you?"

There is no honesty, no recitation, no plain exhilaration, not even genuine appreciation, in these cheap interchanges in complimentary. It is all rapid advertising, brandished with a complete disregard for the public's intelligence. It is, in fact, an unacknowledged conspiracy to dupe everybody who does not belong to the inner world.

I don't blame the reader one bit for assuming my lecture references belong to the same

WATCH YOUR BRAKES

On the desk before me is a pamphlet published by the Division of Motor Vehicles of the State in which I read. It is entitled "How Fast Can You Stop?" The folder goes on to explain the picture of what may happen if the brakes of one's automobile are not in good working order.

The picture of a figure being subjected to split second deceleration and being tossed several hundred feet as a result, reminds one that the brakes with which we as individuals are equipped (they are known as 'inhibitions) have to be kept in good working shape also if we are to avoid trouble. How many real tragedies have occured because people could not throw on the brake quickly enough and keep back the torrent of words which broke up a marriage or destroyed a friendship or disrupted a business partnership.

Just as there are people who only weeks and months and pay no attention to the fact that their automobile brakes are getting slack, so there are people who never think of bringing themselves into the necessary check the unkind and belligerent words, the rash act, or that it plunge into the sea of passion which sears and frequently consumes.

Watch out for your brakes. They are as necessary in operating a car as is a good engine. And without sound brakes operating on thought, word, and act, every individual is trifling with disaster.

OFF THE RECORD

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

40 YEARS AGO

May 18th, 1911.

Messrs. W. Carowe and R. J. Bailey, bankers, are attending court in Bancroft today.

Mr. P. F. Brockel, who has been secretary of the local Y.M.C.A. for the past four years, has resigned, and will enter the Insurance business.

Boat races will be held here on May 24th, and many entries are expected.

Mr. Carl Whytock of Madoc, has been appointed a fire ranger and has left for Oba in New Ontario.

The city clerk's office is flooded with assessment appeals.

Mr. R. A. Backus will leave shortly to spend two months in Winnipeg and other points in Western Canada.

50 YEARS AGO

May 12th, 1911.

Today is the 26th anniversary of the Battle of Batoche in which Belleville's own 90th Midlanders, which company was composed entirely by Belleville men, our own regiment, led by Adjutant Ponton, Lieut. Halliwell and Lieut. Kenny, cleared the rifle pits at Batoche and virtually ended the rebellion. Backed by "C" Company, the Grenadiers of Toronto and the 90th of Winnipeg. Our Belleville boys faced a galling fire, but with rifle and bayonet, sword and revolver they cleared the whole valley of the rebels, suffering severely in the advance and the charge. Lieut. Charles S. Clapp, Sergeant-Major Arle, Corporal Maiden and Corporal L. Soles have today many reminiscences to tell of the stirring campaign in which our Bay of Quinte boys bore themselves bravely, and for which they wear the Queen's Medal, worthily won.

Police Wear Name Plates

Listening Post

Philadelphia's 4,700 policemen will wear an identifying name plate on their uniforms, Police Commissioner Albert N. Brown said all uniformed policemen except detectives would be required to wear black plastic plates, which will have the policeman's last name engraved in white.

Mr. Brown said: "We feel when the public addresses a police officer by name there is a personal and warmer relationship. This is a step to develop a better relationship between police and the community in which they serve".

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The scratch pad industry is so far a secret that the telephone industry has taken another stride forward in the larger cities and is adding further numbers to its ever-expanding architecture of the system, it is up to everybody to lay down a supply of scratch pads to keep, with a pencil, ever handy beside the telephone. In former times, you could look up a number, usually with two letters and four figures, find it out of it, and five digits following. And it was no great trick to memorize it, repeating it to yourself over and over, while you stuffed the phone book back on its shelf and picked up the instrument.

You could even sometimes remember the number if it happened to be busy, and you had to wait a minute before dialling again. But mostly, you forgot it, and had to get the book out and look it up again, hang it!

All this is becoming a thing of the past. They are starting in some cities, to abandon the alphabetical name in favor of numbers. And at the same time they are handing over long distance calls to series of more numbers. Thus, if you want to call say New York, Pyler 1-2345, you have to dial 112, then 212, and not 7's and 8's either. Bringing the total arithmetic to 112121283345.

We've got to have scratch pads.

Joy in Religion

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Too often religion is broken to long-faced and morose. If the first Christians had been like this, perhaps Christianity would not have spread until it achieved victory in the Roman world. Certainly a gaiety of spirit must have been one of the more attractive qualities of the first missionaries. It is a quality which should be a distinguishing mark of the believer today.

To Your Good Health

One Operation Does Not Always End Hernia Problem

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have been operated on for hernia on the right side twice by the same doctor; and now I have to go back for the third time. My surgeon has a very good reputation but he has two strikes on me and I feel that I shouldn't give him a third chance. I have no faith in him. At my second operation I asked him to sew in a mesh lining but he said it wasn't in a good position for that. My wife and friends advise me to go to another hospital for this operation. What do you think? Please don't even use my initials, but sign this 'third strike' if you print it."

You aren't the first person who's had such bad luck. Usually one operation puts an end to the trouble. But not always. Sometimes, because of location, or texture of the tissues, or what were, the hernia repair breaks loose. Or sometimes the repair itself remains firm, but a new one develops right next to the incision.

I don't like to give the idea that subsequent trouble is to be expected. Usually it isn't. But I say more trouble after the first operation. But you have the facts and realize that sometimes conditions are such that there is.

I'm sincerely sorry that you've lost faith in your surgeon who, as you tell me, has a good reputation. (And from some things you've written between the lines, I realize that he warned you that your case was one of those.)

My advice, even if you don't like it, is that you go back to the same doctor rather than to a different one, however good. Why? Because your doctor knows you, knows how difficult your particular case is, knows what extra techniques must be attempted. I'm afraid you'll only be deceiving yourself by hoping that somebody else would be better with a very difficult case. Surgeons are surgeons, not beautiful painters! There's quite a difference.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Suppose you could discuss hemorrhoids in your columns? I would be very interested. — Mrs. W. E. K.

I could, and I have discussed 'em. Quite a few times. And I've finally assembled the material into a booklet, "The Real Truth about Hemorrhoids." Send 20 cents for printing and handling, and a stamped, self-addressed envelope, to Dr. Molner care of The Chicago Sun-Times, Syndicate, P. O. Box 128, Dundee, Ill., for a copy.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My pulse rate varies around 110, 115, 120, never under 100, I think. Other than the fast beating, a heart murmur is all that has been found. My question: Can you have a heart murmur without any kind of trouble involving the heart? — S. N. L.

A persistently fast heart rate should be investigated fully. Overactive thyroid is one possibility. Excessive coffee or tobacco can be a cause also. Second question: Yes, it is possible to have a "functional murmur," a murmur with no underlying heart disease. Anemia, for instance can have plumbing or beating types that produce that bang, without any leaks in the plumbing.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Is it normal to have pot flashes after removal of the ovaries through surgery?

Surgery like this is not a hysterectomy, is it? That means the removal of everything, including the mouth of the womb? — Mrs. B. A.*

No. 1. Yes, hot flashes can occur whether the inactivity of the ovaries is because of surgery, or because of menopause. In either case, individuals vary. Medication may or may not help.

No. 2. You are right. Hysterectomy means removal of the uterus, or womb. But there are varying degrees, such as a "supracervical hysterectomy," or a "subtotal hysterectomy", depending on how much of the associated organs are removed.

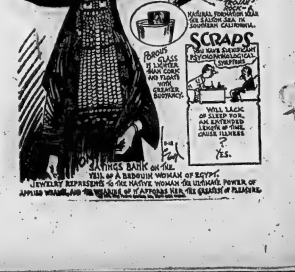
Research Key to Growth

Windsor Star

A boom in research in Canada's industrial and technological development is inevitable if progress and economic speed-up and a drive for more Canadian goods will be behind that progress.



Up until now research has not been given the role it deserved. Many firms which do make use of research studies have done so because large institutes because of their greater diversification.

The Canada Research Foundation, created by Ontario legislation and with its endowment provided jointly by industry and government, is going to make an effort to boost our industrial technical resources.

This means both industry and commerce are helping in an effort to develop new products and improve others. New markets will be created at home and abroad. It means more employment and a boost for our economy.

Pleads Guilty To Possessing Pickerel Spear

BIG May, 19, of Belleville, today was fined $25 by Magistrate T. V. White when he pleaded guilty to being in possession of a spear within 50 feet of the Moira River.

Conservation Officer Allan Buxton of the Department of Lands and Forests testified that at 11.30 p.m. April 9, while on patrol on the west bank of the river, he spotted May holding a spear about six feet from the edge of the river, just south of Bridge St. When May saw him approaching, he dropped the spear and sat on a fence behind a taxi office. May admitted that the spear was his.

May was given two weeks to pay the $25 fine and costs of $3.50 because he was recently laid off from his job with a local construction company.

Sneak Thieves Active in Tweed Area in Night

TWEED (Special) — Sneak thieves have been active in the Tweed area during the past 24 hours with two places of business having been entered and petty cash taken.

One break-in was at the Tweed Steelworks where the intruders gained entrance through a back window and rifled the petty cash box of four or five dollars.

Also in the same area the Crown Cleaners was entered. The glass in the front door was broken, the thief then reaching in and unlocking the door.

Police believed the two breakins were the work of the same party.

Plan Week-Long Lectures on Life-Saving

Next week the St. John Ambulance Society will observe "Save a Life Week" by conducting a series of demonstrations, films and lectures.

The program of lectures and demonstrations will be held each evening at the St. John Ambulance headquarters, 121 Front Street, from Monday, May 15th to Friday, May 19th, at 7.30 p.m.

This program if designed to illustrate the different methods of life saving.

Wednesday evening, May 17th at 7.30 p.m., Flt. Surgeon Lyall Howlett B.A., M.D. will show a color film on mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, which will be accompanied by a demonstration and talk. Other lectures and demonstrations will be conducted by local and out-of-town instructors.

There is no charge for attendance at any or all of these lectures, and it is hoped that many citizens will avail themselves of this opportunity to learn something about life-saving techniques.

600 Present at Banquet Opening Drive for New 'Y'

"The 'Y' gives an armament for life" to the youth of today by providing them with a high standard of values through the guidance of inspired leadership operating within a program which has as its greatest asset the ability to adjust to the changing times without compromising any of its high ideals. J. Alex Edmison, Q.C., member of the National Parole Board, told over 600 citizens at the kick-off banquet for raising funds for a new Belleville YMCA building yesterday evening.

The former assistant principal of Queen's University gave a highly interesting and humorous account of how his "years at the 'Y' were the most meaningful" in his life and how many outstanding citizens of this country would readily admit to having been guided on a sound course in their formative years through leadership provided at a local YMCA.

Improper use of leisure time is the greatest contributing factor to the increase in juvenile delinquency emphasized the speaker. The provision of a multitude of interesting things to do together with proper leadership free youth by the "Y" is a direct combatant against the spread of juvenile delinquency.

The speaker noted that there were two organizations which handled the needs of 2,400 people last year. One was the Belleville YMCA with its increased membership; the other was the National Parole Board. It was most interesting to note, Mr. Edmison explained, that all of the 2,400 residents of federal prisons which the Parole Board handled in 1960 had never had any experience or guidance during their formative years as members of a YMCA or a Boy Scout group or any organized youth group.

The World War II veteran, who won international recognition for his work in organizing for the care of refugees, displaced persons and concentration camp survivors in both France and Germany, emphasized that many of the problems of living emphasized by the horrors of World War II were already being successfully met in the day-to-day activities in a YMCA. The promotion of brotherhood, the establishment of high moral values and a sound philosophy of life were salient amongst the many achievements of YMCA's around the world, he noted.

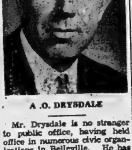
ASSEMBLY PRAISED

Mr. Edmison congratulated the 600 plus persons present who were to form the basis of the fund-raising team for the new local "Y" building and related a number of instances where his experiences as a young undergraduate at Queen's University had brought him in touch with the local YMCA and several of the local citizens responsible for the current building's existence during the early 1900's.

He noted the similar attitudes of progress, which was under the direction of campaign chairman Bill Wills, featured a number of local citizens working for the campaign. Talks explaining the various aspects of the project and the part which those present were expected to play were given. One highlight was an act or play featuring four members of the Belleville Theatre Guild illustrating the finer points of how not to sell people on the need for a new "Y" building.

A challenge from youth was given the speakers present by teenagers Glenys Dickey and Rod Follwell.

Although the initial results of the YMCA building fund campaign were not expected to be available until next Monday, it was announced at the kick-off banquet that already $53,000 had been pledged through the efforts of both the Y's Men's Club and the board of directors.



Chairman Bill Wills called upon all workers to get their backs into the campaign and to set their sights high. He also paid tribute to Mr. Cliff Shell from the national committee, who had been so active in organizing the campaign.

The meeting was held at Club Canara.

A. O. Drysdale President Ontario Commerce Chamber

WINDSOR — A. O. Drysdale of Belleville, was elected president of the Ontario Chamber of Commerce at its three-day 49th annual meeting which concluded here today. Queen Victoria H-S Elects 1961 Officers

The last regular meeting of Queen Victoria Home and School Association was held Monday evening in the auditorium with a large attendance.

The president announced that the pupils of Grade 7 would be taking their annual tour to the conservation development at Ollara's Mill and the children of the kindergarten will be taken on a tour of the hall to demonstrate them with fire safety.

The members of the association were reminded of the Belleville and district annual dinner to be held in Tabernacle church this month and were urged to attend if possible.

The executive was granted permission to consider purchasing a coffee percolator for the use of Home and School after which Mrs. Segie gave a brief report on the Federation Conference she attended in Toronto in April.

The winners of the plaque for the month were: Mr. Frink's room for the senior division and Mrs. Lyons' room for the Junior and they also won the yearly award.

The pupils of Mr. Frink's class presented a humorous skit, "How We Celebrated Mother's Day", adapted on a 1920 story by Stephen Leacock, which caused great amusement among the audience, especially the mothers.

The guest for the evening was Mr. Henderson, public relation representative of the Bell Telephone Company, who after giving a few brief rules for safety, presented an enlightening film on "resuscitation". The film itself is an explanatory and highly recommended to everyone to take advantage of viewing this interesting and valuable source of information.

This meeting concluded a most encouraging year in Queen Victoria and the attendance has been increasingly enthusiastic and parents have expressed their appreciation for the interesting program and friendly spirit prevailing.

The executive would like to thank the parents and staff for their support and co-operation and will look forward to another enjoyable season in the fall.

MONTREAL (CP)—The mortality rate from cancer has decreased among Canadian women, but increased among Canadian men, the president of the National Cancer Institute of Canada said Thursday. In his annual report to the institute's board of directors, Dr. Carlton Auger of Quebec City said the difference can be attributed "almost entirely to the spectacularly rising rate of lung cancer deaths among men."

Remarks That Housewives Get Tired of Hearing

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Remarks that annoy the world do wives do with all their spare time?"

"Hey, Mom, where is my blue sweater? I know I left it right here on this chair only two days ago."

"Gee Mom, I'm already late, and if you don't drive me to school in the pouring rain you're dead."

"This is Mrs. Chumley of the P-T-A. I wonder if you could help us address and mail a few letters? It will only take half or five hours."

"What do you need a new dress for? Didn't you buy one last year?"

"Mom, can we go as soon as I head out that door for work you'll have a hot meal ready in a two-hour nap. All wives do that."

COMMUTER'S WIFE

"Hello, Mello. Marge? I missed the 5:08 train home. Bumped into Joe Burch and we stopped off for a drink. I'll catch the 6:48 or maybe the 7:14 . . . or the 8:12 at the very latest."

"Hey, Mom, where is my baseball glove? I threw it in this corner last Saturday, and now it's gone."

"Don't tell me you went to all the trouble of fixing a New England boiled dinner. Why, that's what I had for lunch."

"You don't understand, Mom. You and Dad don't seem to remember what it's like to be young."

"Yes, I think my daughter can baby-sit for you tonight, Marge. But I guess I'd better warn you—her ratsbas gone up to $1.25 an hour."

"Sure it's a nice looking hat, Mom. But don't you think it's a bit . . . a bit . . . youthful for you?"

HUNGRY BACHELORS

"I know I should have given you more warning, honey, but there are just a couple of lonely old bachelors at the office, and they'll eat anything. So don't bother for anything special."

"Hey, Mom, where are my roller skates? I left them right here under the sofa last week. Now they're gone. Do you know where."

"You're reading this book on Brahms, Marge? What does housewife need to know about Brahms?"

"Why, Mom! Guess what? You've got three more grey hairs. Isn't that funny?"

"I don't know where all the money goes around this house. What do you do with it—pour it down the drain?"

GOOD OLD MOM

"My mother never had to have a cleaning woman. She cooked, washed and ironed for five kids — and scrubbed the kitchen floor, too."

"Boy, I wish I had clothing to do but sit around the house and feel all day."

"Yeah, I know I promised you yesterday Yd do it today, Marge. But I'm tired. I'll do it tomorrow for sure."

"Hey, Mom, where is my stamp collection? Why is it a fellow can never find anything in this house? And can you help me find my library card? It's lost now, too."

6,500 Guests Attend Party At Palace

LONDON (AP)—Queen Elizabeth, just back from an official visit to Italy, was hostess Thursday at London's biggest social event.

She entertained 6,500 guests at a Buckingham Palace garden party, smiling, gravely through hundreds of informal presentations and thousands of curtsies and bows.

Prince Philip appeared bareheaded and, steering his own course through the crowd, exchanged quips especially with many uniformed and bemedalled members of the armed forces.

It was the first of three Buckingham Palace garden parties this year. They have gained some distinction because they replace the former practice of presenting debutantes in the palace.

On Monday evening members of the Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary of Christ Church met in the Parish Hall for the regular business meeting.

Mrs. L. Donnelly presided over a well-attended meeting which opened with a devotional period with Mrs. G. Cherry as pianist.

The correspondence was read and the reports of the various officers were given. Mrs. A. Boxgard gave an interesting report on the annual meeting which was held in Christ Church Lay Rec. Hall.

Mrs. Smith (the former Rosalie Maley), and her husband and two children, have spent four and one-half years in Ecuador as missionaries in different parts of the country. She illustrated her talk with beautiful colorful slides of the people and of their way of life. The need for missionaries in Ecuador is very great.

Mrs. Smith and her family will be returning in July to spend five more years in service there.

After the meeting closed, tea and cookies were served and a social time enjoyed.

Next week an auction will be held.

Christ Church C.C. Presents Charming 'Portrait in May'

The third annual "Fashion Show," sponsored by the Contact Club of Christ Church, attracted a large audience to the parish hall on Wednesday evening. Club president Joan Ford introduced the commentator, Mrs. Florence Lecocq, whose carefully prepared descriptions added much to the evening's enjoyment.

The theme, "Portrait in May" was charmingly carried out in the decorative scheme planned by June Fisher. Large arbors, pails with flowers and potatoes decorated the hall. On stage each model was first seen posed in a large gold picture frame. The gold and white motif was further accented by slender white columns topped by huge bouquets of gold leaves and white fern against a black background. White bird cages with gay flowers hung from above. The refreshment table was gay with wee dolls gowned in pink, black and mauve.

This year the adult models were Betty Ling, June Woodley, Barbara Jones, Myra Cresswell, Shirley Ashley, Ann Trendell, Shirley Stephens, Doris Stewart and Dorothy Sinclair. Heather Mills and Marilyn Durand modelled teenage clothes. Four capitivating children, Carol Green, Cathy Kerr, Gail Kerr and Stewart Rompen were added to the regulars. All the models were members of Contact Club or children of members.

CHILDREN'S DAY-WEAR

The fashion show began with a showing of children's day-wear (from Corbe's infants' and children's wear). The popularity of purple was clearly shown on the little girls' costumes. Carol Green wore a quaint frock of purple with white embroidery on the skirt and on the matching purple umbrella. Wee Gail Kerr, age three, appeared in big mauve and white checks with an Alice blue pinafore bodice accenting its own flower.

Cathy Kerr's gay red print sombrero dress, trimmed with white beading and white rick-rack, had the same straw hat with matching red hatband. The young gentleman of the group showed a Gay Toy play set of loden green chino longs and short sleeved shirt in companion print.

Women's day wear showed the continuing popularity of the shirtwaist dress. Included were: a lilac shirtwaist of Bemberg polyester with embroidered trim; a dark olive, navy-care cotton shirtwaist and a refreshing pale yellow shirtwaist, again with short sleeves, but this time with a slim skirt. (This style is a petite - especially designed for shorter persons.) All these dresses were from Marianne's.

COOL SLEEVELESS DRESSES

Cool sleeveless dresses are also ever-popular for warm weather. A pale blue Dan Riverton cotton, patterned in green, white and blue had a square neck, and narrowed slightly at the hemline out below the tiny waist. A surplice-back style in navy and white polished cotton, achieved distinction from the white rickrack trim and four large mother of pearl buttons accenting the back waist. This was worn with a large brimmed, white fringed straw hat with a band of navy-dotted white silk.

Mauve was also seen in a sleeveless, floral-and-cotton coat dress, double-breasted with large buttons and a violet lined patterned scarf at the neckline. A deeper mauve appeared in a wardrobe-of-one-linen suit with a cropped chanel-type, short sleeved jacket banded in white.

The swinging skirt was of wide box pleats. A white knit in coarse stripe topped with large taffeta bows completed the costume. A slim sheath in Suzy Wong style in pale blue with Chinese blue and hot pink flowers was also very attractive.

COOLER DAYS GARB

For cooler days a pure wool knitted suit from France, a Lenzes, would be an excellent choice for travel.

One in oyster shade with charcoal grey trim and hot pink accessories, has a demurely pleated skirt which may be shortened by merely snipping off the surplus from the bottom.

Teenage styles from the Elizabeth shop were represented by a romantically printed overblouse in green and violets on white with a slim plain mauve skirt. Also shown for daytime was a white polished cotton print with carts of flowers topped with gay red umbrellas. Youthful full, skirted style was complimented by a matching red umbrella.

PLAY TOGS

Children's playwear — as in adults' wear, separates are much in the picture. A tunic top in greens, tans and coral on white with Jamaica shorts, in sharkskin, would prove gay and practical for pre-teens. Also for pre-teens was an attractive lilac dress piece outfit of slims and coat, trimmed and lined to match the floral blouse. For smaller girls Society separates in red, white and navy are a practical answer for play.

One young man was natty in red Vivella plaid shorts, white jersey and gay red knee sox. Another boy's outfit was a gold bi-bulk cotton cardigan, chino shorts and gold jersey.

SPORTSWEAR

The keynote of the sportswear parade was co-ordinates — a whole wardrobe of separates which combine happily. The loden green, golds, blues, lavenders and taupes were all to be found in slims, Jamaicas, blouses, jackets and pop-ons. One outfit saw a pop-over silvette shade combined with a jacket called a (back-hand-pants) and worn over a long-sleeved hooded jersey of full gold with beautiful white stripes.

Three-piece outfits of plaid or geometric print, with blouse, skirt and Jamaicas were also popular. One had a bowed valvet blouse which combined a solid brown and white plaid vestee with an attached white collar and sleeves.

Another sweater sports a smart gold linen suit was modelled. It had a lowered neckline with round collar and large buttons down the front three quarter sleeves and a plain skirt with a kick pleat.

The teens showed the ever popular fitted lacy shirts by Jantzen, with co-ordinated Tshirts and plain bathing suits in blue shades were worn with terry cloth topguns. One was a poncho style in white with turquoise and mauve cats under an umbrella, with a matching play cap.

AFTER-FIVE FASHIONS

As usual the more glamorous after-five fashions drew admiration's admiring glances. Betty Ling modelled a stately mauve peau de soie, organza overlaid over cotton lace. This slim sheath, round neckline, elbow length and sleeves tastefully trimmed with 3 tiny buttons at the shoulder. A matching hat was of organza bows and veiling.

June Woodley's Queen's blue organza featured an embroidered bodice with sheath skirt and back panel in the full skirt.

A practical but pretty full length dress was worn by Barbara Jones, of white terylene, the bodice studded with huge turquoise, royal and navy dots. Her white hat was of white straw with navy bows on the front. An effective white sheath in English eyelighted flowers in glowing gold and poppy red worn by Myra Cresswell, was complemented by a poppy red Italian straw hat.

Shirley Ashley wore an irridescent rose taffeta dress in charcoal of greys and hot pinks. A hot pink hat and gloves completed the picture.

YELLOW AND GOLD DACRON

Ann Trendell modelled two pale yellow and gold Dacron with a white background. The interesting bodice on this one featured a dropped shoulder forming the top of the sleeve with the lower sleeves shirred on.

Heather Mills was gay in a white polished cotton featuring French quotations on floral print. Coral, brown and grey trimmed with coral, white and Shirley Stephens wore delicious white organza shirtwaist with three quarter sleeves and a white collar, with large dots in pinks and raspberry reds.

Doris Stewart appeared in a sunny yellow full skirted dress with a deep yoke of yellow cotton lace. A matching yellow hat was worn with this sleeveless dress.

Dorothy Sinclair showed the "Costume Look" — a dark blue organza three-quarter coat with large collar and short kimono sleeves worn over a simple embroidered sheath, of the same blue. Her hat was of blue toned organza petals.

Marilyn Durand showed a "Shizy" dress of pale aqua and white cotton, with a sailor strips. Rows of ice frock at the bodice front, the collar and the cuffs.

PARTY BEST

The show was climaxed by the models showing off their wearing their party best. Carol Green's party dress was of green Bemberg, Corbe's Whaley sale. The Georgia Salon, Marianne's, Corbe's Infants and Children's Wear, Michael's Beauty Salon, Woodley Furniture, Lee Ltd. and to C. D. Smart Spring Tweeds

By ALICE ALDEN

The tweed suit, once a sort of symbol for the "tweedy-type" woman who preferred country life and disdained fashion, has become a smart choice for town and country wear.

Ben Gershel's new collection is a case in point. The fabric is of soft white and black checked, lightweight tweed.

The high-rise skirt meets the hem of the short jacket that is piped with bands of self fabric and is perfectly tailored for good looks and comfort.

H-S Assoc. Sponsors 'Fun Fair'

ALBURY—The new Albury school was the scene of a successful "Fun Fair", put on by Albury Home and School Association on Saturday evening under the direction of president Mrs. J. Milne. The Fun Fair was convened by Mrs. Maude Dempsey, and assisted by her committee. A fine evening afternoon helped in bringing out an overflowing crowd of community folk.

FOOD BASKET DRAW

All the school children brought an item of canned food and a food basket was made up under the direction of school teachers, Miss Cooke and Mrs. Huttmeir. The lucky winner was Mrs. C. Langman.

Attracting the greatest deal of attention was the fish pond for the kiddies with which quickly sold out in a short time. It was convened by Mrs. Grace Vandervalde.

PINE HOMEBAKING

The home baking table was loaded with a fine assortment of goodies, which included home baked bread, cakes, pies, candies, cookies, etc., and was a complete sell-out which speaks well of the fine baking of the ladies in the community. This table was convened by Mrs. Jamieson, assisted by Mrs. M. Langman, Mrs. J. Langman and Mrs. G. Graham.

The home handicraft and white elephant table featured many useful articles which included lovely home knit baby sets; aprons; oven mitts; crocheted doilies, and other household items and plants. This table was convened by Mrs. J. Jones, assisted by Mrs. Orvis Peck.

The refreshment booth was well patronized by young and old alike with tan cans of pop and tea, the latter being dispensed. This booth was convened by Mrs. Wm. Wese, assisted by Mrs. B. Brown.

COFFEE BAR

The coffee bar was convened by grandmothers, Mrs. I. Miller, assisted by Mrs. B. Mosbynski. Beautiful items are developed to the many families and individuals who so generously supported this grand raising project, the largest and most successful to date.

'Size by Age' Standard May Be on Way Out

MONTREAL (CP) — Although you are well aware of it and for children has long been the scourge of Canada, mainly because of the lack of data on children's measurements from which to base a more accurate one.

This now has been obtained said Mildred L. Staples of Toronto, chairman of the Committee on Standardization of Garment Sizes, and a re port giving the results will be launched next spring.

Mr. Staples, who spoke at a luncheon address in Montreal, said the new system is the result of the joint efforts of the committee, set up by the Canadian government specifically for the purpose in 1957, and the Independent Ontario Research Foundation.

Measurements of some 150,000 children in the United States were obtained from a survey undertaken by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Similar data, across - section of Canadian, children they were found to be somewhat smaller.

Mr. Staples said standard measurements were developed from these measurements for children from infancy to age 16.

The committee, which is made up of representatives of manufacturing, retailing and the Canadian Association of Consumers — will check all measurements against actual materially to it by manufacturers.

They fit the new sizing system, the garment will be identified by a "Canada Standard Size" label. This method will eventually be extended to adult's clothing.

Miss Phillips, delegate to the 75th Diocesan annual held at Christ Church, May 2nd, 3rd, 4th, gave a report. As the Intelligencer had published excellent accounts of the doings, she only gave the highlights of the proceedings and mentioned various topics that especially appealed to her, the harmony of the meeting, hands had been done shown by all those present and especially worthy of comment.

After the meeting closed the social committee served refreshments.

JOHNSTOWN W.A.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Brenda Y. — Even though I'm ill, my parents harass me and my every move to me.

Joyce Y. — She takes most of it to get out of helping at home.

Brenda Y. — Ever since I was 14, I've had a bad case of sinusitis, due primarily to the cold damp climate in the city where I live. I'm now 25 and due to the discomfort I suffer, which often causes weakness and dizziness, I'm unable to hold a steady job and am dependent on my parents.

Although doctors suggest I move to a hot, dry climate for permanent relief, my family refuses to help in any way. In addition, my parents scold and argue with me. To make matters worse, I have a 33-year-old sister, unmarried, living at home too. She's unemployed herself, but has money in the bank which permits her to live. I ask my parents to help me find a job, but they refuse.

I'm in such a rut. What can I do to avoid a breakdown?

Joyce Y. — Brenda is plainly ill. We all have days when the weather here gets us down, but headache or not, we do our work. She refuses. From time to time, she'll take a part-time job. But it's mostly to shut me up at home. She doesn't even try to utilize the help and aid offered, and then blames it on her sinus.

I worked hard in a dress factory for 15 years. Now my parents need me at home. I take care of my mother who's a diabetic, and do practically all the housework. Brenda hasn't lifted a finger to help.

I don't mean to nag her! She exaggerates her illness. There's no reason why she can't be partially independent financially. Then she can live where she pleases. We're through pampering her.

The Council — Brrr, Brenda! You're living in a cold climate all right, but it's mainly meteorological and emotional. The immediate answer to your sinus problem is Move!

And moving around the corner may be almost as effective as moving to Arizona because your pain is heightened by the tendency to brood and dwell on day-by-day life with father, mother, sister. Here's your primary solution for leaving a job, no matter what: To earn enough and save up something to enable you to leave. Once you've accomplished the break in the family, they may be glad to help in the speed you leave, as well as suggest places to go.

Mealthy, there may be a job for you in a hotel or institution situated in the weather zone you want. That would take care of money, room, climate, and peace — all at once. A nationwide employment agency can help.

But eventually this jagged, mother-daughter-sister relationship will have to be smoothed. It's easy to fill in the blanks. Here are two aging parents with unmarried daughters around all day. Here, also, is an unhappy older sister whom Brenda finds "picking" on her. Even well-adjusted happy people living in such proximity, might snap at each other occasionally. How much harder for these people, blister, despising folk.

We urge Joyce, and through her, the parents, to stop threatening and doubting Brenda. Her headaches are real! But, according to recent findings, they are due more to emotional stress than to her sinus trouble.

The best course here for all would be sympathetic encouragement for Brenda while, with the help of a family worker from an organization like the Salvation Army or a family service association, she heads for a healthier, happier life. Most of her problems should clear up with a change of housing.

Club Activities

MR. - MRS. CLUB

JOHNSTOWN—The Johnstown Mr. and Mrs. Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Rathwell on the 26th of April at 8 p.m. with 16 members present.

The meeting opened with prayer by Mrs. Maitland Herdman.

At the business session, they planned their next social. Their social evening to be a night of bowling at David's Bowl-O-Drome, finishing with lunch at the Skyline Restaurant.

The program was in charge of Mr. B. Thrasher, who held a Baptismal class for parents, children and adults, held on Sunday afternoon at Johnstown Church.

Mrs. Maitland Harder put on two contests followed by a fine lunch.

THE BELLEVILLE GENERAL HOSPITAL

Education Hall
2.30 - 4.30 p.m.

Dear friends,

As children, we tend to take Mother for granted. It is only when we become parents ourselves we begin to realize the devoted labor, patience and sacrifice of mother in guiding us to be good, useful citizens.

Let us show the depth of our love and appreciation of mother on this Mother's Day.

Respectfully,

Readers' Friday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

This column consists of recipes readers have sent to me prompted by other readers' requests.

Dinner Menus

FRIDAY

Flounder Fillets Tartare; Oven French Fries or Cross-patch Baked Potatoes; Casserole of Tomatoes with Crumb Topping; Coconnut Blanc Mange with Fresh Frozen Raspberries; Coffee.

SUNDAY

(Mother's Day — Invite Your Mother for Dinner) Rolled Prime Rib Roast of Beef (low-slow method — see Tuesday); Creamed Horseradish (see Wednesday); Fried Bananas (use underripe bananas); Asparagus with Hollandaise; Cucumbers in Sour Cream (see Wednesday); French Chocolate Mould (see Monday); Coffee.

G-L-O MARMALADE:

One grapefruit, 1 lemon, 2 oranges. Cut in half to squeeze out the juice and pulp on a lemon reamer. Put the peel through a food chopper twice, using finest disc or blade, add to the juice and measure. Put into a large pan and for each cup of prepared fruit add 2 cups cold water. Let stand overnight: Boil for 1-2 hour, remove from stove and measure again. There should be about 6 cups. For each cup of cooked fruit add 1 1-2 cups of white sugar. Stir over low heat with wooden spoon until all sugar is melted, bring to boil, stir often for about 30 minutes, then test for set. An easy way is to remove pan from heat and put a spoonful on a saucer and place in fridge until cold; if cooked enough it will stiffen, if not, boil until a good set is obtained. Pour into hot jars and seal. This is cheap, quick and good.

ANSWER:

Thank you.

LETTER:

I am 82 years 11 months old . . . Have followed the events in your family life as you shared your joys. I had a family of six but the three oldest have passed on and now have 17 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren, so life doesn't seem to get dull . . . I thought I would like to pass on a hint re apple pie baking given by Kate Aitken on the radio some years ago, if it isn't too presumptuous of me. You may be surprised at the result, I have never had an apple pie with a "shanty roof" since using her method. Re the lady who wanted the method for small cakes with a raspberry then cocoanut covering. Here is one way: when your cakes are cooled, you have red jelly stirred or whipped a little to soften, not over heat, roll cakes in this then in cocoanut (desiccated) then if you add a tiny ring of icing on the top and a blob of jelly or jam in centre of the ring. They are delicious and used to be called metropolitans . . . Mrs. Annie K.

ANSWER:

Thank you! Life will never get dull for anyone who, at 82, can be so outgoing.

LETTER:

Ruth L. gives a recipe for:

OLD-FASHIONED SUGER-DOODLES:

Taste like toffee squares but are not as hard and are more porous. Cream together 1 cup soft shortening, 1 1-2 cups sugar, 2 eggs. Sift together and add 3 3-4 cups sifted cake flour, 1 teaspoon cream of tartar, 1 teaspoon soda, 1-3 teaspoons salt. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Chill dough. Roll in balls size of walnuts and roll in plain or colored sugar. Bake on ungreased baking sheet at 400 deg. Fahr. for 9 to 10 minutes. Makes about 60 cookies. Cookies can be rolled in 2 tablespoon sugar mixed with 2 teaspoons cinnamon. The dough, if kept in refrigerator, will keep for a week.

ANSWER:

Thank you, Ruth.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Euclid or Romeo?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I have a niece at high school who is getting away behind with her geometry. The trouble is she has a boy friend and she spends every spare minute with him.

Now she wants my help as I have coached her before with good results. I say I will help if she will give up the dates except on Saturday nights. This she can't do, she says.

Why should I struggle with coaching her just to make up for the way she neglects her homework? Am I being unreasonable?—AUNTIE.

* * *

DEAR AUNTIE:—In other words the triangle in this proposition involves a girl, a boy and a study book. The problem is to prove that Nliecy means business.

An aunt who can remember and help with geometry is rare. One who will devote leisure hours to coaching is priceless. Six weeks now might save a whole year for your niece.

Your bargain is a fair one. At her age, romancing has a powerful pull, but your niece will be the loser if she does not give up some of her play time right now in favor of help with homework.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—My wife is always wanting me to mend a chair or varnish a table or build some shelves. When it comes to this kind of work I am all thumbs. When I aim for the head of a nail, the hammer hits my finger or the nail goes in crooked.

Her father and her brothers are all good at the do-it-yourself techniques and she has decided I am just lazy. I am a salesman and able to work with people rather than things. But now she makes me think I married her under false pretences.—DAGWOOD.

DEAR DAGWOOD:—Did you swear to love, honor and mend furniture?

Talents differ, and the round peg still will not fit the square hold. There are men who love to cook, women who enjoy plumbing, and people in our society who think that all such things are queer. But they are the queer ones.

You can't have it both ways. If you are a star at selling, it is highly likely that you won't excel at something else. Have the carpentry done by someone who has the skill. Pay for it with the money you earn selling. And ask your wife if that isn't fair.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—Please advise me. A year ago I started going with a boy of different religion. He said he liked me and I liked him very much. We went together all the time. When I found I was pregnant, he said he was sorry. He asked me to marry him. But we must marry in his church.

I said no because our church wouldn't allow it. Then he said he would arrange for me to have an abortion, which I refused. Now the priest has advised me to go to the Children's Aid but the boy objects. He wants it all kept quiet and I think he is going to deny everything. I cannot afford all the expense and if I keep my baby I will not be able to go out and work. How can I make him take some responsibility?—R. J.

* * *

DEAR R. J.:—The child's father should have a chance to agree to a voluntary arrangement. If he then definitely refuses, you may take him to court and get an affiliation order.

This means that if after examining evidence the judge declares him to be the father, he exacts payment of a regular amount for the support of the child, or for a lump sum to clear him of responsibility. Your child care agency or your lawyer can help you with all this.

* * *

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Project Your Talent

Make Slide Mural on Your Wall

A family room takes on a new personality with a mural, painted by you, on one of its walls.

The method is simple, the possibilities countless, according to Bell and Howell experts.

Choose a slide from your own collection, perhaps a scene you snapped on your vacation. Or pick a new subject category—collections of old glass or ancient cars—and photograph them especially for the mural. Whatever the subject, you assure yourself of a sharp, clear picture by using a foolproof electric eye camera that makes exposure-perfect pictures every time.

After selecting your slides, prepare your wall with a coat of background paint and determine the placement of the mural. Best results are obtained with a minimum of effort when you use one of the new Explorer projectors with a zoom lens, which gives big-as-life projections and adjusts the image size without moving the projector.

Sketch the projected picture on the wall. Then use a few basic shades of flat oil paint divided into small portions and colored with varying amounts of tinting oils.

Murals are also a way to turn an eyesore into a work of art. A new gathering job covering a crack in the wall can turn the mural into a 3-D painting if you design a rock or shrub over the rough spot. Let your imagination, and your projector, run wild, and your favorite retreat can become a shop, a ship or a shady trail, according to your taste.

TACKS PROTECT WALLS

The smooth heads of tacks placed inside the two lower corners of picture frames, will protect the wall surface from scratches.

Build 'Bargain Basement' Right in Your Own Home

Every now and then, most all department stores feature bargains to be found in their basements. Such special sales attract many women with the lure of getting extra value for their money.

But there is another kind of basement right in your own home which can be made to produce extra values for your money. This is particularly true in the case of older homes. Not so many years ago, the basement of the home was considered to be little more than a place to hide things from sight. And this included the furnace, which was often a grimy, unsightly monster which made the basement unfit for anything but its own presence plus a catch-all for all the odds and ends which accumulate in most homes.

But changes are being made in that situation now the Canadian Institute of Plumbing and Heating. There is a growing trend toward conversion from the old type basement to the modern style "finished basement". To start with, the old outworn and out-dated furnace usually is replaced. The great monster of grime and soot often consumes far too much fuel and gives out far too little heat in return.

A definition sec, nobody thought of entertaining in that cobwebbed chamber of horrors known as the furnace room — and why should they? But times have changed. Institute points out, and today's furnace can often be found standing in one corner of the basement recreation room. If it occupies quarters of its own, they are as neatly kept as any other part of the house. Designers have given a complete new look to the modern furnace including compactness, attractive lines and in some cases even color. Installation of a modern heating plant is usually the first step in converting the basement from the family catch-all to additional useful living space. The modern heating plant gives more efficient, more economical performance. And the whole family appreciates the extra warmth.

With a modern heating plant, all sorts of uses are possible with the cleanliness found and the floor space which becomes available. The family may enjoy space for pursuing hobbies of all sorts, for T-viewing in quiet seclusion, or for a party room where everybody can gather for fun and games or just a quiet chat.

It is always advisable to secure professional advice on the modernization of your basement. The Institute suggests that you call in a qualified plumbing and heating contractor early in the planning. He will best know how to make this conversion job easiest, most economical and most satisfactory in the long run.

Most people are pleasantly surprised how comparatively inexpensive a complete renovation of the basement and heating plant can be. Often a new heating plant will pay for itself in a short time by fuel economy alone. Financing a project can also be made easy and simple through the use of a Government- sponsored Home Improvement Loan. The manager of any branch bank will gladly explain how generous sums can be obtained for this purpose, usually without collateral and with every attractive terms of repayment including moderate carrying charges.

If you just investigate the possibilities of your present basement a little, you are almost sure to find that it too offers "bargains" in convenience, comfort and the greater enjoyment of life right in your present home.

"BASEBOARD HEATING"

Summer is the ideal time to make changes and improvements in the heating system. One of the improvements which can conveniently be made in the summer is the replacement of radiators with heating baseboard.

Many Methods For Heating Extra Rooms

If you have decided to expand the living space of your home, don't forget to make plans for heating.

To choose the right type of heating equipment, ask yourself these questions about costs, comfort and value:

1. How much will the heating equipment cost? How much to install? How much to operate? Will there be any hidden extra costs?

2. How much comfort will the heating equipment provide?

3. Will the heating equipment increase the value of the house? Should the heating become a permanent - type addition to the house like the new room itself?

There are four possible methods you can use to heat the new room, each varying in cost, comfort and value.

First, there is the appliance-like space heater which is simply set on the floor of the new room. It uses either gas, oil, kerosene or electricity.

The space heater is frequently the least expensive to purchase and install, but it is not always the most economical to operate. Moreover, heat is usually concentrated in one spot around the heater.

Electric resistance baseboard units are relatively inexpensive and easy to install, and they provide more uniform heating. Operating costs, however, may run three to four times higher with this type of unit except in a few areas where electric rates are extremely low. To maintain heating efficiency with electric units, extra heavy insulation is recommended for ceiling, walls and floors.

Another way to heat the new room is to expand your existing central heating system. This should be done with the advice of a reliable heating contractor who can tell you whether your heating plant is large enough to take on an extra heating load.

This method may be more expensive than the first, but should provide the finest heating if the heating equipment is properly installed.

You will probably have fewer problems expanding your heating system if it is a modern hot water heating system. According to the Better Heating-Cooling Council, a properly installed hot water heating system can be expanded quite easily without extensive alterations to the system or to the house itself.

Finally, you may find it practical to install a separate, permanent-type heating system just for the new room. According to the Council, there are now available, small hot water heating boilers which are sized for one-room heating jobs. The small boiler can be located anywhere in the house. Fingerstrip, flexible tubing is run from the boiler to hot water baseboard heating units.

Idle Areas Can Often Be Put to New Uses At Very Modest Cost

With the growth in families and the trend toward informal living and entertaining, the so-called "den" is becoming increasingly popular. Especially where there are children, it is considered almost a "must" to have a place where they can play and entertain their friends without disturbing the grown-ups and minus wear-and-tear on the living room.

The problem of many families, thoroughly sold on the advantages of such a room, is where to locate the new "addition". In an old house, the basement or attic may be ideal. Either choice is fine if space can be found for those things that "just can't be thrown out". But, whether the location, home owners must carefully judge how much space they will need for the family's use, and just how much storage area can be sacrificed to this end.

Very often, where the attic has already been finished off into extra sleeping quarters or is being reserved for this use in the future, the basement may well be the answer to the question of location.

Great improvement in the appearance and function of a basement can be accomplished with a relatively modest expenditure. If the owners are do-it-yourself enthusiasts, they can do much of the work themselves.

Smart owners, with a "family room" in mind, will check over published articles and books and then make their decisions with this background and their own requirements in a happy merger. They can ask advice of interested friends, especially if these include a builder or architect. They can prepare sketches to put their dreams on paper and then have them checked by someone who knows something about remodeling.

Selecting Materials

Materials used in basement "face-lifting" are a major consideration. They should be selected for their appearance, wearing qualities, economy and function.

The wall treatment usually gives the family room its basic personality and panelling is a popular choice because it is handsome, sturdy and easy to maintain.

Woods from the western pine region are particularly suitable because of the wide range of types (there are ten varieties in all), and these may be treated or finished in infinite variety.

If a clear finish is to be used, the color of the wood is an important consideration. For a room with limited natural light, it is wise to choose a paneling that is light in tone, such as Idaho white pine, ponderosa pine or sugar pine. For a well-lighted room a darker wood is a good choice, such as inlaid red cedar or incense cedar.

Furthermore, the range of finishes is so great that no one need be bothered by knots which can be made almost white with wipe-on, wipe-off pigmented stains, and panelling can be finished in any color tone by the same method. The color remains but the grain shows through.

Other materials suitable for a "family room" project are the various hardboards (such as Masonite). These are especially popular with home owners planning to do most of the work themselves. Available at lumber dealers in various patterns and styles, they are easily worked with common woodworking tools and have great stamina against abuses. They are excellent, too, for siding doors, soffits and various built-ins.

Asphalt Floor Tiles

For a gay but rugged surface underfoot, asphalt floor tiles can be easily installed by the man of the house in striking color combinations and patterns to add decorative interest to the room.

Built-in benches provide extra seating space and also serve to conceal the unsightly pipes that are a perennial problem in basement remodelling.

A snack bar, duplicate cooking and serving equipment for food preparation (and plenty of wall cabinets in which to store them when not in use) will double the utility of the room and save trips to the kitchen when a party is in progress.

It is the imagination shown in fitting a family room to personal tastes and needs that will bring it alive and make it headquarters for pleasure. The room may follow a nautical motif if the family sails. Portholes may be substituted for windows, a stale rail may be a rope strung between posts. Lovers of the South Seas may follow a tropical bent with louvered pine doors, a mural wallpaper view

Rayon Makes Big Strides In Carpeting

There's no denying that color and style trends are deciding factors in the choice of furnishings. When it comes to carpeting, however, a realistic understanding of functional features is essential. Wear life, ease of cleaning and investment value in this area are every bit as important as decorative appearance.

It is imperative to understand which fibers offer the best combination of wanted characteristics, especially these days where new names and claims are apt to cause confusion.

First of all, it should be remembered that all fibers, whether natural such as wool or man-made such as rayon, have desirable characteristics for special uses. By the same token, no one fiber offers all the answers for any application It is a good idea, therefore, to specify fibers which have a record of performance in a particular use.

The development work done to refine and improve fibers rarely attracts as much attention as the introduction of a brand new textile component, but it is actually of greater significance to the homemaker who cares about proved value.

The story of rayon is a case in point. Being the oldest and most widely used man-made fiber, rayon has become a household word so familiar that many assume we know all about it. This can be most misleading, however. Actually, rayon as used today has come a long way since it made its debut in this country in 1910.

In carpeting, rayon developments are particularly significant. Rayon staple, used in the most suitable for scatter rugs or floor coverings selected primarily for appearance and economy, there is today a special smooth rayon fiber available and soil-resistant carpets by one of the family of Avisco fibers, this smooth rayon is used in carpeting identified by the name Super L, and is used by leading carpet mills in 100 per cent rayon carpets as well as in approved blend combinations.

These carpets are made with rayon which has built-in strength and wear life and which is made with smooth surfaces that shed rather than border dirt. Resiliency, once a potential problem in rayon carpets, is assured through low-pile textured constructions, usually preferred for their good looks and easy upkeep. The faithful color reproductions and moderate prices attainable with rayon are still in evidence.

Since fiber blends have a definite place in carpeting, it sometimes becomes difficult for the homemaker to remember which proportions are approved for best performance. One safe rule is to check percentages, since an obviously minute quantity of any fiber will make a correspondingly small contribution of its characteristics.

To help the shopper who is not a textile expert spot approved blends, the manufacturer of the long-wearing and soil-shedding carpet rayon is sponsoring a quality control program which identifies properly constructed Super L floor coverings with the Avisco lionlike can be used. Needless to say the boxes, especially if made of wood, must be strongly built, with the corners preferably reinforced and they must be well supported as they will be heavy when filled with moist soil. Any one should bear in mind that wood "moves" because hanging pots and boxes as being exposed more to air, sun and wind will dry out quickly. They require frequent watering.

YOU CAN'T BUY THIS QUALITY

A lot of people who have forgotten or never knew what a really fresh vegetable can taste like neglect this interesting and satisfying part of gardening. They think they can buy vegetables more cheaply at the store or stand, but this means a lot of hard work and expense, entirely false and especially the last one. Actually the only way to get real freshness in certain vegetables such as peas, corn, and lettuce, is from a garden right at the door and they should be picked only a few minutes before they are to be used. Sugars in many vegetables start to turn to starch in a matter of hours after harvesting. That is why the best canners take their portable plants right into the field. You can't buy vegetables nearly as fresh as those grown outside the kitchen door.

WHY SOWS?

Even indoors in a seed flat or bed in which seedlings are started, it is a good idea to sow the seeds in distinct rows. The reason? It is easier to tell seedling flowers from seedling weeds. If a plant isn't in the row it's a weed. And weeding is cultivation very much easier.

FOILING MARAUDERS will be discussed next week.

GROWTH BOOSTERS

Where the soil is only average or poorer, commercial or chemical fertilizers will push growth along in amazing fashion. And even a good fertile soil, for stimulating lusty growth, or roots or a shock-free start after transplanting, a little fertilizer will work wonders. Fertilizer chemicals are also a boon to gardens in the north country where the season is short and things must be grown quickly to escape the early frost.

These fertilizers, however, like medicine, must be used with reasonable care. Most often will burn if they come in direct contact with plants or roots. In the very small garden the fertilizer is best dissolved in water, and applied in liquid form. Or it can be carefully sprinkled along the row close to but not actually touching the seed or plants.

Chemical fertilizers, as a rule, are a mixture of three main chemicals, nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, expressed on the package in three numbers, like 10-8-4. This would mean ten parts nitrogen, eight of phosphoric acid and four of potash. For green growth we want lots of nitrogen and that is why lawn fertilizer and mixtures for salad vegetables have the highest count of the first number.

Even in good soil, as previously mentioned, experienced gardeners use some chemical fertilizer for pushing growth, especially for things like, lettuce, cabbage, spinach, carrots and beets. They do so because they know that the speedier the growth the more tender and higher the quality. Quickly grown vegetables do not have fibres, cores or stringiness.

FLOWERING TUBS AND PLANTS

Nothing will brighten a wall or add more gaiety to a house front, verandah or patio or other setting at that place, than a window box, pot or tub filled with bright flowers. There are very intensive sorts of gardens, with little soil and a lot of attention expected. Therefore the soil must be fine and very rich at the bottom of each box or hanging pot.

The boxes, pots or tubs are usually filled closely with a quick and steady flowering things such as pansies, petunias, nasturtiums, geraniums, lobelia, alyssum, ageratum and special foliage plants. Some of the flowers should be the trailing type so that they will overflow and hang down. In shady locations be-

Garden Hose Reel

Unsightly coils of garden hose lying around your garage or backyard can be avoided by building a fir plywood reel to accommodate the hose when it's not in use.

A few pieces of plywood and a small amount of hardware make this an ideal winter evening project. The reel is mounted between uprights 31 inches by 24 inches, and is operated by a half inch steel rod. Identity of the various pieces is indicated by numbers in the right section of the diagram. Eight plywood strips, 14 1-2 inches by four inches are used for the centre section of the reel.

By using waterproof glue fir plywood, edge-marked "PMBC EXTERIOR," you can leave your hose reel outdoors indefinitely.

The Perfect Vacuum

Although the vacuum cleaner is one of the most willing and obedient servants a woman can have, there are still many people who mistreat their vacuums. This sort of malpractice can time make even the most cheerful vacuum turn surly and unco-operative. In order to prevent dissatisfaction on the part of otherwise well-trained vacuums, the Electric Vacuum Cleaner Research Division offers a few hints for not to do while housecleaning. Avoid these pitfalls, say the experts, and you'll be assured of competent cleaning help for the life of your vacuum.

When replacing a broken window in cold weather, heat a brick and lay putty on it while working. This keeps the putty soft and oily.

United Church Clergyman Ministers to 175 Families, Heads Insurance Company

By JACK PICKETTS
Canadian Press Staff Writer.

UPPER MUSQUODOBOIT, N.S. (CP)—Rev. J. D. Nelson-MacDonald is popular with the 175 families of his United Church of Canada pastoral charge here. They like his sermons, his strong Scots accent and his friendly visits to their homes.

They seldom remember that Dr. MacDonald is also president one of the largest life insurance companies in the world, the CUNA Mutual Insurance Society. He holds the office without pay.

The company, with $5,705,000 coverage in force at the end of 1960, is a branch of the Credit Union National Association. More than 8,000,000 credit union members, most of them in the United States and Canada, are covered by CUNA Mutual policies.

CUNA Mutual was organized in 1935 to ensure the economic stability of credit unions by giving protection to the families of borrowing members.

As chairman of CUNA Mutual's annual meeting, held in conjunction with the May 10-12 International Credit Union Convention in Montreal, Dr. MacDonald marks his second year in the presidency of an organization he served from its beginnings.

HELD MANY POSTS

A pioneer in the credit union movement since 1933, Dr. MacDonald personally organized some 70 credit unions and has served as vice-president of CUNA, secretary and vice-president of CUNA Mutual, director of the CUNA Supply Cooperative and a director for 21 years of the Nova Scotia Credit Union League.

"The credit union movement," says Dr. MacDonald, "is the greatest institution we have. Our most important work is a world extension program which includes personnel from other countries in the fundamentals of credit unions.

"Although there is a large number of credit unions in the West Indies area, curiously enough there are very few in Cuba. If there had been more, the Cubans could have solved many of their problems."

Recalling his early days in credit union movement, Dr. MacDonald said there were many people in those times of depression who saw credit unions as a radical experiment. But conditions among the fishermen, farmers and industrial workers were so bad credit unions were an absolute necessity.

AIDED COMEBACK

"I saw villages in the depression years of 1933 to 1939 becoming rehabilitated through the work of credit unions and self-help organizations."

Turning to the CUNA Mutual, Dr. MacDonald said the billion-dollar figures of the company give the impression of big business, but it is really a great number of small companies banded together for purposes of uniformity, each operating on a semi-individual basis.

"Actually," Dr. MacDonald said, "the credit union movement is a self-help organization for the little fellow. We are trying to help the people of the world make a decent living.

"I consider it an extension of my ministry. It is the practicality of brotherhood, or, if you would rather, practical Christianity. It is practising what you preach on Sunday."

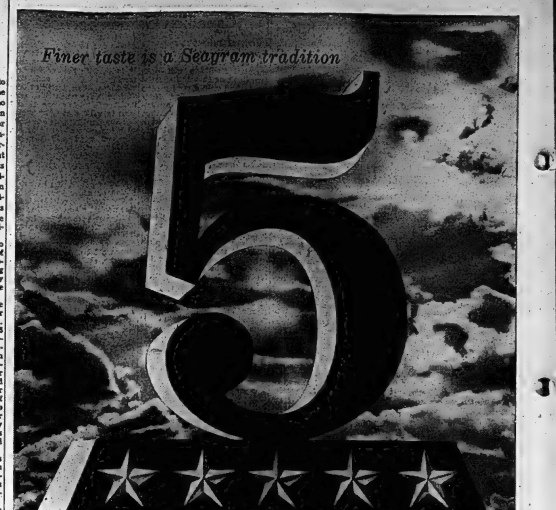
A. G. Endorses Safe-Driving Campaign

TORONTO — "I continue to be greatly concerned about the number of young people who have lost their lives or been maimed and crippled in motor vehicle accidents and who continue to be endangered for various reasons. The development of more mature driving habits and attitudes among young drivers, which will give them an increased sense of responsibility, as well as greater skill, is an essential requirement, in the solution of our highway accident problem."

So declared the Hon. A. Kelso Roberts, Attorney General of Ontario, in a Statement endorsing a province-wide safe driving campaign being conducted by Junior Chambers of Commerce among "teen-aged drivers.

"We are concerned by the appalling loss of life on our highways," Mr. Roberts said. "Last year there were 87,136 highway accidents in Ontario resulting in 1,166 deaths and 34,406 non-fatal injuries. With more motor vehicles registered and more drivers than ever before, there is a greater need for safety and courtesy on our highways. Junior Chambers of Commerce throughout Ontario are to be commended for their efforts to encourage highway safety, to protect good drivers and to correct the faults of bad drivers."



Now in its sixth year, this Ontario-wide safety campaign has attracted hundreds of contestants in the past and has made many of today's motorists more safety conscious.

Described as a "Teen-age safe driving road-e-o," regional competitions involving written and actual driving tests are now being held in many cities and towns throughout the province.

The Imperial Oil Limited is co-operating with Junior Chambers of Commerce in this safety campaign and is donating trophies and cash awards to winning participants.

Winners of regional contests will compete in a provincial final to be held in Ottawa on Saturday, June 10. This is being sponsored by Imperial Oil Limited in conjunction with the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Ottawa, and La Chambre de Commerce des Jeunes of Ottawa-Eastern.

The winner, last year, acclaimed the "top teen-age driver in Ontario," was 19-year-old Robert Young of Leamington who edged out nearly 60 other contestants to win the title, together with a cash award of $100 and the Esso Trophy.

Ocean Travel on Pacific Booming, B.C. Expects Busiest Season Since 1941

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ocean travel on the Pacific is booming again, from port of Vancouver expects 1961 to be its busiest, passenger season since the White Empress fleet of the Canadian Pacific Steamship Company ended its trans-Pacific service in 1941.

Proud new passenger lines offering a variety of accommodation from luxury to economy class are plying between Vancouver and the Orient, the South Seas and Europe.

These, and their older sisters, are carrying the bulk of Pacific travellers from here, but hundreds more are sailing from Vancouver to say and every outbound smaller ships, designed primarily for freight but carrying anywhere from six to 90 passengers.

BIG COMEBACK

More than 20,000 persons are expected to arrive and depart by sea through Vancouver during 1961, and while this is only half the annual business the Empresses did on the Oriental service, heyday of the 1920s, it represents an increase of 3,000 or more over last year.

And it's probably 20 times greater than the total seven years ago when the Orient Lines made their first post-war call here with a major passenger liner.

The increase is largely attributed by travel and shipping experts to a general upsurge in the tourist industry of the Pacific areas.

"There has been a realization by many that the Pacific has a great potential," says Ian MacLean, Vancouver manager for P and O-Orient Lines, which this year has 17 scheduled sailings from Vancouver by its nine passenger liners.

"So people have been to Europe in the past and they're looking for some new places to go. There has been an effort by the Pacific countries to prove their tourist potential, which they have been doing by bringing the standards of their facilities."

PRE-WAR PEAK

Ocean passenger traffic from here reached its peak in the 1930s and early 1930s, when Canadian Pacific carried travellers to and from the Orient aboard their luxurious Empresses of Canada, Asia, Japan and Russia.

Their trade slackened with the depression years that preceded the Second World War and when they were pressed into war service, three of them were lost. The Empress of Asia made the last commercial trip in January, 1941.

From then until 1954, when the Origet Line's Oronsay called at Vancouver in an experimental extension of its Australian service, ocean travel here virtually was limited. And major passenger liner service between Vancouver and the Orient wasn't restored until April, 1959.

Popularity of the Pacific increased following the 1954 Oronsay call and by 1958 the Orient line found its three ships — Oronsay, Orsova and Orcades — inadequate to meet demand for the North America-Hawaii-Fiji-Australia-New Zealand service. It merged service with the P and O (Peninsular and Oriental) Line.

REGULAR ROUTE

In April, 1959, the combined P and O-Orient service had Himalaya and Chusan making scheduled trips between Vancouver and Japan, Hong Kong and Manila — the first regular Oriental link since the Empress of Asia's last trip.

Last year, with the number of sailings cut to 13 monthly, both by P and O-Orient ships was increased to 17 with a new liner in service. This year, two new ships — the 2,200 passenger Iberia and the 1,250-passenger Canberra — have been added and the Himalaya withdrawn. The larger of the 17 calls will be 28,000.

In that O-Orient expects to disembark 10,000 persons in Vancouver during 1961, 40-hour work week, two-weeks vacation with pay and other labor benefits.

Another 3,000 persons are expected to travel the Pacific by freighter-passenger service, in which Japan has the largest passenger capacity. Its ships have first-class accommodation for only 47 and 61 passengers, and they sail each way about once a month.

About two dozen other freighters with limited passenger space, taking 12 passengers, sail each month from Vancouver for ports throughout the world.

Vancouver also sees several luxury cruise ships a year coming and going on coastal cruises, with Hawaii, Japan or Alaska. Canadian National's Prince George takes 260 passengers on 12 Alaska passage cruises to Alaska each summer. Canadian Pacific's Princess Louise handles a similar number on 12 cruises over much the same route. The Alaska Cruise Line also has two ships in service: the Princess Patricia and Princess Kathleen.

National Plan Advocated by New Party

OTTAWA (CP) — A national health plan covering medical, hospital, dental and optical treatment as well as drugs and appliances was advocated Thursday in a draft social security declaration of the New Party.

The party document — third declaration on policy ever drafted by architects — promises a comprehensive program of social security "to ensure a standard of living which will enable every Canadian to live in health and with self-respect."

The health plan, the policy statement said, would be built on the present hospital insurance program and would be developed and administered in cooperation with provincial governments.

"It will be financed partly by federal grants to provinces and partly by individual premiums, graduated according to individual income."

The statement also endorsed a $75-a-month old age pension for Canadians 65 years of age and of 65 without a means test. A disability pension would be set up to provide extra benefits.

The party state ment also promised a family allowance to provide income during illness of a family breadwinner. Unemployment allowance payments, pensions of $75 a month for the blind, and increased aid for the disabled.

It proposed a national labor code, to be enacted jointly by federal and provincial legislatures, to establish a minimum wage of $1 an hour, 40-hour work week, two-weeks vacation with pay and other labor benefits.

A national centre for a wide range of research projects was listed as a New Party objective.

Another party aim was said to be to ensure that the drug industry from exploiting the public through price fixing in licence manufacturers to produce essential drugs under public auspices.

On education and the arts, the party declaration proposed help for the provinces to provide free education at all levels so that these fields can benefit from it.

The document will be considered at the founding convention of the New Party in Ottawa this summer.

Mental Illness Must Be Treated With Hard Cash

TORONTO (CP)—"Cold, hard cash" rather than sympathy — should be demanded of Canada's 'affluent' society if the challenge of mental illness is to be met, a Toronto psychiatrist told the Ontario Hospital Association Thursday.

Dr. William Mitchell, in a paper presented to the OHA's annual convention, said the challenge "is not being met "in terms of personnel, facilities or anything else."

He said the time has come to stop seeing funds through symphony or the ballet as social status is no longer attached to them.

"If we're going to argue with affluent groups, let's argue on that basis. They will understand," he said. "One should not argue on humanity, but for cold, hard cash."

CHALLENGES DEFENCE

Dr. Mitchell set out mental illness to Canada is now between $500,000,000 and $700,000,000 annually, and he brings in itself that challenges the defence budget.

One Canadian in every 2,500 last year was in a mental institution, and 1,000 more will be of us is going to be in something like four lives."

Dr. Mitchell suggested one reason money for research on mental illness "distasteful" and that people find it distasteful.

"Their hearts go out for a child cop cruelties, but not for mental illness which is in need of psychiatric help."

Dr. Mitchell's paper was one of several dozen presented to OHA groups.

Dr. Jean de la Harpe, Dr. R. B. Salter, a Toronto orthopaedic specialist, warned that we worry less over children born with flat feet. Most will grow out of the condition, he said, and of the others only two per cent will need surgery.

He told of an Indian who had been barred, from, to Toronto —65 miles—to join the army, only to be rejected because he had flat feet.

A Toronto dentist, Dr. S. A. MacGregor, suggested mothers treat thumb-sucking like alcoholics. He said the child "must be convinced he really wants to give up the habit before he will."

Control Over Use of Nuclear Weapons Biggest Problem

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NATO's biggest military problem and a prime political one—control over the use of nuclear weapons — was barely touched at the NATO foreign ministers' conference in Oslo this week.

Observers see three lines of approach to this problem, none of them easy.

One would be a system similar to that worked out by Canada and the United States for North American air defence command.

In the case of NORAD, the two governments have agreed in advance on how to react in various circumstances to the level of attack on North American bers.

TOO COMPLICATED

This system might be applied to NATO, but many more possible eventualities would have to be taken into account. This might make agreement so complicated it would be unworkable.

Another possibility which has been discussed would be to permit three or four NATO members to assume control over the use of nuclear weapons. In other words, these countries would make the decisions for NATO as a whole.

Canada has already objected to any such arrangement.

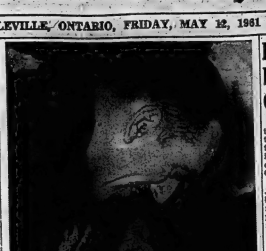
The third theory appears the most likely of all: Retention of the present system wherein the United States has custody of the nuclear weapons and retains the air defence and the authority of the U.S. president.

The question of freedom is in the, attitude of France.

FORCE FOR FRANCE

Diplomatic sources say building a nuclear force for France because Britain has such an independent force of its own NATO command.

Despite the appears to resent the fact that the U.S. and Britain have nuclear striking forces and France has not. This is secondary consideration with him in that he feels the U.S. eventually will withdraw its military forces from Europe.



Many observers think that if Britain would give up its nuclear force and put it under NATO command, de Gaulle would be willing to consider giving up his own nuclear force.

But time is running short. In a year or two, France will have weapons and she may have difficulty persuading the rest of Britain on nuclear strategy.

This could lead to conflict between NATO countries impossible to close.

VACCINE IS SUCCESS

Reasons to Doubt or Accept Red Story of Gagarin Trip Listed by Science Writer

Ever since Russia reported that Yuri Gagarin had orbited the earth, there have been some doubters who refuse to accept the Russian announcement as fact. This article gives the basis for their skepticism and presents also the views of others who have no reason for rejecting the Soviet stories.

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—Did Yuri Gagarin really make the first trip to become the world's first spaceman?

U.S. officials and scientists say they are sure he did, and on that basis President Kennedy called congratulations.

But skeptics raise a chorus of doubts, and cite numerous reasons.

Moscow itself could stifle all skepticism, by supplying records, witnesses, and details of the flight to the Federation Aeronautique Internationale in Paris which substantiate a revolution and space world records.

On April 12, Moscow telegraphed the FIA the names of the pilot and spaceship, the launch, and said a space flight had been made.

The telegram gave no other details but did say supporting evidence would be forwarded "subsequently." Some time later, two months and eight days, said an FIA official who asked not to be quoted by name.

But to have claims authenticated, says aviation expert, Moscow would have to describe the model and type of space ship, the engine or engines, specia; apparatus aboard, the landing controls, and the date, time, and place of lift-off and landing.

It is debatable whether Moscow which has kept such information secret, will put on an open record now.

Did Gagarin go when he's said to have gone?

Checking of all available information, including that from Soviet radio stations, leaves no doubt the flight was made, says James Webb, director of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

Webb discounts talk on such points as these:

1. The landing:

Reports indicate whether Gagarin parachuted from his capsule, or landed with the capsule. Wednesday he said he returned to earth in his spaceship. The landing issue is not pinpointed.

In a news conference several weeks ago, Gagarin did not clarify how he landed, saying only that the parachute technique is one of several landing techniques developed for use in the landing "demonstrated the success of all systems developed for the flight.

On April 24, Izvestia said he would land in the capsule's cabin, or could catapult from it by parachute at an altitude of seven miles.

2. Some London newspapers' reports of conversations with Gagarin's flight was made several days before launch. The London Sunday Pictorial, London Daily Worker, said an astronaut had orbited the earth three times April 9, but it was under medical care.

But Dr. Hugh Dryden, NASA deputy director, said: "We would have known if they had a satellite in orbit (around the 12) and they did not."

3. Some reports Russians would never talk about a dangerous flight while it was in progress, for fear of embarrassing failure, so Gagarin must have been a ground, when he reported to be in flight.

A counter - argument is the Russians would never gamble on being caught in a hoax which could be exposed so easily by tracking the U.S. tracking system, of which the Russians are well aware. And the launches with dogs beforehand have given them confidence in recovering Gagarin.

4. Gagarin said, he says, that he saw no stars in space. But a Soviet rocket chief, A. A. Blagonravov, at a space meeting in Italy, said Gagarin's ship had no portholes. Later, he retracted saying that Russians had several types of spaceships, and he wasn't sure which had been used.

WORKERS STRIKE

SARNIA (CP)—Employees of the Guildwood Inn and Motor Hotel at nearby Point Edward went on strike Thursday night in a contract dispute. A total of 47 employees are members of Local 448, Wholesale, Retail, Restaurant and Motel Employees Union, which has led negotiations for a new agreement.

PC Senator Defends Bill On Tariffs

OTTAWA (CP)—A Conservative senator Thursday defended the government's tariff legislation as a "courageous and realistic" to "create more and better employment opportunities in Canada."

On this basis, said Senator John A. Buchanan (PC — Alberta), the legislation should receive unanimous Senate support without amendment or restriction.

"If it is not effective, then the government must accept the responsibility for its failure and will have to answer for it later."

He spoke as the Senate resumed its debate on the controversial amendments to the Tariff Act to reduce imported goods of a class or kind made in Canada and to give the minister of national revenue power to make arbitrary decisions on certain tariff matters.

Senator T. D'Arcy Leonard (L — Ontario) contended that the decision to give this power to amend the bill to remove the provision of arbitrary power of efficiency and equity by private enterprise, and for which it has been denounced and stated need."

It is opposed to controls other than those which are "clearly necessary and demonstrably necessary to protect the public."

TAXES ARE HIDDEN

A resolution said many parents are finding the high costs of school text books a distinct burden. The minister of education was asked to provide the situation with the aim of reducing costs and removing the many unsatisfactory features involved in the present multiplicity of approved texts.

Recognition was given to the desirability of automobile driver training, but opposition was expressed to any extension of driver training into regular school hours.

A motion from North Bay, seconded by Cochrane, asks the government to undertake a study of government spending with the object of reducing administration costs.

A Chatham resolution, seconded by Sarnia, urges municipalities not to grant bonuses or to levy sales taxes.

A colorful and attractive motorcycle license plate incorporating a slogan recognized as a symbol of Ontario was suggested in line with recommendations from North Bay and Niagara Falls.

Kitchener's suggestion the Ontario government will be asked to make representations to other provincial governments in order to reach agreement on a single, all-Canada liability card" for motorists. This would indicate a motorist's financial responsibility wherever he might be in Canada, in case of accident, and relieve the threat of impounding of his car.

GOT NO SUPPORT

The Kearney and District chamber lost an effort to get endorsation for further measures for the control of wolves.

The resolution asked the department of lands and, forests to take immediate action to drastically reduce the wolf population by starting shooting from aircraft or other means.

Delegates, however, accepted advice that not enough is known about the place of the wolf in the wildlife scheme. It was felt that more scientific research is needed.

Under a resolution from Oakville-Trafalgar, seconded by Belleville, the provincial government would be asked to make municipalities licensing power over transient sales men soliciting subscriptions for magazines, books and other printed matter.

Another resolution asked for provincial legislation allowing a school board to reimburse a parent for personal expenses while on school board business.

EXPANDS BOARD

When a delegate commented that some boards are already much too unwieldy, a spokesman for the resolution replied: "Yes, and they are headed for much bigger ones."

Under a North Bay resolution the government will be asked to undertake a comprehensive study of ambulance services throughout the province with the object of ensuring prompt and efficient ambulance service in hospitals is provided for victims of highway accidents.

W. A. Young, of North Bay, said there have been cases of persons being injured by lying by the side of highways for two or three hours in extremely cold weather, before they were picked up.

Greed for Almighty Dollar Sucking Steam Out of U.S. Space Program Board Told

NEW YORK (AP)—Greed for the dollar has been sucking steam out of the United States space program and President Kennedy means to do something about it.

Workers wallowing in wealth, suppliers living like potentates —that is the picture emerging from a Senate investigation of the U.S. missile-space program.

Because of mismanagement, the program is still confused but it is not disputed that 327 strikes occurred in 28 missile bases, 10 of them at Cape Canaveral alone. Also questioned is the speed of time figured at 162,872 man-days in 4½ years.

"It's revolting," said Senator John L. McClellan, the Arkansas Democrat who is chairman of the Senate subcommittee hearings which opened April 25 and adjourned Tuesday.

Col. Robert Greech, chief of Cape Canaveral's test site operations, swore many wildcat strikes were called openly to obtain more payment or overtime that swelled wages of plumbers and electricians to as high as $400 a week.

In contrast, the top U.S. missile scientist, Wernher von Braun, gets $404 a week. Space-man Alan Shepard gets navy commander's salary plus $250 a month flying allowance. On this basis, extra allowance for his pioneer space voyage was about $16.

C. J. Haggerty, president of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, said Wednesday the hearings were one-sided and it was unfair to charge that labor troubles delayed and pushed up costs of the program.

The government could have prevented labor disturbances by advance planning such as was done in the Second World War, he said, blaming delays on design changes and other non-labor factors.

Labor Secretary Arthur Goldberg is in Florida for a series of conferences with unions, contractors and labor-relations experts to work out a new plan to be issued by Kennedy. He has pleased with labor and management to get together in a "responsible, consistent effort."

So vast are the sums allotted and so slipshod the methods, said McClellan, that sent only three successful and military practices should be investigated.

Maj. - Gen. William T. Thurman, air force deputy chief of staff for materiel, said the ICBM program involves outlays of $12,000,000,000 for research, development, testing, production and base-building for the Atlas, Titan and Minuteman missiles.

B. G. Macnab, operations chief at Canaveral for Convair in production of the Atlas—the missile scheduled to launch the first U.S. astronaut into orbit—testified the whole space-missile program is six months behind.

Macnab said greed for "the almighty dollar," but not Communist subversion, caused the strikes and slowdowns. Production rates at Canaveral were only about 40 per cent those of industry in non - government projects.

Construction executive Jack Vanderwood said that by "deliberate dawdling" pipefitters collected $7.50 an hour overtime pay, above their regular wages, and also $2.50 a day for "travel pay, whether they lived across the street or 40 miles away.

Average wage of a pipefitter —a journeyman pipefitter is entitled to $2.70 an hour basic—comes to $20,000 a year, Vanderwood said. He said if workmen were assigned to a job, one would be foreman, with a 25-cent hourly bonus.

Understanding of Nature, Necessity, of Business Profits Needed C of C Told

WINDSOR (CP) — Need for greater public understanding of the nature and necessity of business profits, and the constant risk of losses, was urged Thursday by the Ontario Chamber of Commerce in a statement of its "basic philosophies."

It adds:

"Business profits not only provide a return on investment but are essential for business progress, economic expansion and government revenue. Profits also provide a margin of safety to protect the wage earner, the consumer, and the economy generally."

The statement was contained in a list of policy declarations approved at the annual meeting which opened Wednesday and ends today.

The "basic philosophy" statement also expressed the chamber's belief in an economy "basically based on private initiative and individual enterprise" and said "public ownership should be restricted to fields that cannot be efficiently and adequately by private enterprise, and for which there is a clear demonstrated and stated need."

It is opposed to controls other than those which are "clearly necessary and demonstrably necessary to protect the public."

House Committee to Hear Controversy Over A-Power

OTTAWA (CP) — A controversy over whether Canada is on the right track in its program to develop economic atomic power production is scheduled before the Commons research committee next week.

A major witness will be Lionel Boyd, a Montreal engineer who has been strongly critical of the Canadian approach. He has been quoted as saying millions of dollars.

J. L. Gray, president of Atomic Energy Canada Limited, the Crown company behind the CANDU reactor project, and Dr. Boyd's criticisms. He has described statements of Dr. Boyd as ridiculous, outright admissions of ignorance and statements to mislead.

Committee Chairman J. W. Murphy (PC — Middlesex East) Mr. Boyd will appear before the committee Tuesday. Officials of the A-power program will be heard later, including John Foster, director of research and planning for the British Columbia Electric Company Limited.

The controversy revolves around the decision of Atomic Energy of Canada to use natural uranium as a fuel in power plants and heavy water to make the fission process possible and to develop the heat from the reactor to raise steam to drive electric generators.

EXPLOSION IS SITE

This approach is being followed in an experimental atomic power plant at Rolphton, 150 miles northwest of Ottawa, on the Ottawa River, a full-scale nuclear plant at Douglas Point on the Bruce peninsula on Lake Huron between Port Elgin and Kincardine.

Mr. Gray told the committee only last week that Atomic Energy of Canada is convinced than ever that the Canadian approach to economic nuclear power is the right one for Canada. He says this approach will make nuclear power economic in Canada and that other countries are expressing an increasing interest in the system.

Mr. Boyd said in Ottawa in October, 1959 — and has made

Royal York Strikers Lose Round in Court

TORONTO (CP) — Striking employees of the Royal York Hotel lost a round in court Thursday but showed up their case in the process.

Chief Justice J. C. McRuer of the Ontario High Court of Justice turned down their claim that they could picket at the hotel and threaten a street from the city's Union Station to the hotel.

But the Hotel and Club Employees' Union (CLC) contended the tunnel was public property and subject to picketing under the rudge ruled against it. The hotel had obtained an injunction strikebreakers through the tunnel and under picket lines, and the union also contended it has been smuggling in supplies.

But the union, with 1,200 Royal York employees have been on strike since May 1, turned to the Ontario Industry and labor board in another attack.

Vice-President R. R. Johnstone of the union asked the board to investigate whether the management of the CPR hotel is breaking the law by working the present short staff overtime.

Hotel Manager Angus MacKinnon said Wednesday some newly recruited workers have been working up to 80 hours a week. Mr. MacKinnon claimed this violated provincial labor law. He said management is employer from working an employee more than 100 hours in a three a year without a permit.

similar statements since — that unless the heavy water-natural uranium approach is changed to one he proposes millions of dollars will go down the drain. He said the program caters more to the desire of scientists than to economic facts of life.

Under Mr. Boyd's proposals helium gas and graphite would be used in place of heavy water, the fuel would be of enriched uranium and carbide.

"I know. Like sardines," Ann nodded, and you get a seat later?"

"After some stops," replied her husband. "It was funny the way the numbers went. Each stop precisely half the people got out and five got in. And when we pulled in to my station there were only thirteen in the coach."

How many exactly were in his coach when they started?

Knowing Is Not Enough

By ROY L. SMITH

It is a common thing to hear juvenile judges, the police, social workers, and others say, "Juvenile delinquency is, actually, a matter of adult delinquency." If the parents of America would teach their children correctly, they would not get into trouble." And there is, of course, much to be said for that theory.

At the same time it must be admitted that it is not enough to know the truth. Many a car has gone off into the ditch that the driver knew was there.

Someone has said that if education and knowledge were enough, there wouldn't be an alcoholic physician in the land, nor a drug addict anywhere in the medical profession. But knowing the dangers of alcohol and drugs is not enough.

BEGIN WITH FATHERS

If the American home is to serve the nation well, and if it is to produce good citizens, let's begin with the head of the house —father, himself. Let's admit that he do and be more than an advisor at the breakfast table. He who boasts to his sons of the way he was "able to talk the cop out of a ticket" is inspiring his son to "talk the cop out of it" and then do it again when the next chance comes.

Or again, the father who drinks at his own private bar is offering his son his first lessons in alcohol addiction. "I don't know what in the world went wrong," moaned one such father to his pastor. "I always take him to drink like a gentleman." But when the family's name was splashed all over the front pages in connection with a community scandal, it was too late to reverse the case.

WHEN GRADUATES GET OUT

The head of a great school of business administration was talking to a gathering of highly rated business executives. "We are sending you every spring a fine class of highly idealized youngster," he said. "We have taught them business ethics, honesty in administration, and the meaning of honor and integrity. But from the first hour they are in your employ you begin telling them that there are shortcuts, sharp practices, and quick profits. And within the space of six months the finest we have given them has been corroded away."

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for May 14: DISCIPLINE IN THE HOME." 1 Kings 3: 1-7, Proverbs 4: 1-4; 10:1; 13:24; 20:11; 22:3; 29:17; Ephesians 6: 1-4.

Perhaps the educator was putting it too baldly; it may have been that the lesson lasted longer than six months, and there may have been occasions all offices in which the erosion did not take place so brazenly. But at least this much is true; the person who holds out against the pressure of evil must have more than an education. He must have inner powers of resistance to match the convictions that have been born inside the class rooms.

WE MUST MOVE THAN KNOW

The ancient Hebrew wisdom discovered many truths and put them into graphic words and phrases, but they made one fatal mistake. They assumed that if a man knew the right and the better way he would walk therein. But experience has taught that life is not that easily as simple as that.

Most of us go every day, doing things we know we ought not to do—useless things, wrong things, destructive things. The Apostle Paul once said that he found himself doing the things he ought not to do, at the very moment that he was intending to do better things.

At a recent gathering of scientists who were investigating the relationship between cigarets and cancer, it was noted by one newspaper reporter that a considerable number of those present were smoking, and when the report was finally released, by which smoking was judged to be one of the first causes of cancer, almost all the smokers voted in the affirmative.

Fortunately, the percentage of preachers who go wrong is relatively small in comparison with the total number of clergymen in America. But not one has ever become involved in a scandal without knowing better.

Education is greatly to be desired, but in and of itself it is not enough.

Says Smoking Creates Grounds For Cancer

MOSCOW (AP) — Nikolai Dolkhin, Soviety Academy of Medicine president and a cancer specialist, said Wednesday there is sufficient connection between tobacco and cancer and heart disease to justify completely giving up smoking.

"We realize here that smoking does not directly cause cancer," he told a press conference. "Smoking creates favorable grounds for development of pathological conditions, including cancer."

Blokhin said his findings, based mainly on research by Western scientists, also give good grounds for studying the connection between industrial smoke in cities with cancer and heart ailments.

Sir Beverley Baxter Would Like to Leave Politics After 25 Years in Britain

By DAVID OANCIA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—After a quarter of a century as a Conservative member of the mother of parliaments, Canadian-born Sir Beverley Baxter would like to retire.

At 71, he looks forward to easing the pace of a career that started in Britain with the First World War, led through a turbulent period on Fleet Street and finally brought him to the House of Commons.

He walked along the terrace edging the smoky Parliament Buildings, the great stone structure that houses the chambers where commoners and lords debate and pass the laws of Britain.

"It won't be easy to say I'll be finished with all this," he said.

He had hoped to be able to drop out as a candidate in the next general election, expected in the next two or three years and use the time to work on books dealing with his years in British journalism and politics. But his constituents have other ideas.

"I still dream of retiring," he said, settling down to an interview in a dark, oak-panelled bar at the House of Commons.

"But I now have the pleasing embarrassment of knowing that my local constituency association refuses to accept my resignation as candidate in the next election."

NOTE FROM BEAVERBROOK

He still hasn't decided what to do next.

In the lengthy conversation, Sir Beverley spent little time discussing his own background. He devoted most of the time to talking about the giants with whom he had been associated in one way or another during more than four decades of life in Britain.

The list was impressive. It included Lord Beaverbrook, the New Brunswicker who publishes The Daily Express; former prime minister Neville Chamberlain and Canadian publisher Roy Thomson.

Sir Beverley's life has been inextricably linked with events shaped or influenced by Beaverbrook whom he first met after the First World War on a ship going to Canada. Baxter, who was proud of his voice, joined the band to sing. The audience did not call for an encore.

Beaverbrook, who had started along the path that has made him one of Britain's press barons, scribbled a note:

"My dear Bax: I have just heard you sing. More than ever I advise you to take up journalism. Beaverbrook."

HEADED EXPRESS

In 1920, Baxter joined The Daily Express. He rose to become editor of The Sunday Express, managing editor and later editor-in-chief of The Daily Express. His break with the newspaper came in 1933, after Beaverbrook, brought in Arthur Christiansen, an unknown 25-year - old journalist, and gave him more and more authority.

Baxter, the Toronto boy who fell in love with Britain during the war, worked the next two years as a public relations adviser to a motion picture company, a job that made it possible for him to keep in touch with events on Fleet Street.

He still has words of praise and blame for Beaverbrook and his newspapers.

"The Beaver's the best judge of unproved talent I've ever known," he said. "He judged a person's temperament, personality and intellect. He had no great respect for experience. A gifted man can always learn technique."

The papers, he felt, tend to criticize and condemn too much. Sir Beverley made clear he prefers Beaverbrook's political campaigning to Roy Thomson's determination to leave running of newsrooms to editors.

"Thomson hasn't yet demonstrated anything that one can describe as his own type of journalism," said Sir Beverley of the Canadian who now controls a sizable portion of the British press.

"He has no special course that I know of to espouse. But he's a very important figure—always friendly and courteous."

DEFENDS CHAMBERLAIN

Sir Beverley was first elected to Parliament in 1935 to represent the Wood Green constituency until he moved to Southgate 16 years later. For most of this period he continued to write.

His column, London Letter, appeared in Canadian, Indian, Australian and Pakistani publications. He did less and less work for British newspapers.

"Of course, when you're elected to Parliament you cease to be as good a journalist as you once were," he said. "You can't be very well be critical of your own leaders."

He still is a great defender of Neville Chamberlain, who signed the Munich pact with Hitler in 1938.

"Chamberlain agreed to the most dreadful things, but he bought a year's delay. That gave us time to put our planes into the air."

The division bells clanged for a vote in the chamber and Baxter rose.

"I've lived through a terrible era," he said as he walked down the corridor to the Commons.

"I've had a seat in the front row to see events including the Hitler war, the fall and rise of Churchill and countless other occurrences.

"No," he said once more as he turned to the chamber, "I won't be easy to say goodbye to all this."

LAUDS CUBAN ECONOMY

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—Prime Minister Fidel Castro says the "Cuban economy is in better shape than that of any other Latin American country." Havana radio said Castro spoke Wednesday to a group from Brazil and mentioned that tobacco production had jumped from a $94,000,000 level to a $70,000,000 level during the revolution.

BLAME VARIOUS CAUSES

PORT STANLEY (CP)—Frank Fugard, 74, died in hospital Wednesday, a few hours after the tractor he was driving plunged from a dock into 36 feet of water. Three men formed a human chain to pull him out. Mr. Fugard was at first thought to have suffered a heart attack before the tractor rolled off the dock. An autopsy revealed, however, that he died from shock, inhalation of water and other causes.

New Senate Bill

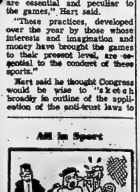
Would Cover Pro Sports

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bill which would declare professional football, baseball, hockey and basketball subject to anti-trust laws but legalize many present practices was introduced in the Senate Thursday by Senator Philip A. Hart (Dem. Mich.).

Hart said the measure would not affect such long-established customs as player draft, assignment of contracts and territorial agreements which have been questioned as possible anti-trust violations.

He said the bill, co-sponsored by Senator Kenneth B. Keating (Rep.-N.Y.), is an effort to resolve inequalities and confusion which have arisen in application of the anti-trust laws to professional team sports.

He noted in a statement for the Senate that the United States Supreme Court has ruled that professional baseball is no subject of the anti-trust law but that professional football is.



"This bill would affirm our intention that anti-trust laws apply to professional sports, but exempting the agreements and practices of baseball, football, hockey and basketball which are essential and peculiar to the games," Hart said.

"Those practices, developed over the year by those whose interests and imagination and money have brought the games to their present levels, are essential to the conduct of these sports."

Hart said he thought Congress would be wise to "sketch broadly the outline of the application of the anti-trust laws to team sports and to establish by law for the several team sports."

Hart is a former director of the Detroit Tigers baseball club and the Detroit Lions football company.

Mutuel Clerk "Stuck" With $968 Ticket

TORONTO (CP) — A parimutuel clerk at Old Woodbine race track was "stuck" with a $10 straight ticket on Son Ator in Thursday's third race. When Son Ator won, the ticket was worth $968.00.

The clerk, selling tickets at a $10 straight window, punched out a "number six" ticket by mistake when a customer asked for another number. The customer refused to accept the wrong ticket so the clerk, reluctantly put it into his pocket and put his own $10 bill into the cash-box.

It was the only $10 ticket sold on Son Ator, which paid $193.00, $45.80 and $14.40 for $2 in winning the first race of his career.

The pari - mutuel clerk requested reporters to withhold his name. Possibly, his bank manager might demand immediate payment of his current overdraft.

It helped him equal Phil Palmer and National Amateur king Deane Beman, who came in early with 68s.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARTER, Sports Editor

The Belleville Kemmers, city entry in the 1961 Lakeshore Intermediate Baseball League and aspirant for a second consecutive all-Ontario junior "A" OBA championship, got their seasonal baptism of fire on Sunday. They travel to Marrilton, a junior baseball jewel in the crown of the Niagara Peninsula, for the first of a home-and-home pre-season exhibition series.

The Marrilton youngsters are the 1960 OBA junior "B" champions and piled up an enviable record last year on their march to the title. They play the return game of the series at the Fair Grounds here a week from Sunday.

Manager Ken Soden is carefully confident that his charges can repeat their successful titular drive of a year ago. He is well pleased, he says, with training camp practice, and pre-season practice indicate another well-balanced organization to represent the city.

The Kemmers are linked from last season with the exception of Jackie Elliott, Jr., who was nipped by Father Time as far as junior activities are concerned. However, Soden and his assistants in "cap" over the fact that Gordie Vaughan and Don Masters have returned to the club.

Vaughan and Masters will give the Kemmers a 4-man pitching corps that should equal any junior "A" mound brigade in the province. The others are last year's ace Larry Soden and Pat Assalstine.

Masters will get the nod to start against Marrilton on Sunday, but Manager Soden plans to give his entire mound staff a workout in both exhibition tilts. He has versatility in his hurlers too. Soden and Assalstine can start at third when not pitching and Vaughan is already a tried outfielder.

The team is rapidly rounding into shape. Practices this week have been a sharpening in fielding and the hitters have been pounding the ball long and far. The pitchers need work, but Soden thinks this will adjust itself.

"The whole team appears to be stronger than last year," he said. "A feature of this week's workouts has been the hitting of Bob Fullwell and Gary Gaynor. Catcher Lenny Marody has been blasting the long ones and appears headed for a good season with the club."

Rickey Locke is back with the club and will likely mans a berth in the outfield. At the moment it looks like Hunter, Follwell and Locke as the starting outfield with Marody behind the plate. Soden will hold down first with Soden at short, Gary Gaynor at second and Asselstine at third. This is only a tentative line-up.

The club's hitting power was one of its 1960 greatest assets. And it had that power quality of a staff of pitchers who can clout the ball. The power has not been weakened this year, if anything, it could be better.

As has been mentioned the Kemmers perhaps are the only junior baseball club in Ontario which boasts a "farm" team. A Kemmer entry will play in the South Hastings League, rounding out a six-club circuit for that fine organization.

However nine players of the "parent" club will not be eligible to play with the county team. These are Larry Soden, Marody, Vaughan, Gayer, Assalting, Moxon, Hunter, Follwell and Locke. This list, however, is subject to change before the season opens.

A chartered bus is leaving the city on Sunday morning at 8:30 for the trip to the Niagara Peninsula and there are some seats available. Anyone wishing to make the trip should contact Mr. Soden's office immediately.

The Kemmers open the Lakeshore League season on May 23, playing Orono on the latter's diamond.

The Hardie Hunn Memorial Fund is slowly growing, but more donations are needed. Please send yours to the sports editor of this newspaper.

Lary Gets Mound Call

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Detroit, having won eight out of nine on the road so far, starts an 18-game tour with a 7:15 game tied in the American league race tonight when they open a four-game series at New York against the second-place Yankees.

If this grand circuit trip is to last the Tigers' pennant potential, they couldn't have picked a better place to start. The defending champion Yankees have won six in a row, at home since an Opening defeat by Minnesota Twins.

In the National League, where San Francisco Giants lead Los Angeles Dodgers by one game, the Giants cover a brief home stand against Milwaukee Braves and southpaw Warren Spahn. The last time Spahn (3-2) faced the Giants he pitched a 2-hitter, Righthander Sad Sam Jones (3-1), whose lone loss came in that masterpiece by Spahn two weeks ago, goes for San Francisco.

Righthander Frank Lary will start choice against the Yankees and righthander Art Ditmar (3-1). Lary (4-1) has the best winning percentage (.750) any AL pitcher ever has managed to run up against the Yankees. He's 24-8 lifetime against New York's 1-0 this year.

MISSED TURN

Lary's magic against New York set the Detroit's seventh defeat in 25 games. Manager Bob Schaefing held back his ace Tuesday, giving bullpen man Bill Fischer Lary's regular place in the rotation, and Washington Senators belted the Tigers 12-6.

Baltimore Orioles defeated Minnesota 8-7 in the day's only other major league game.

The Senators scored six runs in the first inning at Detroit with Billy Klaus, who was hitting .095, socking the second grand-slam home run of his career. Gene Woodling and Dale Long also homered for the Senators. Woodling's two-run shot off reliever Hank Aguirre capped a four-run 7th inning and handed the victory to reliever Marty Kutyna (3-0). Ozzie Virgil hit a pinch homer for the Tigers, who blew a 3-0 lead behind Frank Lary (4-1).

Baltimore broke up a 2-2 tie at Minnesota with a five - run fifth, getting three on Jim Gentile's double. But it was a loaded bases walk by reliever Paul Giel in the eighth that gave the Orioles the run they needed. Camilo Pascual (3-3) lost his third in a row. Steve Barber (2-1) won with relief help from Hoyt Wilhelm. Bob Allscher homered for the twins.

The Tigers, with No. 2 hitter Al Kaline (.407) out because of a pulled leg muscle Thursday, have lost only two of their last nine games. They split a two-game series with the Yankees at Detroit, when New York belted their winning string at eight games.

Whips Folley, Wants Patterson

Argentine Looms As Challenger

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Argentina's newest boxing hero, Alejandro Lavorante, spectacular knockout conqueror of third-ranked heavyweight Zora Folley, set his sights on a single target today.

As interpreted by his American manager, Pinky George, and hailed down from the original 2,000 words, Lavorante said:

"We want Floyd Patterson."

It was only two minutes after the handsome 26-year-old Argentine had executed Folley in 25 seconds of the seventh round Thursday night, that George Parnassus had an announcement regarding the challenge to the heavyweight world champion:

"I wired Patterson $350,000 to meet the winner of this fight. I am upping it to a minimum of $500,000 to meet Lavorante for the title here."

In Olympic Auditorium a discomfited Folley from Chandler, Ariz., had little to say, it was his second knockout in a row. Sonny Liston stopped him in three rounds several months ago.

SMACKS TO JAW

It took six consecutive straight rights to the jaw in the sixth round to start the Argentine on upset victory road.

The first time, Folley got up at the mandatory count of eight. It took just one more straight right to the same spot to send him down on the seat of both his pants against the ropes. At four the bell saved him.

Folley came out for the seven obviously gunshy. He missed a timid right and Lavorante's patented right to the jaw put him down for eight.

At this juncture Zora's manager, Bill Swift, ducked under the ropes, gave the stricken Folley a quick whiff of smelling salts and bowed hurriedly back to the corner. The quick trip will cost Swift a $25 fine.

The smelling salts didn't help say how. Folley got up but still another perfectly-timed right to the jaw floored him for the fourth and final time.

Referee George Latka didn't bother to count.

WERE TOO CAUTIOUS

For five rounds it had been a bore. Both were overly cautious. The crowd of 8,000 which paid an estimated $18,000, booed and jeered constantly.

But the electrifying finish added that. Scores of Alejandro's Latin admirers stormed into the ring and there was a near-riot before they be cleared out. It was his 11th knockout and 13th victory in a brief career of 14 professional fights.

Lavorante weighed 206 and Folley 200.

Maple Leafs Still on The Skids

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The big question in the International League today: What is wrong with Toronto's Maple Leafs, the triple-A baseball circuit's defending champions?

The Leafs have lost 19 of their last 21 games and now have dropped seven in a row. They bowed to Buffalo's Bisons Thursday night 2-0 and are struggling to stay out of the league basement, currently occupied by Syracuse.

While the Leafs were still stumbling around, San Juan and Richmond had to postpone their bids for first place because of rain. Rochester downed Syracuse 6-4, Columbus, out front by six percentage points, and Jersey City were not scheduled.

PITCHING WAS WILD

Toronto lost to Buffalo on wild pitches by lefty Bob Smith. The Bisons picked up the only two they really needed in the third when Smith gave up two walks with a double by Ted Savage sandwiched between them. Then came the first wild pitch, forcing in the first run. Smith's second wild pitch came in the fifth after Tony Curry had tripled.

Dick Ricketts allowed Toronto eight hits to make his record 3-0. Smith is now 1-3.

Johnny Anderson (3-1) mowed down 15 in succession for Rochester, giving up only a home run to Joe Altobelli, before Syracuse knocked him out in the seventh. By then, though, the Red Wings had a 6-1 advantage. Relievers Dick Loehne and Artie Kay mopped up. The Wings exploded for four runs in the fifth on two walks, a wild pitch, a pair of singles and a sacrifice fly.

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four Football League announced Thursday the signing of Charlie Uhrich, former first-string defensive tackle in the National Football League.

Schoolboy Turns in Fine Effort

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Jim Alton Thursday turned in the best sprint double by a Canadian schoolboy.

The South Collegiate speed merchant equalled both the Canadian high school spring records of 9.9 in the 100 yards and 21.9 in the 220 to steal the spotlight for the second straight afternoon in the London and District Conference track and field championships.

On Tuesday he ran 9.9 in the heats of the senior 100.

His 21.9 run with the aid of a wind at his back equals the present mark held by Canadian Olympian Harry Jerome set in 1959 while attending North Vancouver High. The 5-8 clocking is held jointly by four boys.

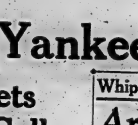
None will go into the Canadian record book although they will stand as conference records. Canadian records must be set with the assistance of a wind gauge.

Aussie Nag No Fluke As Racer

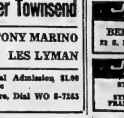
YONKERS, N.Y. (AP)—The experts scoffed last week when Appeal, an Australian horse, beat Bye Bye Byrd of the United States in the $50,000 International Pace at Yonkers Raceway.

"Just a fluke, racing luck," said those who had bet Bye Bye down to 3 to 5.

Well, the big eight-year - old gelding did it again Thursday night in the $62,500 Good Time Pace. It was no fluke, either.



In contrast to a week ago when he came from behind with a six-inch drive, driver Bert Alley took Appeal to the front early. He Stayed there the rest of the way in the 1¼-mile event before 26,053 fans.



Appeal finished three quarters of a length ahead of New Zealand's False Step, a late starter at 14-1, while Bye Bye Byrd, 4-5 odds-on favorite, was third.

Appeal, who has won $56,400 in two races in the U.S., was timed in 2:04 4-5 with a 30 4-5 last quarter after going the mile in 2:04. He paid $13.20, $7.20 and $3.60 for $2 win, place and show tickets. False Step returned $8.20 and $4.80. Bye Bye Byrd paid $2.20.

Unless New Act Passes

Says Champ Should Fight Liston

WASHINGTON (AP)—Senator Estes Kefauver told heavyweight boxing champion Floyd Patterson today "it would be unconscionable" to deny No. 1 challenger Sonny Liston a crack at the world title if the United States Congress fails to pass an anti-racketeering law.

Liston has hired a new manager to replace Joseph (Pap) Barone, whom Kefauver has denounced as a front for underworld figures.

Patterson, who had said he would never fight Liston unless Liston broke with Barone, then announced he would ask Kefauver's Senate anti-trust and monopoly subcommittee to say whether it approves of Liston's new manager, George Katz.

Without waiting for the request to arrive, Kefauver addressed a letter to Patterson rejecting the idea and made it public the text.

"The licensing of boxing personnel is presently within the exclusive jurisdiction of state and local athletic commissions," Kefauver wrote. "Neither this subcommittee nor any federal agency has the authority to intrude in this area."

Kefauver has introduced an anti-racketeering bill in Congress on the basis of evidence dug up by the subcommittee that boxers have wielded vast monopolistic powers over U.S. boxing.

It would create the post of federal boxing commissioner who would have power to license fighters, managers, matchmakers and promoters, and fancy licenses to those with underworld connections.

"If this bill is enacted into law I would think that the commissioner's first order of business would be to examine Mr. Liston's manager with a fine-tooth comb," Kefauver said.

Frost Likes Social Side Of Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost said Thursday he was more concerned with the social aspects of horse racing and betting than with the revenue it could produce.

"I think the real purposes of race-track betting is to assist people to get out and have a enjoyable afternoon at the track," he said at a press conference in answer to questions about whether he would favor off - track parlors linked with pari-mutuel systems.

Mr. Frost did not reject the idea of betting parlors, but he said he would prefer some other way to put bookmakers out of business.

There have been unverified reports here that the Jockey Club (of Ontario) has been considering setting up downtown betting shops for the Old and New Woodbine tracks here and the Fort Erie Track, which it operates. Club officials have denied these reports.

American Hoopsters Liked Russ

NEW YORK (AP) — Russian basketball is improving. Russian fans appreciate talented play. Yet Russians hear little about such things as Cmdr. Alan Shepard's space flight.

Those are a few impressions gleaned from conversations with members of the United States men and women's basketball teams just returned from a tour of Russia.

The U.S. men won eight straight here on the tour for a record. Each team won another game in Stockholm on the way home.

"They seem to be improved, better than the team I played against in 1956," said Jim Pranica, former Dartmouth ace who now plays with Akron, Ohio, of the NBL. "They are aggressive and strong rebounders.

"The pros treated us wonderfully well. We never were approached about our political views. They seemed to appreciate good basketball. Every game was a sellout except the ones we played in a big outdoor arena. We heard very little about the space shoot. It is difficult to get news over there. Papers were so stale."

Coach Harley Redl of the girls' team said the Russian girls' game emphasized defence. "They play man-to - man and switch," he said. "They wouldn't let you shoot but foul first. In international rules, just like boy's rules, nobody ever calls a foul on offence. You just blast right over them. The men learned that quicker than the girls.

"We didn't run into any anti-American demonstrations. We were welcomed everywhere we went."

WANTS WELTER CROWN

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Duilio Loi not only expects to defend his world junior welterweight boxing title in Milan but plans to go after New Yorker Emile Griffith's welterweight title. Loi's manager said Thursday. Steve Klaus, manager of the veteran Italian, brushed off reports that Loi intended to retire.

Amateurs Ready to Go

DRAYTON VALLEY, Alta. (CP)—Light, early meals and plenty of rest were the orders of the day here at 6.30 top amateur boxers from across Canada settled down to wait for tonight's opening rounds of the 1961 Dominion amateur boxing championships.

Second round of the competition is scheduled for Saturday afternoon and the third and final round of bouts for Saturday night.

Light, scattered showers were not expected to dampen the enthusiasm of the town of the 1,500 community of 3,500, 70 miles southwest of Edmonton.

Among entries for the gold medals awarded winners are a Mexican team from British Columbia, including former United States national light heavyweight champion Lloyd Lindemeyer. The 17-member Alberta entry included 139-pound Rufus Coombs, 1961 provincial Golden Boy and Montreal-born Al Brazuk, defending Canadian featherweight champion from the RCAF station at Cold Lake, Alta.

Nova Scotia has four entries, all members of HMCS Stadacona boxing club in Halifax. Manitoba four, Quebec nine, and Ontario six.

The highly-rated Quebec boxers entered are 132-pound Marcel Belleroy

Aviation Progress Means Loss for Pacific Islands

By J.C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP) — The islands of the south Pacific are threatened with loss of a lifeline on which they have come to rely, as aviation progress means a tragic loss for them.

For years, Sunderlands flying boats of the Royal New Zealand Air Force have been a vital link between the tropical island groups of the South Seas and the outside world. Pacific islanders are gravely alarmed at the prospect of losing their service.

The Sunderland squadron, based in Fiji, is primarily charged with a reconnaissance and anti-submarine role in the defence of New Zealand and its northern approaches.

But the Sunderlands are already obsolete and are no longer hailed for hunting modern submarines. More modern aircraft equipped with the latest devices are required and replacement is already overdue.

MAIDS-OF-ALL-WORK

The flying boats have, in practice, been maids-of-all-work for thousands of square miles if the south Pacific. Thousands of tiny islands, dotted over this huge area, have reason to be grateful to the security they provided.

Once help took days or weeks to arrive by sea at some of these remote atolls in time of emergency. Now help can be summoned by flying boat in a matter of hours.

The Sunderlands have brought medical equipment, transported sick and injured, brought supplies to wrecked villages after hurricanes, found missing ships, rescued castaways, even taken police to check an incipient tribal war between villages.

From a civil point of view, flying boats are infinitely superior to land-based planes for this job. It would be utterly impossible to provide airstrips on each of the myriad islands from which calls might be received.

NO LONGER BUILT

But flying boats just are not available to replace the Sunderlands. Flying boats no longer are being built.

The New Zealand government is reluctantly coming to the conclusion that the only prospect is to choose land - based planes. Any aircraft ordered will take two years to deliver, so the Pacific islands will retain their link for that time.

Move Toward Christian Unity Growing

LONDON (AP) — Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, archbishop of Canterbury, told the House of Lords Wednesday night the the movement toward Christian unity is gathering speed.

The archbishop, spiritual head of the Church of England, spoke on a motion welcoming recent consultations among leaders of Christian churches and expressing trust "that this would lead to greater unity of Christian spirit."

In what may be his last speech in the House of Lords—he retires May 31 — Dr. Fisher said "unless faith fall us, nothing can stop it."

The Earl of Arran, opening the debate, said many Christians were perplexed and hindered in their faith by disputes and divisions among churches.

The Bishop of Southwell, Dr. F. R. Barry, said the Christian church ought to be the focus of unity, drawing people across frontiers of color, race, language and political belief into unity of spirit in a world torn by ideological differences.

"But it cannot, because the church is divided among itself," he said. "It cannot be a reconciling society until it becomes itself a reconciled society."

Jill and Lance Marriage Still Strong After a Year

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—The Jill St. John-Lance Reventlow marriage has passed the one - year mark against all odds-makers, the actress says.

"I don't believe that stuff about Hollywood being the same as any other town," she commented. "Marriages are shorter and oftener here, and I can see one reason why. Everyone seems so eager to break up a marriage."

"I firmly believe that columnists have revolving files that they bring out periodically. Jill and Lance ought to be fighting by now,' they figure, 'so let's run an item about it.'

"I had a magazine spread postponed two weeks because the editors had read we were splitting up. When I was in London, an old friend called me up for a date because he had heard Lance and I were separated. It was all over England."

And do they fight?

"Certainly," she replied. "We fight like cats and dogs. But that doesn't mean we're going to get a divorce. And we never fight in public, so nobody has any grounds for making rumors about us."

The fights can be on any subject. "Trouble is, Lance is so darned logical, he's hard to argue with," she added. "Now I'm using the same technique, and we end up glaring at each other."

All this is very normal, said Jill. At least as normal as the marriage of a millionaire and a movie actress can be.

One factor has contributed to their normalcy: Lance has given up sports car racing.

"He says I'm responsible, but I didn't really pressure him," Jill remarked. "He came to the decision himself, after watching a number of races last summer. In one of them, four drivers were killed. He realized as a husband he shouldn't take such risks."

AT THE PARK — John Goddard, the tough International Captain Tombola, stars in "Sniper's Ridge" with Destiny Cinemascope release, also starring Jack Cling, Dorothy Dunning and Doug Blair. Coming Sunday and Monday at the Park Theatre, Cinemascope presents "David and Goliath", in color starring Orson Welles as King Saul. Continuous show Saturday from 1.00 p.m.

Dangerous Mines Hidden In Field of Guest-Starring

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — There are dangerous mines hidden in the fertile fields of guest-starring on television programs, particularly in the variety shows.

Carol Channing, the comedienne with a gift of mimicry, has visited all around the circuit and has learned about the hard way.

"If I have my own show, I'll find me a writer or writers who I feel understand me and the way I work," she explained. "But if I'm a guest-star, I have the job of trying to get some body else's writers to produce material that I can work with. When I'm somebody else's show, I have to get this across not only to the writers, but to the show's wardrobe department, the hair-dresser, the directors and everybody else."

This is often difficult, Carol conceded, but she said it is sometimes suffers because of a widespread belief among writers that all television comics should be sarcastic, biting and capable.

"It never occurs to them that one could be naive, bewildered or fumbling in the fire-fooled blonde explained, "And it's difficult to walk up to them and try to explain yourself and your style."

Carol has found an ideal intermediary for the explaining job: Her husband, Charles Lowe, once a producer of the Burns and Allen Show.

"Don't think of Carol as big and tall," Lowe tells writers preparing for her guest - shots. "Think of her as tiny and fragile! She's the poor little matchgirl; only she's happy."

Miss Channing will be turning up Sunday night as Dinah Shore's guest star.

Police testified Wallington entered the hotel room of Mrs. Florence Bernadette Larsen Tuesday night and threatened her with a .45-calibre rifle. The rifle went off, the bullet entering the wall when Mrs. Larsen struggled.

Police said Wallington then struck the woman on the head three times with the butt of the rifle. He had been living with her, police said.

Astrological Forecast

Saturday, May 13

By CARROLL RIGHTER

General Tendencies: This is a Saturday to concentrate upon whatever chores and details face you that just have to be done. It is no day to take any sort of chances or you can really find yourself behind the eight ball — especially in whatever directions are stated as adverse in your own sign following. Avoid rampaging bull attitudes.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) —Do nothing that will jeopardize present security today, if you take a hand yourself, you can get real estate in proper repair at little expense, and get the results you desire. P.M. Set up a good budget system for your needs.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) —Refrain from giving those who irk you a piece of your mind today, but let a gentle word drive away wrath and fine philosophy that brings respect and makes others want to follow your example.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) —This is a day when you want to put necessary Saturday work aside and fly off somewhere and be truly extravagant, but you would regret it later, so be sure you carry through conscientiously with your duties. P.M. Relax happily in front of TV.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — Although others may seem to impose on you with their own problems when you already are quite burdened with your own, be patient and know that God only tests you to the degree and strength of your mind power. Be of service graciously.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21)—This day is best suited to private planning for any changes you want to make in career or civic affairs, but is not the right time to upset any present conditions. Get your credit higher, however, and be loyal to higher-ups.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)—There are many new outlets available to you now that will be lucrative, so stop complaining and show your mentors that you are on the beam by getting all of your affairs in order. Get valuable information from your paper, too.

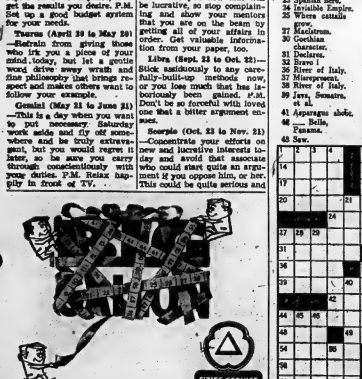
Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Stick assiduously to any carefully-built-up methods now, or you lose much that has laboriously been gained. P.M. Don't be so forceful with loved one that a bitter argument ensues.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) —Concentrate your efforts on new and lucrative interests today and avoid that associate who could start quite an argument if you oppose him, or her. This could be quite serious and you cannot afford to take any chances.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Handle all those accumulated duties in a most diligent and patient manner now. Don't become frustrated and bang things about, or you could ruin expensive items impossible to replace. P.M. Take health treatments you need.

Capricorn (Dec. 23 to Jan. 20) — You can have a happy time today as you prefer, but it is imperative you do not squander your savings or act in some unorthodox fashion with others. Be temperate and economical and you find this to be a delightful day, evening.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — Every opportunity is yours now to get that myrain of small chores out of the way efficiently. Don't become irritated with petulant close tie, since he, or she, may not be feeling very well. Be understanding. Get everything shipshape.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Important: you exercise the greatest care while out driving today and tonight. Also, control your temper when dealing with others. You may not be feeling up to par, but that is no reason why someone else should suffer, too.

If your child is born today .. the desire for gracious living soon manifest itself, plus the desire to study and to travel unless you early teach your interesting progeny to go slow and regulate his time and activities that the maximum can be accomplished each day, it will lead to considerable confusion and possibly failure. The chart is particularly fine for operating a large real estate business.

$50-OF MAKES RETURNS

SELLING REAL ESTATE

Generally speaking real estate is restored to its creator the impression that it is not being discussed but in our case it is. Again next week we will have a house.

IT MEANS THAT we have listed lots of all sizes and shapes in and out of the city, and that we sell them.

IT MEANS THAT we have bungalows and storey and a half and two storey.

IT MEANS THAT we have built houses that are completely modern and that are doing business, and making money.

IT MEANS THAT we have farms with and without good improvements.

IT MEANS THAT we have rentals of commercial buildings in the business section of the city.

IT MEANS THAT we are truly in the real estate business.

CALL US, we probably have what you are looking for.

New Raspberry

OTTAWA — Boyne, a variety of red raspberry developed at the Canada Department of Agriculture's experimental farm at Morden, Man., has proved itself in the Prairie, Ontario, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick areas, the Canada Agriculture Department announced today.

It was intended for south-central Manitoba when it was released in 1960. Rated high as fresh fruit and excellent when canned or frozen, Boyne at Morden averaged 7,000 pounds per acre over six years' and outyielded Chief, Latham, Muskoka, Madawaska and Newburgh. The processed fruit has consistently scored 80 per cent or better for color, texture and flavor.

Science at Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topic this week: U.S. astronaut Alan B. Shepard's ride in a space capsule 115 miles up.

WHAT IS SPACE

What is the strange world astronaut Shepard visited, and where does it begin?

Some say it begins at 100,000 to 300,000 or 20 miles high—above all but one per cent of the earth's air.

But there's no sharp boundary. There's some atmosphere above the 300,000 mile mark, but of the earth's atmosphere, to be exact. Traces of atmosphere above here have been detected as high as 600 miles.

Space is generally considered to begin in the netherland of the earth's atmosphere — sometimes above 20 miles, usually above 60 miles.

FOR SPACE BREATHING

How much air did Shepard have to breathe? He was living on an atmosphere of pure oxygen at 5 pounds per square inch. It could have been stretched out for some 30 hours under the best circumstances, say representatives of the firm which supplied the equipment.

But actually to keep up cabin pressure in the space capsule, the system was designed to supply only 26 hours of oxygen. It could have 30 hours in reserve as a back-up system.

BIGGER AND BETTER

Before the end of the year, the U.S. space agency plans to put at Cape Canaveral a shammoth rocket that will make Shepard's Redstone look like a model T. It will even dwarf the huge Saturn rocket that launched Yuri Gagarin into orbit around the earth.

The Saturn rocket will develop some 1,500,000 pounds of thrust, nearly twice as much as the Russian space rocket, and nearly 20 times as much as the Redstone which put Shepard in space.

Already the barge that will carry the Saturn by river and sea to this missile base in Florida has made its practice run. A water route had to be found for the cumbersome vehicle, because there are too many obstructions for such an immense rocket to move by rail or truck.

HOME FOR SATURN

If Saturn is big, its home on Cape Canaveral is even bigger. The gantry crane that will roll up to mother the Saturn booster is nearly 400 storeys tall, built to accommodate not only the booster, but the big rockets the Saturn booster will carry into space.

It is described as the biggest mobile, self - propelled structure in the world.

Link Hypnosis To Later Mental Breakdown

CHICAGO (AP)—Legal precedent has been established for linking hypnosis as a contributing factor in the later mental breakdown of a patient, psychiatrists were told today.

Dr. Bernard Tutel, Long Beach, Calif., psychiatrist, said the victim was a 49-year-old woman who underwent hypnosis, on advice of a physician, for relief of persistent back pains.

Her back pains disappeared after a course of hypnotic treatment but she then developed delusions that people were following her and trying to hypnotize and harm her.

Her illness was diagnosed as paranoid psychosis and she had to undergo electro-shock treatments followed by psychotherapy and medication.

The industrial accident commission of California subsequently held her hypnotic treatments were "one of a series of contributing factors in precipitating the patient's paranoid schizophrenic reaction."

Tetlel sided with the growing number of doctors who contend hypnosis for therapeutic purposes screened carefully in advance.

He told the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association that the woman had a long-standing schizoid personality and added:

"It is my impression that the likelihood of a psychotic breakdown in individuals with schizoid personality is above average and that the use of hypnosis such techniques with such patients should be avoided."

BALTIMORE (AP) — The charge that Fairies Sierra Leone, Dr. William Fitzjohn said Thursday night that racial discrimination in the United States is doing grave damage in its relations with the new countries of Africa. Dr. Fitzjohn and his driver recently were refused service at a Hagerstown, Md., restaurant because they are Negroes.

24 Homes Burned Or Damaged In Hollywood Fire

1,000 Acres Blackened Before Fire Controlled

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Fire swept through the scenic, brush-covered Hollywood hills with explosive fury Friday night, leaving an estimated 24 homes destroyed or damaged.

The flames, pushed by gusts up to 60 miles an hour, blackened more than 1,000 acres before fire fighters got the upper hand.

Scores of residents were evacuated from their homely precipitated, exclusive residential district overlooking the Hollywood-Los Angeles area. The blaze is only a mile or so from movietown's glittering Hollywood and Sunset boulevards.

All of the homes burned or threatened were in the hillsides near famed Griffith Park Observatory, among those lost was that of novelist Aldous Huxley.

MANSIONS BURN

Fire Inspector Otto Firgens said crews had confirmed the destruction of 24 dwellings, including several mansions. Aerial observers — working in predawn darkness — reported 36 homes apparently destroyed or damaged.

Shortly after midnight, Firgens said the danger to homes had passed and that fire control appeared imminent as winds faded.

The blaze started about 7:43 p.m. near Hollyridge Avenue and Canyon Drive. Nearby is Beachwood Canyon, a semi-wilderness often used for scenes in western movie pictures.

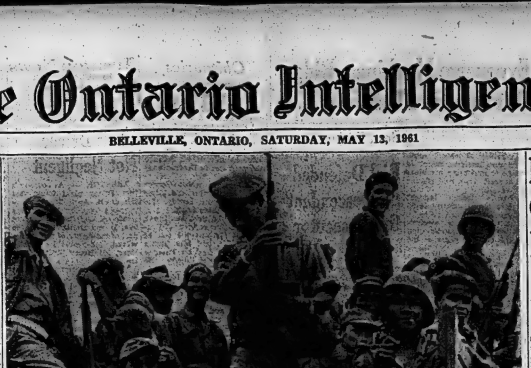
Within 11 minutes after the first alarm, officials declared a major emergency as the winds whipped the fire into a through-the-brush crisp from one of the driest years.

CAMP THREATENED

Camp Hollywood, a carl scout encampment with 146 girls on the grounds, was threatened with the fire for a time. But firemen moved equipment in so rapidly that it was not necessary to evacuate the camp.

Cause of the fire was undetermined. One report was that it started when a power line broke down.

Hundreds of persons lined Hollywood and Sunset boulevards, watching the flames only a mile or so distant.



Assistant Fireman, 17, said the fire seemed to explode when it hit a strong gust burst across the house tops.

"People were standing on their carports and talking with garden hoses," he said. "Many thought we were running out of their homes with household goods. The houses were crackling so fast it all sounded like an explosion."

Another witness, George Klass, 22, said a little girl and her mother ambushed hysterically as he watched their house burn.

Klass, an engineering student, said he took some of them down about 10th on Fern Drive here in his house. "It's terrible."

He said another woman lowered her baby to safety and said softly: "We have no home."

Sailors Trim Napanee By 9-4 Score

POINT COLBORNE (CP)—The Port Colborne Sailors defeated Napanee Comets 9-4 here Friday night to take a 2-2 lead in the best-of seven OHA Intermediate A final series.

Jack Martin of the Comets was assessed a 10-minute misconduct penalty in the first period, and in the second Norm Parrish, the Comet goalie, and Chester Warchol of the Sailors received five-minute highsticking penalties after a melee.

Nogi Mahon led the Sailors to victory with three goals.

For Napanee, Jack White, Sam Mulholland, Don Bellringer and Don Senior were the marksmen.

Rabbi Feinberg To Retire Soon

TORONTO (CP)—Rabbi Abraham L. Feinberg, one of Canada's best-known clerics, will retire in August after 18 years in the pulpit of Toronto's Holy Blossom Temple.

"It will be an armchair retirement," he said Friday, "but rather a change of vocation."

"The first item on my personal agenda is the writing of a book which I have thought about for many years."

Rabbi Feinberg, 60, said he also plans to devote more time to the cause of peace and world disarmament. He is chairman of the Toronto Committee for Disarmament.

OFFICIALS PLAN INFO CAMPAIGN ON SALES TAX

Initial Staff of 450 Will Be Required

TORONTO (CP) — Treasury officials are making plans for an information blitz in August to prepare and condition some 121,000 Ontario retailers for the new sales tax effective Sept. 1.

Philip T. Clark, Ontario's comptroller of revenue, has the onerous job of drafting regulations to supplement the Retail Sales Tax Act passed during the last session of, the legislature. These are expected to be placed before cabinet by the end of the month.

The task of trying to make the public forget the nuisance aspects of the tax, which will give new meaning to the millions of pennies in circulation, is being carried out by the 26 government members, who are busy out in the hustings explaining the need for more revenue so Ontario can continue its developmental plant. An advertising and public relations campaign will start later.

Although the comprehension rate has not yet been established, it is expected the vendor will be paid up to two per cent of his collections for the trouble of keeping books and collecting the tax.

KINGSTON (CP)—Brig. D. G. Cunningham, 52, former commandant of the Royal Military College here, today was named honorary colonel of the Princess of Wales Own Regiment, a militia unit.

Brig. Cunningham's father, grandfather and a brother all were commanding officers of the Princess of Wales Own Regiment.

U.S. Confirms Tale Cuban Invasion Survivors Were Hid at U.S. Base

WASHINGTON (AP)—A U.S. official confirmed today that survivors of the Cuban invasion were concealed on a small Caribbean island.

He said they later were flown to the U.S. mainland.

The official, who cannot be identified, said the last of the survivors, including three women and two children, had departed the U.S. marine base at Vieques in Puerto Rico.

He said he did not know where the survivors were now but presumed some were in Miami, Fla.

The departure of the survivors thus would have come 15 days after the initial group flown in Cuba's Cochinos Bay where 1,200 counter - revolutionaries sought to free themselves against Cuba's 30,000 troops.

The official said finally, that the survivors had been at Vieques, just off San Juan, Puerto Rico, came two days after The Associated Press published reports that some of the survivors might still be on the island.

Except for the reported time of the survivors' departure from the island, the published reports said the official's account was in general agreement.

Previously, all efforts to check the reports had been fruitless.

Meanwhile, all access by reporters to the marine base at Vieques has been denied.

The defence department, the White House and the Central Intelligence Agency are holding firm on the no admission policy.

Pentagon sources, primarily a marine training base, the reason for withholding permission to visit Vieques is not yet clear.

Still maintaining that it has no part in the Cuban invasion and its aftermath.

The number of the survivors is not known, but could not be large.

Fidel Castro's government has announced the capture of about 1,000 invaders and claimed that more than 200 were killed in the April 16-17 debacle.

Kennedy Will Try to Mend Fences on Canadian Visit

OTTAWA (CP)—"Good fences make good neighbors," wrote New England poet Robert Frost.

President Kennedy, who quoted the line with approval on his last visit to Canada, comes to Ottawa next week on a state visit, aimed at ensuring Canada-American friendship fences are kept in good repair.

Observers generally agree that points of friction between the two neighbors are fewer now than in October, 1957, when Mr. Kennedy, then senator from Massachusetts, spoke at the University of New Brunswick convocation and received an honorary degree.

At that time, he suggested an improvement in the machinery of joint consultation to ease irritations and irritations. The solidarity of Canada-U.S. friendship, he "generally a full and frank discussion of issues of mutual interest, even when that discussion may jar sensitive ears on the other side of the border."

At present Canada and the U.S. differ on their approach to Premier Castro's Cuba. The Canadian government still is concerned over the heavy trade deficit with the U.S.

There is, however, and others of a more amicable nature, are expected to be discussed when Mr. Kennedy and Prime Minister Diefenbaker meet next week.

The two leaders had a ce- meeting in Washington in February. This will be the president's first official visit outside his country since taking office.

And the fifth presidential visit to Ottawa in a series begun by President Roosevelt in 1943.

The capital is busying with preparations to meet the president and Mrs. Kennedy, who will arrive by air at 4:35 p.m. Tuesday. They will be here just over 48 hours, leaving at 10 a.m. Thursday.

Main feature of the visit will be President Kennedy's address Wednesday afternoon to members of the Commons and Senate in the Commons chamber. It will be broadcast nationally, starting about 3:15 p.m.

Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Kennedy will meet for 3½ hours that morning in the prime minister's office. That will be their main consultation, although they will have other opportunities to get together during the president's crowded schedule.

A state dinner and reception will be held Tuesday night at Government House, residence of the Governor - General and Mme. Vanier where the Kennedys will stay. Next day there will be a luncheon at Mr. Diefenbaker's residence and a dinner at the U.S. embassy.

Congolese Parliament Will Reconvene Says Kasavubu

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—President Joseph Kasavubu today declared Parliament back into session to help resolve the political chaos that has split the country since its founding. It is expected to meet in a few weeks.

"After nearly 10 months of confusion, misery and all kinds of tragedies, I am pleased to say in an address, "each of us will have taken part in a long period of calm and order based on the principles of public morality and legality."

The call for Parliament to meet reconvened an attempt to bring Katanga back under control of the central government, now that President Moise Tshombe of Katanga has been arrested on treason charges. He has proclaimed his province an independent nation.

It remains to be seen whether Katanga's deputies will desert Tshombe and attend the parliamentary session.

Kasavubu asked for United Nations protection for the parliamentarians and their families and for UN travel facilities to bring the deputies to Leopoldville.

He said the first session to open immediately after the conclusion of the present political negotiations to split Katanga probably this month.

"The moment is very grave," Kasavubu said in a formal address in Coquilhatville. "Everyone has the duty to collaborate in the work of reconstruction. I hope the convocation of Parliament will bring not merely a return to legality but a full new lease of life for our population."

By recalling Parliament Kasavubu effectively challenged the U.S. Drive to Lineup Latins Against Cuba Appears Bust

WASHINGTON (CP)—The big United States drive to line up the Latin American countries against Fidel Castro's regime appears to be heading towards a bust. U.S. diplomats fear they will be in for a long period of spreading communism and Castroism on the Latin American continent.

While some small countries have spoken in support of the U.S., agreeing that Castro is a menace and breaking off diplomatic relations with Cuba, the big powers that count in South America are sitting on the fence calmly suggesting the United States doesn't know what it is talking about.

TWO OLD GRIPES ON FISHERIES HEARD IN HOUSE

Lengthy Debate On Dept. Estimates

OTTAWA (CP)—Two old political gripes were thrashed into a Commons debate on fisheries Friday.

One from the east coast was that Canadian firesmen don't get a fair shake in comparison with the federal aid spent on farmers.

The other was that west coast fishermen are faring poorly in relation to the amount Ottawa spends on the Atlantic coast line.

Charles R. Granger (L — Grand Falls-White Bay - Labrador) said the fishermen must be given a part of the $1 billion farm income support program of small loans for fishermen, similar to schemes available in rural areas.

Harold Winch (CCF—Vancouver East) said the government discriminates against the west coast fishing industry in comparison with all the financial aid spent on agriculture, coal and gold mining.

He contended that Ottawa looks on the B.C. fishing industry as a "poor relation" in that it receives little attention.

These comments and others like them set the stage for a day-long debate satisfied with the plight of the Atlantic coast fishindustry, oyster farming, humane methods of sealing and sealing, and the inherent trouble with longliners.

Fisheries department estimates for 1961-62 provided the vehicle for the debate, preceded by Transport Minister Balcer's announcement of a new shipbuilding policy. Main provisions of that statement:

The government will pay 40 per cent of the capital cost of building Canadian - registered vessels, other than fishing vessels, in Canadian yards. The 40 per cent will last until March 31, 1963, when it will drop to 35 per cent of approved capital costs.

Fourteen-Nation Geneva Parley Hits Two Snags

Squabble Over Truce, Seating of Pathet Lao

GENEVA (Reuters) — The right-wing Laotian government today challenged an official report of an effective cease-fire in Laos, producing an unexpected snag in the 14-country talks here.

The challenge came only two hours after the United States failed to shake Soviet determination to seat a pro-Communist Pathet Lao delegation at the postponed conference.

Economics Minister Ngone Sananikone said the Laotian government did not consider a cease-fire effective in the country, despite a statement by the truce supervisory commission that a cease-fire existed there.

"As long as there is no effective cease-fire in Laos there can be no conference," he told reporters after arriving here at the head of an advance party of the right-wing delegation.

The three-power commission returned from Laos Friday but since a cease-fire order was issued in the civil war May 3 "there has been a steady and demonstrable cessation of hostilities."

TWO FORMAL COMPLAINTS

"There have been some complaints of local breaks of cease-fire, but the commission has not received any formal written complaint from any side," it said.

(A formal cease-fire document was signed today at Ban Namone, Laos, by delegations from the government and the pro-Communist rebels. The Associated Press said in a dispatch from Ban Namone that the two parties agreed to open full-scale military and political talks there Sunday.

(A Reuters dispatch from Phnom Penh, Cambodia, said Prince Norodom Sihanouk, Cambodian head of state, is reported to have called on opposing sides in Laos to meet on Pha Tene Plateau to settle their differences.)

U.S. Secretary Dean Rusk and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko met for 70 minutes in Russia building out for full Pathet Lao conference participation was unacceptable condition to the United States.

Gromyko turned to reporters and said: "Our conversations were not conclusive."

Rusk, asked about the progress of the conference, replied laughingly, smiled and said: "If I were you I would not give up your hotel room."

Rusk said after the meeting that he was ready to begin the conference at 10 minutes notice, but the Communists were hold-

Ontario Commerce Chamber Told Taxes on Lower Incomes Will Rise

WINDSOR (CP) — People inture.

"They indicated tax collections will rise with increasing population and higher incomes. New tax sources would have to be found and a smaller income group like the most likely and most productive target.

W. T. Grant of Windsor, the chamber's retiring president, commenting on the Ontario sales tax, effective in September, said:

"Small and medium business men have sat back and watched the steady rise of taxes on big profit, big estates, etc. The small consumer and wage earner may have been doing the same thing in the belief that 'it won't happen to me.' Now it has happened to the 'little' man and he is going to be increasingly pinched in the fu-

GENEVA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Howard Green may be absent for the opening of the 14-nation Laotian conference because of its delay in starting.

The Canadian official said Friday night the conference is unlikely to begin before early next week. He has a firm speaking engagement in Vancouver Thursday and plans to leave here Tuesday night.

The minister said he will not change his departure plans even though he may not personally be able to present Canada's position to the conference. He is a delegate-designate. Interim caretakers at the Palais de Nations Friday that the conference would not start on schedule. But they neglected to tell Green.

The Canadian minister expected the delay but went to the conference anyway as the off-chance that it might begin on schedule.

TO MAKE SURE

"I wanted to make sure that nobody accused us of not being ready to attend," Green said in an interview. He spent much of the day redrafting the Canadian presentation to the conference.

The Canadian delegation had left today with Indian, British and United States officials. Later Green commented that he did not expect that the representation is necessary to get the conference under way.

The minister said the conference could deal with the function of the three-nation truce commission in Laos, comprising India, Canada and Poland, without waiting for the Laotians to be seated here. But no one else expected that until they are was British-Russian agreement, he said.

After the Boat meeting, Gromyko arranged to meet Indian Defence Minister V. K. Krishna Menon, whose country leads the International Control Commission which reported Friday that North Vietnam aided the Reds in Laos.

Russia favored seating a Pathet Lao delegation with full participant status, along with delegations representing Communist-recognized Laotian Premier Prince Souvanna Phouma and Western - sponsored Premier Prince Boun Oum.

Western officials said they would not oppose inclusion of Pathet Lao advisers in the Souvanna delegation. The Pathet Lao and the neutralist Souvanna forces share common Boun's support in the fourth Laotian political year.

Expensive Machines, Bldg. Damaged in Flash Fire

A flash fire which ripped through the older section of the William Finkle Machine Company on West Dundas Street early Friday afternoon, caused an unestimated amount of damage to expensive machines and burned the roof of the building.

Belleville firemen brought the blaze under control in 30 minutes.

A spark from a welder's torch which caused a explosion was given as the cause of the fire.

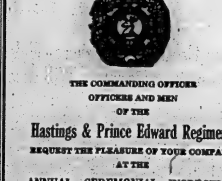
Business proprietor William Finkle said an employee Fort Bronson, was doing some welding at the rear of a truck just inside the machine shop door when the explosion occurred and touched off the blaze.

Mr. Bronson jumped into the truck and drove it to safety outside just before he could reenter the building the blaze was already out of control. The flames caught onto oil soaked belts and quickly raced to the roof of the structure.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance ordered out practically all the department equipment, including the new LaFrance pumper delivered to the city only this week.

The Finkle Machine shop was one of the best equipped shops in the Belleville area, the part of the building gutted by the fire having about $30,000 worth of machinery and machines, automatic lathes and other machines.

Mr. Finkle said he would be unable to determine his loss until he was able to check the damage to the machinery. All plans of the machine shop's operations provide work for about 14 men, none of whom are expected to be laid off as result of the blaze.



Mr. Finkle said he would rebuild as soon as possible. The gutted building was insured.

Riel Defended By Descendant Of Prosecutor

By DICK PAYNE

One man's hero is another man's rogue—and E. B. Osler's book on "The Man Who Had to Hang—Louis Riel" (Longmans, Greene and Co., Toronto) was certainly considered a rogue at for hanging by the Dundas Street Tories when Sir Quinte area for a decade and a half, from 1870 to 1885. Even today there must be some residents of the district who can recall the depth of the feeling against Riel in this hotbed of Orangeism, though none alive today will remember the sting of hearing that Louis Riel, wanted on a charge of murdering an Ontario Orangeman, Thomas Scott, in his first "rebellion" in Manitoba, had escaped the register as a member of the Ontario Legislature.

That day, March 30, 1874, it was Mackenzie Bowell, then Tory whip responsible for the party in the House of Commons, who announced to the House that Riel be ordered to attend the House of Commons at the bar of the House to answer charges of high treason. Bowell, forced to choose between the lesser of two evils, favored the latter, a decision which indicates that, whatever may have been the political risk at the time of his second rebellion in Saskatchewan, he was then acting like a man.

Osler, a veteran of the RCAF who is now in Winnipeg on business man and writes as much for pleasure for enjoyment as for money, is a descendant of the B. Osler of Toronto, one of the five lawyers for the prosecution in the trial which led to Riel's conviction on Nov. 16, 1885. The present-day Osler, though not forthrightly pro-Riel—finding no fault in Riel's actions in the first so-called "rebellion" and accusing him for the second rebellion for the purpose of insanity.

The book is evidently the product of extensive research. Others in the two-page bibliography at the back of the author's book leaves the reader thoroughly convinced.

What was Osler trying to prove? The latest rebirth in the book as a "biography" but it is a biography given over almost entirely to Riel's trial and hanging. This is not the whole man. Was the book intended then, as history? Perhaps it was, but the difficulty arises in accepting it in this sense as one cannot know how much of it consists of facts gleaned from long hours of study of documents and how much is the product of the author's imagination, a free rein to put himself in Riel's place. And, in any event, too many years have already passed by to admit what Joseph Schull, the Osler a CBC playwright, has in another connection termed "the bright, mad, accurate, false crazy-quilt that is history."

This is now hung forever before the hours Riel knew and though expected to be the case it is hardly likely that Riel was as black as he was painted by the Ontario Orangemen of nine decades ago, one wonders whether he could have been as white as the author's picture of him during his first rebellion, or whether his insanity was as complete as to shield him from all responsibility for the subsequent bloodshed of his second rebellion.

One could have wished, too, that all the hours of research might have left a more complete picture of the Canadian West of the Dominion's first years, a few paragraphs of description of the country at least and an insight into the lives of Riel's people other than were well bearing arms at his orders.

Yet the book has one essential quality so many other lack—the ability to hold our interest from page to page. It is a well worth reading and the reader who yearns for more information could almost certainly obtain it by consulting the bibliography.

Inquest Jury Finds Driver Not Negligent

TRENTON A coroner's jury Friday night found that the death, April 26, of four-year-old Timothy Fowler was accidental and that the driver of the car was not guilty of negligence or dangerous driving. The jury was involved, 17-year-old Charles Bugg, 104 Henry Street, Trenton.

The jury recommended that persons living next to caution pre-school aged children against wandering from home and provide traffic articles. The jury also recommended that parents keep young children under surveillance at all times.

Another jury recommendation was that an amber blinking light be installed at the corner of Dixon Drive and Division Street, facing north and south, as a warning of possible danger at, or around, the corner. Bryan Street and Rockdon Front Road, another dangerous corner.

Evidence given at the inquest indicated that Timothy Fowler, his five-year-old sister and a friend, two other children were playing on the east side of Bryan Street. Timothy darted into the street in front of the car driven by Charles Bugg. The latter said he had already applied the brakes of the vehicle when he saw the boy. He left in an attempt to avoid striking the children. The driver of a car following Bugg at the time of the accident said that Bugg was travelling at about 30 miles an hour when the accident occurred.

Auxiliary Board of Scouts For District Holds Supper

The Belleville and District Boy Scout Auxiliary Executive Board held their fourth annual pot-luck supper at Eastminster United Church on Thursday evening. There were approximately 60 guests, the largest attendance in the history of the executive board with fifteen auxiliaries represented.

Mrs. P. Gelsthorpe, Mrs. G. Hutchinson and Mrs. G. Hodgson, Peterborough, received the guests at the door. Meeting opened with the National Anthem; Rev. A. McDowell gave invocation.

Mrs. Gelsthorpe, president of the executive board, extended a warm welcome to all, and introduced the head table guests, Mr. F. C. Metcalfe, at the piano, led in a sing-song, which is much enjoyed by everyone. Mr. L. Monteith suggested that the ladies meet for a summer campfire meeting at Camp Sagisaki. Mrs. R. Taylor introduced Cub Master Murray Maw of 17th Belleville who called on Cub Alec Bradley from "2" Pack, who played a piano solo "Allegro Vivace" by Haydn, and Cub Donald Kline of "A" Pack who favored us with a tap dance number. Mrs. Taylor thanked the boys for their splendid entertainment and

Glut and Scarcity

Hon. Alvin Hamilton, Canadian minister of agriculture, and his U.S. opposite, Agricultural Secretary Orville Freeman, have agreed on the need to raise farm incomes in both their countries and also on the need to prevent over-production by the farmers of these two nations.

The two objectives are closely linked. It might be argued that the ministers are trying to ride off in opposite directions, since theoretically the way to increase incomes is to increase production. In practice, though, and particularly in such a field as agriculture where there are thousands of independent producers, an increase in production can easily lead to a reduction in income, because a surplus of any product results in sharp reductions in its price. Within limits, therefore, raising farm incomes and reducing production may well go hand in hand, with the latter being the cause and the former the effect.

The Canadian Press report from Ottawa on the conference which resulted in this agreement refers to "the highly productive North American agricultural industry." The communique issued following the talks said that "there was agreement that actual and potential North American agricultural production exceeds not only domestic and foreign commercial requirements but also the foreseeable requirements of an expanded foreign aid and food assistance program."

There is no reason to doubt the accuracy of this statement, but at the same time we must be careful not to interpret this as meaning that the people of the world do not use enough food which the North American agricultural industry, and the farmers, herdsmen and fishermen of all the other continents, are capable of producing.

The need for food is not synonymous with the "requirements" for food in the sense that the communique used the word requirements. What the ministers of agriculture were talking about was not the mere demand for food, which comes from the stomach, but the effective demand, which depends upon the pocketbook. Those who need the food the most are those who are the least able to pay for it.

It may well be that even if the farmers of the U.S. and Canada produced up to the limit of their abilities, and if some method were devised to finance the transfer of this food to those who need it, we should still find ourselves facing the now familiar situation of a glut here and a famine in distant countries, because we might lack the physical means to transport food from producer to consumer.

Eventually, though, if we are to have consciences and to be able to live with them, we of the technically advanced nations are going to have to solve this problem, produce all the food required or as much of it as we are capable of doing and see that it reaches the bellies of the hungry.

It would be heartbreaking if, when the day comes that there exists some world food bank, adequately financed and possessing sufficient transportation facilities, we should find that temporarily necessary steps to reduce production have left us permanently short of sufficient men and women to know how to make the earth give forth its bounty.

Outlaw Dowries

One may sympathize with the good intentions of the parliament of India in passing a law outlawing the giving, taking or demanding of a marriage dowry, while still being convinced that the honorable members are engaged in busily tripping down a road which, if it does not actually lead to hell, is still certain to provide them with a devil of a rough ride.

Many of India's poor families have found that the demands of suitors for a dowry have prevented their daughters from marrying, we are told. As a result, young girls often commit suicide because their parents' poverty leads them to despair of ever finding husbands.

Consider, though, that the outlawing of a dowry, while bringing succor to the poor but beautiful, throws another obstacle in the already stony path to matrimony confronting the maiden born plain.

The new law permits gifts at the time of marriage, if not specifically in consideration of it. Just how one is to distinguish between such a gift and a dowry is not explained. Perhaps, all this means is that rich men with homely daughters will be able to renege at the last moment, so that the bridegroom will never be sure of what he is getting until after the marriage. This is a situation not unknown to bridegrooms in other lands, but whether it will enhance the charms of India's daughters getting married seems to us somewhat doubtful.

Water Valuable Asset

Winnipeg Tribune

Rudyard Kipling once said that Medicine Hat had "all hell for a basement", referring to the vast reservoir of natural gas that had been discovered when he visited here in the early 1900s.

Now, Medicine Hat has found something else in its basement — an invisible river capable of producing enough water to douse the fires in Kipling's hell.

The river is underground, in geological circles it's known as the "aquifer", and it is potential importance is such that "aquifer" has quickly become a household word in these parts.

The aquifer, defined as a water-bearing strata of formation, was discovered just less than two years ago and while testing the full aquifer capacity is not yet complete, the supply is shaping up as the best ground water supply in Canada.

The aquifer is about 20 feet under ground on the average, but its output is one of the most startling facts to date to the waterminded businessman or industrialist.

Present tests have proven a flow of 2,000,000 gallons per day and engineers say the aquifer is easily capable of producing more than 10,000,000.

The chemical content of the aquifer are impressive.

Its temperature ranges between 48 and 53 degrees throughout the year. It is at its coldest during the mid-summer months when the water in the Life Boring Soviet Youth

Christian Science Monitor

An English wit once remarked that it is easier to defend in the daytime than in the evening. This minor failing in the human race does not quite account, however, for the interest that people in the United States feel as they read of Soviet difficulties with the younger generation of Russia.

This interest is two-sided. It reflects the concern that all peoples feel for the welfare of youth problems. But it also raises an amused eyebrow over the discovery that Communism leaves so much of "human nature" unchanged.

Al recent study by the Soviet Institute of Public Opinion, as reflected in the Communist party Pravda, shows that many young people and older leaders feel altogether too much concern to outright disgust over attitudes of Soviet youth.

A noted intellectual writes that Russia youth divides into three categories, enthusiasts, parasites, and those who have "lost all interest in life". He calls the parasites "the dregs of our society."

The Soviet Minister of Defence makes the following contribution to the discussion: "An easy-going attitude toward life is more prevalent than other vices — a striving to pass through life along a road covered only with flowers."

Among young people these comments are reported: "Earlier . . . and now . . . No, now all my pure dreams have come down to one thing—money. All I want is luxury, luxury, well-being, love and happiness."

Or: "I am 18 years old, but I have so much apathy and indifference . . . I complain about me, that adults can only wonder . . . . Life is not very interesting. This is not only my opinion, it is also that of my friends."

Older comrades, in their efforts to reach the heights in comparison with Western dan-

A FACTOR OF MERCY

Someone spoke recently of a woman who puts bells on her pains.

You have seen such a person. Some people have the character and courage to endure the hard situations of life in silence. Some people make more fuss over a pin prick than others do over a major accident. There is a definite type of psychiatric person who likes nothing so much as to sit around and talk about former illnesses and present pains. And this person is not always a woman. Men can sometimes put bells on their pains and keep them ringing at least loud and constantly as can the most neurotic variety of women.

Hard as it is to face the fact, we have to admit that pain is one of God's great factors of mercy. Suppose we had no pain. Some of the most disastrous diseases get beyond the possibility of treatment or surgery be-

South Saskatchewan, the city's present source, gets as warm as 70 to 72 degrees. Temperatures above 60 degrees are generally too warm for industrial use.

The purity is extremely high. There are no known bacteriological impurities, and chemical impurities are slight.

But great importance is the water's easy accessibility. The water level is 30 feet below ground on the average and the water-bearing gravel strata, ranges from 20 to 40 feet thick, averaging about 40 feet in the tested areas. The precise width is still undetermined but could be up to half or three-quarters of a mile in places.

* * *

Or what value is the aquifer? In two years, it has been a deciding factor in luring three major industries. Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company's $4,500,000 plant requires huge volumes of cold water and it was the company's interest in Medicine Hat that hastened development of the aquifer, discovered only a few months previously.

Right after Goodyear came the announcement that the Johns-Manville Company, listed by John as valuable for water, would build a cement - pipe plant. The spring Montreal Western Beef Company of Montreal announced plans to build a packing plant here and the first thing done was to drill a giant site on top of the aquifer.

cause so pain has been invented. God gives us the sharp discomfort of pain to call our attention to something which deliberately needs our attention. Pain is a protection of life and a very necessary and merciful function.

But when people decorate their pains with bells and run up flags signifying all sorts of sundry that they are in misery and need sympathy, then that person is really trying to get just sick in body but above all sick in mind.

The radiant New Testament statement on this situation is "He endured as seeing him who is invisible."

Togetherheid At Its Worst

Financial Post

"For company executives and supervisors", burbles Dun's Review, "the unbreakable breakfast meeting "scheduled from 8.30 to 9.30 a.m. starts the day with a memorable note. Briefed and breakfasted, staff members are ready to get the word to their departments with a minimum of time lost from day-to-day duties."

This spectacle of communism at its most degrading, convivial knocking back of orange juice is soul-shriveling, ulcer-making stuff to the right loathsome.

It is typical of the fundamental right to every civilized man "to munch his toast cross-legged" and to drink his breakfast silence if he wants to. The corporate breakfast is a preposterous and disgusting invasion of personal privacy.

This latest excess of "American" management is just as soul-searing as the idea that company officials should inspect and pass upon employee views before they are "reasonable" mates. It is another aspect of the vicious idea that today's businessman should have no private life of his own whatsoever.

Women Spoil Holdup Work

Stratford Beacon-Herald

Bank bandits can't make a dime, some days, if on those days a woman is in the tellers' cage. Take that she spoils a game. A few days ago a girl teller, confronted with a note demanding money, was panicked by another member of the staff to be frowning. It seems that her note-writing technique to customers was a smile, so her colleague saw her and the holdup man ran. Not quite so recently, a would-be robber wrote a long bag at a male teller in Hamilton. She laughed at him and pushed it back, asking if he were a serious. He bolted and escaped.

In Toronto, a robber running from a bank with loot was blocked by a girl of 16, a high school student there, who later explained that she was used to standing her own in a family of boys. Moreover, since she was a girl, convince commanded that her example was to be commended but not imitated, inasmuch as a desperate man might use a gun on a girl in his path.

Banks do not advise or encourage employees to resist holdups. Last year in Ontario we read of quick and quiet suppression of what the world is made of. No gift of nature or of life is free from its elements. I pity the man who cannot find much of himself in the face of a child, in the flower that he admires, or in the hearts of his friends.

I would rather live in a beautiful heart than have the most magnificent mansion that hands and money could put together.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

There are still a few scissor grinders, but they look sleepy, promenading the streets of our cities. Out for a walk yesterday, I counted six of them strolling along, hauling his grinding wheels behind him. I followed him, to see how much business he did. For in the complacency with which would hear his bell, amid all the sounds of traffic and noise, and all the din of radio and TV indoors? I followed three residential blocks, and he never got a call.

The scissor grinders are the last of a once numerous company of itinerant service men. I distinctly recall the shoe repair man who came through the streets shouting "shoe repair, shoe repair," and jangling a hand bell. On his back he carried a small bench, in the drawers of which were soles, leather, nails, pegs and the paraphernalia of the trade. As the housewives would come to the door and beckon him, and he would sit on the steps of the entrance to the back door and ply on the upper, fixing the shoes of the family.

Then there was the man more than the banana man. With pushcarts, tinsmiths would travel the city streets, their harrows laden with save-troughing, galvanized tin, solder pot. Their calls, like those of all their colleagues, the peach man, the strawberry man, the cherry man, were easily heard in the quiet homes of those days.

Service was mobile.

Woman Itches All Over, Name Few Possible Causes

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I wonder if I need to see a dermatologist, psychiatrist, or a medical doctor. Some dry scaly patches have appeared on my chest, shoulders and neck. However, the itching is all over. And I have dandruff occasionally, and my scalp itch itches.

"I have been told by various and sundry that it probably is nerves. Other women have told me that they are troubled by itching, too. Nothing looks quite so crude as scratching — but have you ever itched and could not scratch? — M. C."

"P.S. — I can't afford specialists, and I do read your column regularly."

I deleted parts of your interesting letter, the personal parts about the problems of others. We all have our problems — but I will certainly say you have your full share and more.

"Nerves" can be responsible for itching, but the patches and dandruff suggest a common ailment, seborrheic dermatitis. It is entirely possible, even that the nerves intensify the tendency to itch.

That's the way of life, a.nd of itching. You may have two sources of trouble. Taking singly, they may not be annoying. Together, they can be very much so.

Now, Mr. M. C., here's how I'd go about your problem, if I were you. On the evidence, it sounds as if you have some sort of skin disturbance. Whether my guess of seborrheic dermatitis is correct isn't the point. Something other than just nerves is responsible for the skin disturbances you mentioned.

Whether you should see a dermatologist is to decide later. Go first to your family doctor. General physicians see a lot of these common skin disturbances and, as a rule, have little trouble in calming them down. If because of some unusual element or stubborn resistance to the skin condition, your family doctor can suggest a dermatologist.

By and large, however, treatment for a condition like yours should not depend upon prolonged expensive treatment.

Further, I urge you to keep one more thing in mind. Many and many a time I hear people say, "Doctor, you're a good specialist", but when I inquire, I find that they are worried about the cost.

It's one of those ideas that is kept alive by frequent repetition but isn't necessarily so. Yes, some specialists are expensive; others are not. And specialists (who are doctors to begin with) often do just what general physicians do: establish the fee to suit the size of what the patient can afford.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ON DISCOVERING YOURSELF

Many of us tread a score of years or more before we come to know ourselves. We seek through worlds of wilderness, through the fogs of self-deceivance courage, and patiently search for riches — which we carry around with us all the time.

After all, we are each but a magnificent mold of what the world is made of. No gift of nature or of life is free from its elements. I pity the man who cannot find much of himself in the face of a child, in the flower that he admires, or within the hearts of his friends.

I would rather live in a beautiful heart than have the most magnificent mansion that hands and money could put together.

Much of the finest of us we must discover in other people.

And is there a joy greater than to find within another "pay ore" is some other choice life, that is really a continuance of the best in us?

Search for fame, for money, for applause, for power. But in the end you will return tired and weary from the long trail, only to draw closer to you the beauty, the loyalty, the simple faith and confidence that are awaiting you, as a part of you, in the heart of one beloved.

Happiness is not a thing to discovery. You are sure to find it within yourself.

If you don't, you haven't searched aright.

Just Enough

Brandon Sun

It never matters if the candidate is supported by the wrong people if there are enough of them.

Press Parley Dangerous

Ottawa Journal

Mr. Phillip Wagner, editor of the Baltimore Sun, writes in Harpers of his misgivings about television press conferences:

"While you may not be over following the new President's [illegible] performance, she put the matter very well. I thought, when she exclaimed that if she answers, they're allowing him to use camera." Mrs. Roosevelt's exclamation that chilled me was the impaled suggestion that their might call a press in President of the United States to answer "why?" approach.

The press conference has become a game in which the principal comes to the plate and the questioners try out their curves and knuckle balls. There's no denying that President Kennedy is a good batter; he is not likely to be caught out by the "When did you stop beating your wife?" approach. But a man of slower reflexes, and not necessarily a worse president for that, might stumble dangerously. Should the press be given the right to televise cameras, where nothing can be hidden from the record, and invite people to try to trip him?

A Lift For Living

Take Guilty Feelings to God

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

During my ministry many persons have asked me whether they have committed the unpardonable sin. Before they tell me what they have done, I know by their attitude what the answer is. If they are deeply concerned about their deed, it is not unpardonable.

The gospel records the only unforgivable sin as "blasphemy against the Holy Spirit." As I understand it, this means that when a person has reached the point where he no longer feels God's spirit calling him to repent, he is beyond the possibility of forgiveness. As long as he feels and repents his guilt, there is hope of pardon.

Embedded in the original texture of human nature is something which we call conscience. It can make us feel guilty, whether others see us or not, whether other approve or disapprove what we do. Conscience may make a man rebel against the conventional codes of his family, his class or his nation, even to disgrace and martyrdom. Conscience is not merely the echo of the crowd's voice. It is the echo of the Creator's voice.

One way of trying to free ourselves from guilty feelings is to flee from them. We may rush around in such a busy whirl that we never give God a chance to show us the condition of our real selves.

Sometimes we can take our thoughts off our personal shortcomings by absorbing ourselves in worthwhile causes, thinking that our social service cancels out our private guilt.

CAN'T DROWN CONSCIENCE

A wealthy lecher does not cleanse his own guilt by giving contributions to hospitals for fallen women. Or like Francis Thompson, the English medical student who wrote "The Hound of Heaven," we may try to tempt to elude the troubling voice of conscience by immersing ourselves in "streams of running laughter" and in the gaiety of pleasures. When we are told that there are over five million alcoholics in this country, we realize how many are trying to drown their conscience in indulgence.

In still another way men try to rid themselves of guilty feelings. They declare the Biblical moral codes out of date. Nietzsche, the philosopher who indoctrinated the Prussian group around the Kaiser in 1914, held that to follow Christ's ethics would make a nation of slaves. Therefore, just reverse what he called slave values and call force, cruelty and hate virtues. Hitler also shouted that he was doing away with the fearsome old Ten Commandments and creating a brave new world. But Nietzsche died in a madhouse, the Kaiser went into exile and Hitler was buried beneath Berlin's debris. And now Mr. Kreutzer laughs at our Lord's code of morals.

WE DECEIVE OURSELVES

The Epistle of John puts it, "When we say that we are not guilty, we deceive ourselves." We may try to forget our sins, but in those interludes of time before we go to sleep, haunting fears harass us. Because we haven't got inner peace of mind, we are restless, cantankerous and maladjusted.

Sometimes we reach the point where we avoid those places and persons that remind us of goodness. Not everybody who stays away from church does so because the church services are dull. We ministers know we are not always interesting. We know we are not so hot! But even we call those are too hot for some people's consciences. They stay away from church because they feel uncomfortable in the presence of religious reminders.

James A. Garfield was once approached to do a compromising thing. He was assured that nobody would know about it. He replied, "But I have to live with myself."

We can have no true peace of mind until we bring our guilty feelings to God.

Incoming president, Mrs. Doreen Greer, stated that plans for the "Girl of the Year Party" would be announced at the next meeting on May 16th.

Following the business meeting, court whist was played to conclude a most enjoyable evening.

Four folk dance numbers by another group of grade 8 pupils, trained by Mrs. Spafford. Mrs. Sine and Mr. Plumpton, brought the program to a close.

Weddings

MARTIN — GIBSON

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, was the setting Saturday, May 6th, for the marriage of Miss Leola Pauline Sara Gibson, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert Stirling Gibson, of Belleville, Ontario, to Mr. Larry Roland Gibbs Martin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Martin of Kingston, Ontario.

Tall standards of white snapdragons, shasta mums, forsythia and lemon Salah adorned the alter. White satin bows designated the guest pews.

The double-ring ceremony was performed by Rev. R. D. MacLean.

Traditional wedding music was offered by the organist Mr. E. Boyce, who accompanied the soloist, Miss Reta Vincent. The many close friends and relatives appreciated the selections played by Mr. Boyce and "The Wedding Prayer" and "O Perfect Love" sung by Miss Vincent during the ceremony.

Dr. Gibson gave his daughter in marriage and she was radiantly lovely in a gown of Cameo ivory peau de soie fashioned with a tulip skirt accented with a self bow. The bodice of re-embroidered Alencon lace had a V-shaped neckline and was offset with a wide shirred matching cummerbund. Her shoulder-length veil of Italian illusion was caught into a matching circlet of pearls. A cascade bouquet of "Fairy Princess" roses and gardenias was carried by the bride.

The three bridal attendants wore "spring-fresh" in organza and lace gowns, featuring fitted bodices with portrait necklines, cummerbund and bouffant skirts. The apple-green gowns were offset by the non yellow accessories, butterfly bow headdresses, gloves and semi-cascade bouquets of maize gardenias, yellow "Pinocchio Roses" and trailing ivy. The maid of honor and Miss Barbara Joan Fairman, was accompanied by Miss Catherine (Cathy) Martin, sister of the bridegroom and the matron of honor Mrs. William Jarvis.

Mr. David MacNamara, of Toronto, was best man and the ushers were, Mr. Robert Gibson and Mr. Malcolm Gibson, brothers of the bride.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride. The wedding cake was centred on an antique oval table in front of the fireplace. Two tall candelabra were appointed with an heirloom tiffet and linen cloth and crystal candle-lit candelabra. Tulle illusion entwined with "Sweetheart" roses, made an attractive wreath at the base of the wedding cake. Large bouquets of white flowers and of spring flowers adorned the various rooms.

The bride's mother received the guests wearing a dove-grey imported silk sheath. With it she wore a "Suzy-Lee" flower hat and matching accessories. Her corsage was of "Pink Delight" roses and "Orchid Frost" hyacinths. Assisting her, Mrs. Martin, the bridegroom's mother wore a navy blue flowering "Faianta" silk gown. With it she wore a pearl-toned beige hat, gloves and shoes. Her corsage was of Fuchia roses with matching satin rose leaves and petals of ivory tulle.

For the wedding trip to Charleston, South Carolina, the bride chose an Italian model Chanel-design grey wool suit, edged in black with buttons of gold color, and black patent accessories. Her corsage was a white orchid.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Martin will reside in Kingston, where Mr. Martin will continue his graduate studies at Queen's University.

The bride was entertained previous to her marriage at a miscellaneous dessert shower with Mrs. G. G. Brearley, and her daughter, Mrs. William Jarvis, as co-hostesses. Mrs. E. S. Fairman and daughter, Barbara Joan, entertained at a dessert, bathroom and linen shower; a coffee party was given by Miss Muriel Gibson; Mrs. J. Franklin Hinchey gave a dinner party; Mrs. W. R. McCreary and Mrs. Frank McKeown entertained at a dessert, spice and recipe shower and Mrs. F. W. Sprague had a tea in her honor and Mrs J. Albert Warren of Kingston, aunt of the bride, gave a luncheon party.

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Easton McIntosh are shown signing the register following their recent marriage in St. Thomas' United Church by Rev. Ian Wilson. The bride is the former Ann Helen Franklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Franklin of London, England. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. McIntosh of St. Mary's, Ontario. McINTOSH — FRANKLIN

Lovely Shasta chrysanthemums, gladioli stocks, white gardenias and golden daffodils adorned the altar and chancel of St. Thomas' United Church, Belleville, and white satin bows the guest pews for a pretty May wedding on Saturday, May 6, at 2.30 p.m. when Miss Helen Franklin daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Franklin, of London, England, became the bride of Mr. Glen Easton McIntosh, of St. Mary's, Ontario, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. McIntosh. The Reverend Canon A. S. McConnell, rector of the church officiated.

Mr. Donald Davenport, church organist, provided the wedding music, for the professional and, reception, which included "Westminster Abbey Tune" and Purcell's "Trumpet Voluntary."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, who came by plane from England for the occasion, was radiantly lovely in her bridal gown of pure silk ivory peau de soie fashioned on princess lines designed in Victorian style. The fitted bodice featured puffed sleeves of Duchess lace, and the graceful full-length skirt extended to a chapel train. She wore a tiara headdress of lily-of-the-valley and a cascade bouquet surrounding a small white rose and elbow-length veil of Italian illusion falling from under a high chignon, and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses mingled with white and blue hyacinth florets and trailing ivy. Her only jewels a gold-link bracelet once belonging to her mother.

She was attended by her two cousins, the Misses Erin and Shelley Dougherty of Oshawa, the former as maid of honour, and the latter as flowergirl. Miss Erin Dougherty was most attractively attired in daffodil yellow and white brocade, similar in style to that of the bride's, but in ballerina-length. Her headdress was of three yellow daffodils in cluster style and she carried a cascade bouquet of mauve stocks and white hyacinth bells intermingled with ivy. Miss Shelley Dougherty frock with floral headdress of yellow Sweetheart roses arranged around a high chignon. She carried a nosegay of white pom pom mums and mauve stocks surrounded by a single yellow rose, the whole surrounded by yellow lacelon ribbon.

Mr. Donald MacGregor, of Belleville, attended the bridegroom, while Messrs. Terry Dougherty, of Oshawa, cousin of the bride, and Rudy Mcintosh, of St. Mary's, Ontario, ushered the guests.

Argyl Chapter IODE Honors Member

The May meeting of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the Armouries with the Regent, Mrs. A. Cunningham, presiding.

Correspondence included a letter from the I.O.D.E. referring to their campaign to raise funds for their new building. The J. R. Cooke Chapter I.O.D.E. extended an invitation to members of the Argyl Chapter to attend a tea in honor of their 50th anniversary on June 1st, at Stirling.

Mrs. E. Loucks brought along a selection of London, England papers received from her son, who is at present living there. These papers were interesting indeed to those present.

Mrs. A. Cunningham, Regent and Mrs. H. Campbell, 1st. vice-president, gave comprehensive reports on the annual provincial meeting of the I.O.D.E. held recently in Hamilton at which they represented the Argyll Chapter.

The members were pleased to receive from these ladies the gift of the book "Imperial Daughters of the Empire".

LIFE MEMBERSHIP

The outstanding event of the evening was the presentation of a Life Membership to Mrs. Ivan Thrasher, past Regent Mrs. A. Duffy. This was in recognition of many years of outstanding service which included fulfilling the duties of every office in the Chapter, including that of Regent.

Mrs. D. Riordan presented a report on the Provincial Belleville United Appeal, pebble campaign and publicity committee held at the Y.M.C.A. on April 13th, the Chapter being represented by Mrs. Riordan and Mrs. G. Miller.

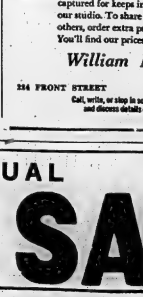
The Chapter's rummage sale was held in the Belleville Armouries on May 12th.

The next regular meeting is to take the form of a pot-luck supper and Mrs. A. Duffy kindly offered the use of her home for this purpose.

In connection to previous reports: the annual fall "Dessert Bridge" will be held as usual and a formal dance will be held in January.

Magazines available for men were collected to be sent to the Frontier College and Canadian troops in Germany.

The business portion of the meeting having been completed the members were shown an informative and helpful film on the subject of early diagnosis of breast cancer, presented by Mrs. K. Wilcox.



HOMECOOKING

The Argyll Chapter brought some homecooking to be raffled with the proceeds of the draw going toward the Chapter funds. It was won by Mrs. H. Vaughan.

An enjoyable social hour followed with refreshments being served by Mrs. Birkenshaw, Mrs. Noel, Mrs. Brisco and Mrs. Dulmage.

The Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. is a member of the Belleville United Appeal.

The Sadness of Waste

By ALMA MASON

How sad is the waste of wasteland. Such a life will God-given talent in the world today. So much of our youthful talent today, often plainly left to shiftless and decay! due to lack of guidance and interest on the part of individuals and groups. Often the abilities teeming in a promising young life are crowded into allen fields and rough and stony ground.

We prate of our free educational system, but all too frequently higher education is beyond the seeking hands of many worthy and intelligent men and women.

Bill belongs to an average, middle-class family. He possesses a very high I.Q. He has proven himself in high school a potential mathematical wizard. He passionately desires a higher education. There is illness and unemployment in his family, so Bill is unable to continue his education past the 13th grade. He finds it necessary to adjust to a job completely inferior to his tastes and ability. There are thousands of deplorable cases of such waste of intellect.

Greater than material waste or the waste of artistic talent, is the most vicious spread so wantonly before our eyes — the waste of the glowing spiritual gift of youth. Today's lack of the strong fibres of faith and purpose in the lives of our young is frightening.

This mechanized modern world seems to be bypassing the things of the spirit of the spirit to a marked degree. This — that waste of proper spiritual fulfillment and direction — will eventually wreck the human ship on the ragged rocks of lost hope.

How satisfying it is to see a group of young people developing in the starlight of God's plan; to view their life infused with courage and anchored convictions; with mental progression and the perfection of spiritual balance. Such young life will never experience any type of root or decay — will exhibit no blemish, no tarnish, no desert

Second Glance

By Viva Richmond Graham

THE DESIRE ACCOMPLISHED

" . . . but, When the desire cometh, it is a tree of life."—Proverbs XIII-12.

It cannot be denied!

The saying, "Truth is stranger than fiction," is a very old one.

But, today, when we came upon an old program of a play we had seen, many years ago, at His Majesty's Theatre, London, England, this saying took on meaning anew; fresh and compelling.

At the time of our attendance, His Majesty's Theatre to us was just another theatre, rather old and ornate. Of its history, we knew nothing. We were not even aware, then, that one day we should be living in Belleville. Today, we came unexpectedly across this forgotten program in a corner of the bookcase, which suddenly assumed an aspect rare and uncommon in our eyes, due to certain knowledges that has come to light since we first came by it. Knowledges that links Belleville and the Opening of Her Majesty's Theatre which took place exactly 84 years ago, on that very day of writing: April 29th, back in 1897.

Let us turn back to that day, Her Majesty's (changed to His Majesty's after Queen Victoria's death,) is the most handsome new theatre in all London. Amazing, indeed, that an actor and producer could withstand such a one, its estimated cost, around 55,000 pounds. It is of Georgian style with red granite trim; a mixture of Louis XIV and XV in its decorations. It has small, but customed commercial palaces of mirrors and red-plush, but, however, unassuming is that of a temple of art. Even George Bernard Shaw, the noted drama critic writes:

"You feel you are in a place where high comedy is to be enacted and dignified things to be done."

Up there, in the theatre's dome is the owner's beautifully executed portrait, surrounded with a huge dialog room for the understatement of theatrical friends of the unusual actor, producer and proprietor - Herbert Beerbohm Tree, (later knighted).

By magic of imagination, let us John Mc. Tree, who stands in the theatre wings, back-stage, on this opening night. Instead of reading from a book or letter in hand, he is intently watching the house fill with patrons (The Prince of Wales is among them and many of the aristocracy) led by liveried ushers to their seats as subsequently, supplied with free program unmarred by advertisements, the orchestra, partially concealed by stately potted palms, plays such compositions as many prefer to listen rather than chat.

Curtain time is near so let us query Mr. Tree about his love for the stage, as he happens to be near. "Forgive me, I didn't recognize you in my disguise!" and answers:

"To act has been my sole ambition in life ever since I was 17. I was born June 17, 1853. My father, Julius Beerbohm, grain merchant and widower, having re-married was busy rearing a second family. Neither you've heard of my half-brother, Max Beerbohm — the clever caricaturist and drama critic, who, finding he lacks ability refuses to criticize my acting or plays! At any rate, my father deeply resented a son of his becoming an actor. Acting, he said, was only for those who could reach the top of the tree and stay there. 'Hence my name!' I told him and have used it ever since, for I meant to climb to the very top. Yes, tonight is a great moment. Tonight, I covet no man's mantle for the public has given me one of my own."

The lights dim. It's curtain time. "But, of course you must stay for the performance!" we are urged. How great a privilege it would be; to see this thrilling night, the dramatization of the novel, and chosen above all other, for this inauguration. "The Seats of the Mighty" by Gilbert Parker, (knighted also) — formerly of Belleville!

For two such men, "the desire accomplished" must have been sweet in the soul." (To be Continued)

Bellevigenite: The kind interest shown by readers concerning "Vasar's Canadian Days" is most rewarding and many, many thanks. May we take this opportunity to clarify Vasser's place as "America's first women's college?" It's based on being, to quote Ida Bulletin, "the only women's college with equipment and endowment comparable to that of the best men's colleges," and deeply regret to infer that Vassar was the only available college for women's studies, at men of its day. For example, Mount Holyoke was founded in 1836 and so happens to be, as a note of local interest, the Alma Mater of Miss Jessie Forrester, 65 Bridge Street, E., Belleville, Ont. It is a very good know, a niece of the late Sir Gilbert Parker.

Opportunity Shop Receipts Total $11,000

The Opportunity Shop of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, Belleville General Hospital, has been in service to the people of Belleville and surrounding district for over 12 years. It fills a dual purpose, as a busy centre for shoppers and as a "clearing-house" for the Women's Hospital Auxiliary. All the proceeds go directly for the good of the Hospital and the patients.

The merchants and citizens of Belleville and surrounding towns have been most generous in donating saleable articles to the Shop, which has enabled it to earn over $11,000 during the last three years. This has been done by accepting articles on consignment on a 50 per cent basis, and by outright donations. All household articles and clothing will be gratefully received, and if you wish them picked up, will you kindly phone any of the staff.

PERSONNEL

The shop is conveniently located on Front, with a staff of 55 workers. The articles are priced by a committee under the direction of Mrs. J. C. Young and Mrs. R. van Everdingen, Mrs. Alex Wilson is shop treasurer.

The entire group of workers merit a great deal of praise for a job well done.

Cruickshank as acting District Commissioner, outlined the immediate activities of the Guides and Brownies. Special attention was directed toward the Bowl Carnival in June and the Girl Guide Camp in July. Camping equipment is needed, particularly a new sleeping tent. Mrs. R. Chesson, of Mrs. Latchford, accepted convener, agreed to contact the Scouts regarding the waterproofing of the present tent.

At the close of the meeting, the ladies were invited to refreshments and a social time was enjoyed.

The next meeting is to be held on May 30th, at the home of Mrs. Letitia Sisley, Dorcas Ave.

WMS Group Visits Hastings County Home

RAWDON — Nine members of Rawdon United Church Women's Missionary Society, with Mrs. Gordon Carr, Peterborough, Bethel, West Huntingdon and Mount Pleasant groups, visited the Hastings County Home, Belleville on May 3rd. A special devotional service was held in the library under the direction of the president and the treasurer gave the meditation based on the 23rd Psalm.

Mrs. Max Murphy and Mrs. Carleton Foth led in the assembly singing of old-fashioned hymns and also well-known songs of yesteryear. Selections were rendered by Mrs. Raymond McConnell, Mrs. W. G. Fletcher, Mrs. Manning Wrightman and the committee presented the scrap book of Africa to the library.

Mrs. Kenneth Yorke and her committee took the group of 27 ladies on a tour of the building and later they were served light refreshments. This was the first visit of several of the ladies to the County Home and they were pleased to have such opportunity.

The elderly lady inmates of the Home thoroughly enjoyed the program.

TIPS ON TRAIN TRAVEL

Are you planning that first overnight trip by train? Are you a little nervous about just how to conduct yourself? I ask these questions because I have received several letters from young girls who are planning trips when school closes within the next few weeks. The following suggestions should help make the going easier.

My first little word of advice is to learn right at the start that it is all right to ask questions in an unfamiliar situation. Many a red face, caused by lack of experience, can be avoided if this is done. Don't be shy about asking a porter or dining room waiter about anything you don't understand. That's what they are there for, to help and serve you.

The most important rule is observe, and one that should be adhered to rigidly, is to avoid conversation with strangers. While it may be embarrassing not to join in the conversation that the woman, or man, across the aisle tries to start with you, it is best to terminate their overtures as quickly and graciously, as possible. Better to seem a bore, or even rude, than to run the risk of getting involved in a situation that might develop into unpleasantness. This is the time when aloofness and dignity are greatly to be desired. Getting ready for bed is the most confusing process when you're riding in a coach car, but of course this is no problem if you are riding in a coach car, you're taking a train trip over your clothes. If in a pullman, the ladies' room will be quite simple, when you know how! When it is time to go to bed, and the berth has been made up, ring the bell by your seat. This will summon the porter. You then ask him to make up your berth. Be sure that this is explained to the person who will occupy the other berth in your section.

While the section is being made up, retire to the dressing room at the end of the car and prepare for bed. Be sure to take all your belongings back with you.

Put on a robe, or your coat over your nightclothes when you return to your berth. Don't be embarrassed. You will find others attired in the same manner, I can assure you that this is perfectly correct. It is more desirable than to attempt to undress in your berth. Be sure to ask a conductorist to accomplish this feat! In the morning simply reverse the dressing room routine.

And now to breakfast. Upon entering the dining car, you will be shown to a table by a steward. You write your own order on the order check the waiter gives you. Remember a 15 per cent tip is proper for the waiter, 10c is considered right for the stewart, unless he does you a special service.

When you reach your destination, the car porter will place your bags on the station platform. His tip should be not less than 50 cents for an all-night ride, and he has given you any special attention.

COMPULSORY HEALTH

In ancient Sparta, girls were given demanding physical training in the belief that they might later give birth to healthy children.

Good Food, Mama's Cooking Still Catskills' Attractions

By Shirley and Bob Sloane

Liberty, N. Y. — In the not-quite-forgotten days around the turn of the century, New York's immigrant sweatshop laborers would sit of summer nights on the fire escapes and stoop steps of their tenements and dream.

To people who were always hungry and tired, and often sick, the dream was beautiful. It was of a place with cool green mountains and trees and grass, with a rocking chair on a porch where they could sit and enjoy the warmth of the summer sun so unlike the heat of the sidewalks and sweatshops. The younger ones even envisioned a room for handball, the only sport most tenement dwellers knew.

Above all, went the dream, there would be — three times a day — lots of food, far more than enough to feed all the hungry mouths for which there was not then enough.

The only things withing hailing distance of New York that resembled mountains were the craggy Catskills 100 miles to the north, just about the confluence of the Hudson and Delaware Rivers, where they were funneled into the city from the vast reaches of Upstate.

Eventually a few of the former farmers collected enough money to return to the area and among the lakes and valleys where Rip Van Winkle slept for 20 years, and where the occasional storms still echoed the bowling of the legendary ghosts.

But it wasn't very good soil for tilling. The climate money better than vegetables by taking in boarders. And when the best began to melt the chewing gum stuck to the city's sidewalks.

They gave them a room with a kerosene lamp, kitchen privileges or Mama's cookin, lots of good cheap country food. Sanitary facilities are worse than those of the tenements, but better adapted to country living.

Eventually the farmhouses started to collect summer hotels. First came Victorian monstrosities, blown-up versions of the mansions of old-time wealthy in Bay Ridge and Manhasset. Then someone learned what an architect was. There, Tudor structures with great gables and half-timbering lined up like soldiers, handball courts popped up, sometimes with the name of the hotel and its operating family.

And of course there was lots of good, fresh, homestyle food, still cooked in the kitchen by Mama.

The tudor and Victorian monstrosities of the handball courts still remain in this most desolately visited of all resort areas. But the guest accommodations' residents by 100 to one in summer. The summer and working girls of the city where the summer heat is like unto no other in the land, have found places that now reach as far upstown as Madison Avenue.

But 'so' do the foremen and shop owners, as well as ambassadors and actors and aviators (a few hotels have their own landing strip). Handball is now listed under "Miscellaneous Activities" in the hotels, behind boating, fishing, golf, tanning, riding, swimming, tennis and even bicycling, skiing and tobogganing, for some hotels are now open all year.

And there are cabanas and card rooms, television rooms and Terrace Rooms, playhouses playrooms and steam rooms. In the most elaborate vacation resorts, there are nursery and children's thickset population centre, times the tastes have changed.

A few things haven't. One is the Mama-style food — this is the last stronghold of the good, hearty satisfying Eastern European cooking beside which the haute cuisine of the French seems decadent and suitable only for dieting and invalids. Though Miami is likely a bewildered second now, supplanted by pastry chefs and chefs saucier, the spirit of her cooking still pervades the kitchens.

FAMILY MANAGEMENT

Another thing that hasn't changed is the unconquerable importance of personal family management. Nowhere has it better represented than in the most typical and best known hotel of them all, the Crossinger Country Club where Eddie Fisher once sang for his supper and Milton Berle used to keep the guests amused on rainy days.

Like most I.B.M. grows; Its directory now lists an assortment of more than 45 families, shops and services — including handball.

But most guest come here for two reasons; to eat Grossinger's food and to meet Jennie Grossinger, the magnetic and beautiful grand dame who for 47 years has literally maintain the hotel's reputation for an unlikely combination of intimacy and sophistication.

Jennie no longer gets'ules fish, and liver or mixed meats as she used to. With 1,000 screen and 800 employees, the hotel is too big for that today.

But its success, and that of the dwellings of old-time wealthy in Bay Ridge and Catskills. There's a lesson to be learned for architect was. There, Tudor structures with great gables and half-timbering lined up like soldiers, handball courts popped up, sometimes with the name of the hotel and its operating family.

And of course there was lots of good, fresh, homestyle food, still cooked in the kitchen by Mama.

The tudor and Victorian monstrosities of the handball courts still remain in this most desolately visited of all resort areas. But the guest accommodations' residents by 100 to one in summer. The summer and working girls of the city where the summer heat is like unto no other in the land, have found places that now reach as far upstown as Madison Avenue.

Going Places

Jill R. — After all these years, suddenly I'm too easily in bed for him.

Roy R. — He's changed from a heavy to a light sleeper, so you must be quiet now.

• • •

Jill R. — If we were newlyweds, I could study Roy's pattern and try to please him. But we've been married 26 years; I though I knew him well and did what we'd worked out a design for living and especially for a smooth sailing existence that satisfied us both.

Now suddenly he insists upon so many conditions for inducing his own slumber that I'm forced out of my cozy, comfortable bed. Once he says good night, he must stay a-bed — not of a page being turned, a pillow being puffed, nor fruit juice being poured.

It happens that none of these things bothered him before. Through the years, I've formed the habit of falling asleep while clutching magazines and a bedtime snack. So now, it's either sleep in the living room or lie awake in the dark for half the night.

• • •

Roy R. — Jill forgets that I'm older now and it's harder to fall asleep. In the early years of our marriage, I was a down-to-dust sleeper. All that physical exertion made me pop off into deep sleep the minute my head hit the pillow. But now I'm an executive. My responsibilities involve mental strain and less activity. So, once I'm settled for sleep, I want absolute silence to help me doze off.

But there's Jill's light. I can ignore that, however. What kills my night is the piercing noise involved in reading in bed. You'd never believe how loud a newspaper sounds in a silent room.

I've asked Jill to confine her literary pursuits at bedtime to small books and pamphlets sure by there will plenty of nonrustling things she can read. If read she must, to get her to sleep.

• • •

The Council — Here's a fair warning to young folks still accounting. A light sleeper and a heavy reader are headed for separate bedrooms sooner or later. With the R.'s it, looks like "later."

Any other combo can share a bedroom, especially the reverse of the R.'s: a heavy sleeper and a light reader. But the R.'s have several problems here and since it's not so easy for them to adjust to change now as it would be for newlyweds — as Jill points out — apartness in sleeping quarters may be the only answer.

This is no tragedy and, if coast-to-coast surveys were made, results would probably indicate separate bedrooms to be a widespread pattern among middle-aged and elderly married couples. The price of a good night's sleep must often be a temporary lapse in togetherness.

First, however, Jill must try all reasonable compromises between wakefulness and the nocrinkling pages, the short-term discomforts of the room it shares now with Roy. But if these adjustments fail, it he's still roused by a pin drop and she's still unrunspilling by the sports of reading, then one of them must move out of that cozy, comfortable bed," described by Jill. Eventually, let's hope, there'll be an equally cozy bed in another room, of else that their fall-asleep patterns will change again and become more harmonious.

One thought, however, for Mr. and Mrs. R. is much on insomnia much as there are some matrimonial cases where one person is a light sleeper and the other a heavy, noisy bedtime reader, and they sleep happily together year after year — there may be other incompatibilities in this relationship. The sleep disorder may merely point up a deficiency between Jill and Roy, else she might long ago have modified her bedtime program, or he, in turn, might have learned to tolerate her regimens.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Won't Discuss Problems

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I always read your column and think you give very sensible answers. I hope you can help me.

After 10 years of marriage my husband left a good job in a store to start his own business. He put every cent into it and lost it all.

Now he just won't settle down again. He has lost two jobs and is selling from door to door. The commissions are miserable and not nearly enough for the four of us to live on. When I ask him what to do he tells me to borrow from somebody. I've done that too much already.

He won't talk things over with me and walks out if I try to button him down. I am worried sick. What can I do?—STUMPED.

* * *

DEAR STUMPED:—He won't talk because he is stumped too, and he feels guilty. It's not fair because he eats at your table and leaves you the problem of finding the food. Yet the fact that he has a job, poor as it is, means he is trying.

There are several things you can do. Get a job yourself part time for the hours when the children are at school. If you can't do this, see your welfare department about help in meeting your need for basic things like food and clothing.

Also, see the social worker at your local Children's Aid Society. She will discuss your whole situation with you, including your debts, your husband's failure to discuss things with you and his need for suitable work. Together you will be able to work towards a solution—and she will keep it confidential. Have no fear about that.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—I'm considering putting my boys on an allowance. They are 12 and 14 and they keep asking us for money for everything. They think money grows on trees.

My husband says they will just use an allowance right up and still come to us whenever they need money for anything. It will only mean they have extra to squander. What do you think?—NANCY.

* * *

DEAR NANCY:—A set allowance is the answer. But your boys will still think money grows on trees if you pick a dollar off a branch every time they ask for it.

An allowance only works when the word means that is all you will allow. Perhaps having a lump sum will go to their heads the first time or so, but this will change when they discover that's all there is until the next allowance is due. You must be firm about this.

If they don't learn now to handle what they have, a rude awakening will come when they find themselves on their own and having to manage. At its worst, this can result in a lifetime of no savings, unbalanced spending and debts.

And for your generous indulgence you will find only blame.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—Are we being unreasonable to insist on knowing who our daughter goes out with? She is just 16, but she says it embarrasses her to have to ask her boy friend in when he calls for her, and to never be able to go some place else to meet him.

I feel we ought to at least get a look at him before we put our daughter in his hands.—DAD.

* * *

DEAR DAD:—Bravo! You couldn't be righter. Meet him, have a chat with him, tell both of them when you want her home.

Let him feel you are friendly, but also that you have a daughter you prize and who must be well taken care of. This does no harm and a great deal of good.

Teach your daughter how to make a proper introduction and that this is all part of gracious grown-up living. She will come to see its advantages and be proud of this kind of interest.

* * *

DEAR DORIS:—Wonderful new friends from a church nearby have made it possible for me to start living again. I am just getting over a long illness and my husband is back at work following ten months of unemployment.

My trouble is that now someone has called on me from the church to pledge to give a weekly amount. With all the debts I have I cannot afford such a pledge. Yet I feel mean if I refuse.—NEWCOMER.

* * *

DEAR NEWCOMER — It is no sin to be poor. Things are on the upgrade now.

If you cannot afford a pledge, say so, and explain your position. When you can carry your weight, later on, you will have a chance to show just how much you have appreciated the interest of your church friends by contributing effort—and money when you can. And to give a little—even a widow's mite—will do the church, and you, good.

* * *

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Jordan Slides Shown at U.C. Auxiliary

FRANKFORD — The Evening Auxiliary of Frankford United Church was held on Wednesday evening in the church. The president, Mrs. Jack Beach opened the meeting.

Mrs. Beach, on behalf of the Auxiliary, welcomed all visitors. The secretarial report was given and roll call showed 26 members present.

The women of the church received an invitation to attend the Johnstown "Blossom Tea" and sale to be held Thursday, May 18th, from 2-5 p.m. in the Glen Miller hall.

The eastern sectional meeting will be held on June 6th at Castleton, Ont.

Miss Margaret Halliday from Angola, Africa, will be the guest speaker.

A meeting for all the ladies of the church will take place on May 23rd in Stockdale United Church with Mrs. Dobbs giving particulars in regard to the new organization, "The United Church Women."

The Evening Auxiliary representatives on the provincial committee are: Mrs. Raymond Rowe, Mrs. Lawrence Way and Mrs. Harold Rowe.

Mrs. Claude Moran reported that the auxiliary had purchased 40 cups of cream and sugar dishes for the kitchen.

The worship service opened with the singing of a hymn. The Scripture reading was given by Miss Colleen Chase, from St. Luke 10: 30-37. Miss Sandra Morrow gave a commentary "On Facing Our Obstacles."

Mrs. Preston Chase introduced the speaker speaker, Mrs. C. C. Aiton of Tweed, and her husband. Mrs. Aiton showed some lovely slides of the Holy Land, and gave an interesting commentary on various places pertaining to the Scriptures.

At appropriate places in showing the slides, the following musical numbers were rendered: Mrs. Walter Morrow, a vocal solo, "In The Garden;" the men's quartet, Harry Slingerland, Ernie Wallace, Francis Lyons and Ron Mitts, rendered the number, "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" Miss Bonnie Rowe rendered the solo, "I Walked Today Where Jesus Walked."

The Rev. C. Judd closed this portion of the meeting with prayer.

Mrs. Frank Moran on behalf of the auxiliary, thanked the guest speaker.

The offering was received and the silver portion was to go as a special offering to "The Christian Arabs."

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

For a few weeks before Mother's Day, fathers and children are bombarded with suggestions and ideas for presents for Mother and how to entertain the guest of honor on the big day. We never know whether to believe the stories told about families going to such elaborate lengths with the inevitable result that Mother has to take over in sheer desperation or to protect her home. We suspect this is done to make a good comedy story.

Not many songs about Mother come out in the popular line nowadays. This is probably a good thing for we shudder to think what they might be like. Those old ones are pretty sugary and schmaltzy and modern Mothers may not appreciate them too much. Take the well-known one which came out roughly about forty years ago, "M-O-T-H-E-R"; how many of the lines hold good today?

M — well, Mother might still go along with that one, but Father will say he comes in for recogni"on along that line. "The million things she gives me — the modern family might say, "A million is a good round figure, but don't you think it is a bit exaggerated?"

— this one, Mother won't like at all — if she ever did! No woman of, say age likes to be told she is growing old even if it is meant as a tribute.

O — this one, Mother won't ohologically. Tears never accomplish anything. They age and just give your family a guilt complex which makes them act worse than ever. Tears are for yourself and only in the privacy of your closet.

E — this is the most tenable one, but is an attribute to both parents. "Eyes with love-light shining" does not seem to have been lost in the shuffle. There is no happiness compared to that of showing off the family or being proud of them. This is often embarrassing to children, but it is fine as long as the "lovelight shining" does occure in private as well as in public.

R — this one, ask any Mother, is as wrong as wrong can be, especially with children from five to twenty-five. How often do you hear, "I'm never right," or "They never let me do anything." It is amazing how wise parents suddenly become after the children start to acquire a little wisdom of their own.

"Put them all together, they spell Mother, the word that means the world to me." That would not really sound so badly if echoes of the horrible renditions heard over the years did not come ringing back on our ears.

Mothers are peculiar, as any child will tell you. Richard Brinsley Sheridan said, "A fluent tongue is the only thing a mother don't like her daughter to resemble her in." Disraeli said in a speech, "The author who speaks about his own books is almost as bad as a mother who talks about her own children."

Coleridge, more seriously, said, "A mother is a mother still. The holiest thing alive." Elizabeth Allen wrote, "No love like mother - love ever has shone; No other worship abides and endures."

Let us finish with a verse from Tennyson; even the psychologists might not disagree with this too much:

Happy he
With such a mother! faith in womankind
Beats with his blood, and trust in all things high
Comes easy to him; and though he trip and fall,
He shall not blind his soul with clay."

4 reasons why you can SAVE from 15% to 25% on G-K bonded DRUG PRESCRIPTIONS

G-K prescriptions are dispensed to your Doctor's exacting order—on the same day—from a convenient downtown location. Yet you pay from 15% to 25% less than average Toronto prices. Read why...

1 G-K SPECIALIZE IN DRUGS AND DRUG PRODUCTS ONLY

Your G-K Pharmacist does the work he is trained to do—in the drug dispensary. He is a pharmacist full-time. He does not waste his training selling greeting cards, cameras and cosmetics. By devoting all his efforts to drugs alone your G-K pharmacist works at full efficiency, full time. Out of his greater efficiency come many economies which are returned to you in the form of lower prescription prices.

℞

2 G-K HIGH VOLUME CUTS WASTE TO THE MINIMUM

Drugs only remain "fresh" and effective a certain length of time. For this reason, a large percentage of drugs sold to drug stores in Ontario must be discarded. The consumer pays for this by paying higher costs for the effective drugs that are dispensed. At G-K we dispense a large volume of prescriptions per month. This high volume allows us to keep waste down to a minimum of our total drug supply. At G-K you do not have to pay for large quantities of drugs which have been destroyed.

℞

3 G-K'S LOW OVERHEAD SAVES YOU FROM PAYING FOR SERVICES YOU DO NOT NEED

G-K service is cash-and-carry or by mail. You do not indirectly pay the costs of maintaining delivery and credit departments. G-K work shorter hours—till 5.30 p.m. downtown. You do not indirectly pay the salaries of a staff who work unprofitably long hours. And at G-K you do not pay for an elaborate layout. Our store is plain, businesslike and stark white throughout. In fact, it's so much like your drug store used to be that we think you will like it!

℞

4 GENERIC NAME PRESCRIPTIONS IF YOU AND YOUR DOCTOR WISH

Where two products of identical quality are available, G-K will use the less expensive product—provided your doctor approves. We ask that you have your doctor phone us for a discussion of the most economical way of filling your prescription requirements. We will not force you to pay for an expensive brand name product when a less expensive product of equal quality is available.

Find out how G-K can help you cut your prescription costs by 15% to 25%. For a free quotation on your prescription—

Centre St. W.A. Sponsors Spring Tea

The W.A. of Centre Street Church held its recent spring tea on a perfect spring-like day.

Mrs. Longhurst and Mrs. Routt received the guests at the door.

The large tea table was beautiful with its lace cloth and a large bouquet of spring flowers in the centre, flanked by silver candelabra with yellow and green candles.

The small tea tables looked dainty with their white lace cloths, centred by a vase of tiny daffodils.

Several booths were prettily adorned. The home baking table, convened by Mrs. K. Ferguson and Mrs. Draddy, was a "Mecca" for the shoppers as it was laden with all kinds of delicious home-baked food.

The candy table was convened by Mrs. Vanderwater and Mrs. Collins while the touch and take table was in charge of Mrs. W. Schaenchen.

Presiding at the silver tea services the first hour were Mrs. Bailey, president of Ladies Hill W.A. and Mrs. Boyd, president of Cannifton W.A. At the second hour, Mrs. Empson and Mrs. Routt poured.

Those serving were Mesdames D. Hudgins, G. Murray, L. Jones and Ted Keller.

Filling tea pots were Mrs. Rylott; kitchen convener, Mrs. A. Hawley; making tea, Mrs. Butterton; replenishing plates, Mrs. G. McLeod, Mrs. Lickfold, Mrs. Bunnett, Mrs. F. Stapley and Mrs. Morris assisted in the kitchen.

General convener was Mrs. L. Longhurst; co-convener, Mrs. Keller.

Mrs. G. Wood had charge of tickets at the door.

Thanks and appreciation are in order to all who helped to make this "Spring Tea" such a delightful event.

A PIECE of foam rubber or a hunk cut from a kitchen sponge will effectively fit extra ice room in oversized rubbers or boots. This kind of padding is better than heavy paper, and will stay in place. Teen-agers — Hitch Your Wagon to a Star

BY DORIS CLARE

Your job should be your fun. Look at it this way; eight out of every 24 hours you spend sleeping; half the remainder you spend at work. Why not be working at something you enjoy?

When a girl or boy finds the right career, then work is fun! And this goes for you. Even if at this moment you just can't see a single job for which you seem to have a natural bent; if you can't make a speech or paint a picture; if you feel ordinary and uninspired, you do have natural talents peculiar to you which, when spotted, can bring you a lifetime of satisfaction.

FALSE CLUES

Don't think, just because your father is an accountant and wants you to follow in his footsteps, that that settles it. Perhaps you'd make a much better draughtsman or plumber. A dentist who should have been a farmer can lead an unhappy frustrated life, even if he does have a good income.

One girl started out as a typist when her heart was set on being a librarian. But the business course cost less. In spite of being a misfit, she cannot change and take a library course because she feels her family needs her income. Only as you get on the wood track, it's tough making a switch.

Perhaps too many young people have their hearts set on "glamor" jobs like being an airline stewardess, a doctor or a television star. The stewardess, for all her training and personality, gives long hours of backbreaking personal service to airline passengers. A doctor must be at the beck and call of many sick people, day and night. A television star goes through many hours of gruelling rehearsal to turn out one perfect performance.

Your job, whatever it is, will have plenty of glamor for you.

TALENTS CAN BE TABBED

Some lucky ones sight their particular star early. They best; if you can't make it and hang right on. But most of us need help with the selection.

Many schools now have vocational counsellors who can give that help. They consider not only your school standing but your special interests. They give tests of mental ability and aptitudes. They talk to you, to your teacher and to your parents, if necessary, to get a total picture of your personality and ability.

It is no hit or miss business. In a scientific fashion, today's vocational guidance expert can measure, evaluate and draw helpful conclusions about you. He won't actually select your future, because your own strong inclinations are important in your final choice. But he will direct the natural lines of your thinking. And a compelling interest on your part can overcome serious obstacles.

WHAT'S IN DEMAND?

Your counsellor will know the market, too. What's the use of taking a course in glassblowing, no matter how promising your natural talent is for it, if all glass is now mass-produced? Or why train to be a blacksmith, even if you love horses, when everybody drives a car?

If you cannot get the counselling you need in your own school or community, there are guidance services in every province. For information about where to go, write to your provincial department of education.

ASK—READ — SEE FOR YOURSELF

Our counsellor had told Bob Jennings he had social skills. But Bob had his own ideas. His father was an engineer; and Bob applied for entrance to the college engineering course. Luckily for him he was not accepted.

Then began a long list of inquiries. Should he consider the ministry? Or law? What about being a teacher? He had been a track and football hero but at first he did not connect this with a possible career. Eventually, the clue came from his coach and Bob was thrilled. The career? He is now director of recreation and physical education for a large Canadian high school—and having the time of his life.

Whatever your leanings, enough skilful reading, consulting of experts and looking at jobs, will guide you to the right decision.

Once you fix your sights on your star, the way to get into orbit is to take training. Nowadays you can even take schooling in how to run a service station. Courses cost money but are worth every cent. And where there's a will, there's a way.

QUESTION:

Will you please send me your recipe for Baked Alaska. It was in the paper a long time ago, I cut out, and lost it. — Mrs. A.P.A.

ANSWER:

I am repeating this old time favorite because I think it will be welcome to others.

BAKED ALASKA

Make a meringue of 4 egg whites by beating until it holds its shape, then gradually add 8 tablespoons sugar and pinch of salt keeping mixture stiff (use fine granulated or fruit sugar), fold in lightly 1-2 teaspoon vanilla. Cover a bread board with heavy brown paper, arrange a square or rectangular sheet of cake or layer cake about 3-4" thick on board, leaving a margin of 1" around board. Then place one quart brick of very firm ice cream on top of cake, being careful to leave a margin of 1-2" of cake all around the ice cream. Cover cake and ice cream entirely with the meringue; spread evenly. The trick lies in entirely covering both ice cream and cake, leaving no bare spots. Place board in hot oven (450 deg. Fahr. until cake is delicately brown. The Baked Alaska must be watched constantly. It may brown in 5 minutes or it may take 5 minutes. Depending on how the heat circulates at the top of each individual oven. Remove Baked Alaska from oven at once and serve at once. Serves 8.

QUESTION:

Our family is very fond of homemade bread, so I clipped your recipe for white bread and tried it. The result was heavy bread. I followed the recipe very closely and everything seemed to go well until the dough was shaped into loaves and put into pans to rise. After 1 1-2 hours the centre of the loaf had not risen any higher than the edge of the pan. (Pan measures 7 1-2" long, 4" wide, 3 1-4" deep). I left it another 40 minutes and it didn't seem to have risen any higher, so I baked it, and was very disappointed. I had put the dough in the warming oven of my electric stove (after I had heated the warming oven until it was warm) to rise. It rose nicely the first time, but after it was punched down and put in the pans, it was very slow in rising. Do you suppose it would have risen more if I had left it all longer? Should the dough be left to rise in a place where there is an even temperature at all times? The warming oven had cooled off by the time the bread should have been ready to bake. . . . Nothing would make my happier than to be able to make a good loaf of bread. — Mrs. Lillian R.

ANSWER:

Your letter coincided with a phone call from Marianne asking the same question. My sister was going to Ottawa so together they figured it out. They put a shallow pan of boiling hot water in bottom of unheated oven and put shaped loaves in pans above it, and closed the door and left it to rise for 1 1-2 hours. It was dandy and high. It was removed to top of stove while oven was heated to bake it. Try this, Lillian.

Marjorie of the Dumbells, Remember Her? Well, She's Now Living in a Log Cabin

By IRA DEYARMOND
Canadian Press Staff Writer

PLEASANT VALLEY, N.S. (CP) — Marjorie of the Dumbells, like many a trencherman of the First World War, now is a memory.

Marjorie was born of an idea on a sombre battlefield in France. Her popularity as a joke wildfire through the troops and lasted for 10 years after the war on stages across the North American continent. Then it faded.

Ross Hamilton, the Nova Scotia soldier who took to skirts, lipstick and falsetto song in one of history's most successful morale - boosting efforts for troops, now lives quietly in a log cabin he helped build for himself near this hamlet in central Nova Scotia.

MANY MEMORIES

He's bald now, and has a modest paunch, but there's a twinkle in his blue eyes, and he can sing a mean soprano yet. He chops wood, tends the garden, rides his horse a little and relaxes.

He will tell his exact age, but admits he's in the middle 60s. He likes conversation and reading newspapers, but above all he likes offering tips on the stage to interested young people.

He likes story-telling, and the story he loves most is one he Marjorie and the Dumbells.

It began before the 1917 Vimy battle, in which the Canadians suffered heavy casualties.

"We were in the front 11 of us, all with the 3rd Canadian Division," he said in an interview. "We got the colonel's permission and put on a concert for the boys. The first one was in an old barn.

"If anyone had told me at that time I'd come back to Canada as a woman I would have killed him," he said. Whether then was a tough soldier with a fine soprano voice, a less five feet 11-"

Anyway, after a few performances in France, Hamilton began to form a group and go around to the various troops and billets all over France. We called ourselves the Dumbells because that was the thing on our shirts."

SHORTER SKIRTS

Five of the company acted as girls, and six were boys. "We had to have six boys to help attract the boys," he said. "Believe me, we did, too. I didn't like to wear a skirt without first changing back to men's clothes.

"I was the leading lady. For our very first show my gown was made of sheets. They were on. It was covered by curtain cause. My hat was a helmet covered with-canvas, curled and ed feathers. And my first heads were a rosary."

With songs such as Girls Me a Little Cozy Corner, Widows are Wonderful and If you Were the Only Girl the little group packed many houses in Canadian theatres for two years.

They went to London to play for a week, and stayed three months.

Back at Halifax they were disbanded, but soon reorganized. The old Mohawk Road, the crew are making tests of the runways to determine their condition after being unused for a number of years.

Apparently the runways are in excellent shape as the measurements directly on a solid rock foundation. There is no conjecture as to whether this survey would have any bearing on the airport being used for commercial enterprise as there has been speculation as yet regarding the location of the commercial field desired for

T.V. SUGGESTION REWARDED

A local resident was enriched by $25. for a suggestion to the CBC program, "Front Page Challenge".

Bill Ferguson, February, Wilfred O'Brien of Sundial Street submitted the name of the Australian Naval Officer, Evans, who rescued President Kennedy of the United States from the Japanese in 1943. On Tuesday night show of last week this suggestion was used and Mr. O'Brien was given credit for it. As a result he will receive a cash award of $25.

The chairman of the local branch was the campaign chairman. Mrs. J. D. Dawson was also grateful with the response of the people of the town to this the first endeavor of the society locally.

TESTING RUNWAYS

Some employees of the Department of Transport are presently engaged in testing the runways at the Deseronto Airport. They have been several days on the job but the exact nature of their work is not known. According to information received from the office of the Indian Affairs Branch, who control the Airport but the Mohawk Band, the crew are making tests of the runways to determine their condition after being unused for a number of years.

Apparently the runways are in excellent shape as the measurements directly on a solid rock foundation. There is no conjecture as to whether this survey would have any bearing on the airport being used for commercial enterprise as there has been speculation as yet regarding the location of the commercial field desired for

FAMED WAR MEMORY — Ross Hamilton, the Nova Scotia soldier who turned to lipstick and skirts, poses as he portrayed 11-member troupe that helped boost morale of Canadian troops in the First World War. The group—five acted as girls and six were boys—performed with their show across North America for many years after the war. Hamilton now lives quietly on a log cabin near Pleasant Valley in central Nova Scotia. (CP Photo)

Hamilton opposed this but was overruled.

Marjorie quit at that point. "I hated I couldn't compete with a beautiful girl," he recalls.

For the next 10 years he was on and off the stage. In Toronto in 1930 he worked with the Chin Yu revue, then joined up for the Second World War.

The soft-singing sweetheart of the Dumbells slipped from public view. But Marjorie was not forgotten. In 1953 six of the earlier Dumbells including Ross Hamilton were cheered by a packed house of 2,000 at Toronto's Massey Hall. The occasion was a salute to Brig. Hamilton Gault, and the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

OLD FAVORITES

The Dumbells on the occasion brought tears of sentiment and joyous applause with songs like Pack Up Your Troubles and Take Me Back to Dear Old Blighty. The audience, including many old sweets, joined in, and for Ross hours were back in the trenches.

Hamilton has died off 20 Canada in 3 weeks before that show and Marjorie was acclaimed as a "virtuosus and graceful . . . always enchanting, never mincing."

After the last show were Jack Ayer of Toronto who wrote some of the Dumbells' original songs and Ben Greene, who did his famous piece, the kit inspection. Reg Lafferty, Alan Murray and Jack McLaren.

The original Dumbells, as Hamilton remembers them, included Capt. Merton Plunkett and his brother Al, of Orillia, Ont.; Bill Teasant, Winnipeg; Ted Chartier, New York; Bertram Langley, Toronto; George Brayford of Western Canada; Elmer Bolding of New York; Leonard Young of Montreal, Jack Ayer, Alan Murray of Montreal and himself.

Hamilton now is settled in his log cabin, filled with memorabilia: pictures and clothes of the old Dumbells.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Man Wonders if He Has Right To Spend Retirement Resting

By THOMAS COLLINS

"My question is this: Does any man have the right to live in idleness during retirement regardless of his age or financial circumstances?

"I have been retired for three years and have enjoyed it greatly. I have led such an easy, comfortable existence that my conscience is troubling me. When I sit down to eat I think of how many people have worked to produce and transport my food, I ask myself: Where is the equity?

"Sure, I am old and have labored 60 long years to reach my present status, but I am still able to plant and raise food. Should I not do this as long as I can, in order to offset the unproductiveness of those, who through no fault of their own, are unable to work."

(Honest, this is what the man says. He's a Texan and his wife lives in Pennsylvania.)

I have tried to argue to myself that, in the evening of my life, I am due the period of play and rest that I was denied in the early years when to go to work before I was 10, but it won't wash. I suppose in the 70-hour week were even pleasure to somebody's eyes. I put in 12 hours a day for 313 days a week and four hours on Sunday.

Things got better as time went on but there was no cessation from the daily grind until I retired at the age of 68. Even then I had to work a little longer because my greatest good fortune has been the 52 years of companionship I have enjoyed with her who is now my helpmate and has an income that is modest but unfortunate. We have not listened to any siren calls of far-away places with strange-sounding names but have stayed here in this comfortable home where our roots are.

We've had adventures we take trips, and the greatest pleasure we derive from those trips is returning to our old familiar nest.

"Our children live far enough away to live their own lives but close enough to reach us quickly in an emergency. Our grandchildren love to visit us and this old house has been a part of their memories and their affection from birth, and I am glad.

"What do you think? Should I accept this cheerful good fortune as my due, or should I reach out and try to pay for it with productive work of some kind?"

Well, for goodness sake!

UNUSUAL TESTIMONIAL

I didn't think there were any more of this kind still around. In the welfare age we now live in, this letter is an unusual testimonial to a good man, and I have printed it in detail for the inspiration it may be to those who brought no fault of their own, are unable to work."

After the last show were Jack Ayer of Toronto who wrote some of the Dumbells' original songs and Ben Greene, who did his famous piece, the kit inspection. Reg Lafferty, Alan Murray and Jack McLaren.

The original Dumbells, as Hamilton remembers them, included Capt. Merton Plunkett and his brother Al, of Orillia, Ont.; Bill Teasant, Winnipeg; Ted Chartier, New York; Bertram Langley, Toronto; George Brayford of Western Canada; Elmer Bolding of New York; Leonard Young of Montreal, Jack Ayer, Alan Murray of Montreal and himself.

Prince Edward Flying Club Marks 8th Anniversary

Five Aircraft Needed To Take Care Of Greatly Increased Activities

'Open House' Being Held Today and Sunday

By DON HARVEY

PICTON — From a modest beginning in 1953 with 18 members and two aircraft, the Prince Edward Flying Club today has become a favorite spot in this part of Ontario as more and more people take to the air for recreational flying.

The club's membership—which is open to everyone—now stands at about 170, but expectations are that it will not be long before it reaches 200.

In the short space of eight years, the club's directors have purchased five new aircraft—a Cessna 172, a Cessna 140 and three Aeronca Champions—and now are understood to be looking about adding at least one more.

Visitors will be able to get a first hand glimpse at the club's operations today and Sunday as it joins some 40 other flying clubs across Canada in holding special "open house" activities. Fifty free airplane rides will be offered Sunday and, weather permitting, pilots of other aircraft will engage in paper-cutting and balloon bursting contests in the air. An RCAF Caribou transport aircraft may be in the area to put on a brief air show.

CLUB MANAGER

The man responsible for managing the club is an ex-navy pilot, Murray Clapp, who also doubles as the chief flying instructor. Two additional full-time employees of the club, which is a member of the Royal Canadian Flying Clubs' Association, are engineer Mike Callaghan and instructor George Richmond. Jack Bond of Belleville is a part-time instructor.

Orme Reid, who is employed in Belleville as an auto mechanic, has been elected to a second one-year term as club president.

The club does not limit its activities merely to renting aircraft to licensed pilots, rather it also trains student pilots (36 graduated last year) and is licensed to carry passengers and/or goods to any point in Canada on a charter basis. Most of the student pilots begin their training in a two-seater Aeronca and later step up to the "better" Cessna 140. The Cessna 172, like the 140, is radio-equipped and is used by experienced pilots and for charter work.

ORME REID

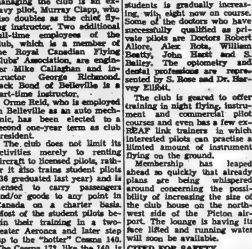
Mr. Reid has been elected to his second term of office as president of the club. He is a licensed private pilot and works in Belleville as an auto mechanic. He is a native of

About 25 persons regularly attended a 10-week ground school classes offered by the club free of charge at Albert College last winter. They received instruction in the usual subjects – theory of flight, airmanship, air regulations, basic navigation and meteorology – that every student pilot must learn in addition to logging 35 hours in the air before qualifying as private pilots.

FLYING DOCTORS

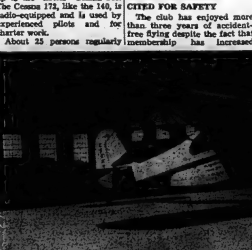
More than a half dozen Belleville and district doctors have taken up flying for pleasure and the number of women students is gradually increasing, with eight now on course. Some of the doctors who have successfully qualified as private pilots are Doctors Robert Allore, Alec Rote, William Beatty, John Hastt and S. Bailey. The optometry and dental professions are represented by S. Rose and Dr. Harvey Elliott.

The club is geared to offer training in night flying, instrument and commercial pilot courses and even has a few ex-RCAF link trainers in which interested pilots can practice a limited amount of instrument flying on the ground.



Membership has leaped ahead so quickly that already plans are being whispered around concerning the possible need to acquire the site of the club house on the north-west side of the Picton airport. The lounge is having its face lifted and running water will soon be available.

CITED FOR SAFETY



The club has enjoyed more than three years of accident-free flying despite the fact that membership has increased rapidly and the number of hours flown by its aircraft has climbed noticeably. For instance, last year its aircraft flew a total of 2,400 hours, or 500 hours more than in 1959. The Royal Canadian Flying Clubs' Association has presented the club with safety awards for the last three years. Club manager Clapp, the instructors and club officers insist on strict adherence to safe flying and ground handling regulations and continuously stress their importance as students and graduate pilots alike.

Mr. Clapp says residents of this part of the province are "very air minded." He believes recreational flying will become more popular as the years go by and that businessmen will make more use of light aircraft in getting around. He noted that the number of light aircraft used by businessmen coming into the Quinte district has increased noticeably over the past few years. The advantages of knowing how to fly has had a tremendous impact on 18 of the club's members who now own their own aircraft. A few of them are Charlie Lambert, Jim Marker, Frank Foley, Gibbard Waite, Ray Stickle, Chas Faulkner and Alex Williamson.

Directors of the club are James Marker, R. Boyle, Robert Byers, Rex Hrough, Dr. W. Beatty, John Clark and Mrs. Ruth Hartt.

READY TO GO — Engineer Mike Callaghan makes a last minute visual inspection of one of the Prince Edward Flying Club's three Aeronca Champions before it takes to the air. Dubbed the "Air-Knocker," the two-seater Champ is used extensively in training student pilots.

MEET THE FLEET — Chief flying instructor Murray Clapp (left) and maintenance engineer Mike Callaghan show off the Prince Edward Flying Club's five aircraft. Mr. Murray is standing at the nose of a four-seater Cessna 172, which is used extensively by the club for charter work and for training commercial pilots. Mr. Callaghan is standing at the nose of the club's Cessna 140. It, like the 172, is radio-equipped and is a much "hotter" aircraft than the three Aeronca Champions beside it. Army Shopping Centres Aid Soldiers in Financial Trouble to Avoid Loan Men

OTTAWA (CP)—Army shopping centres are helping soldiers in financial difficulties to keep away from the loan sharks.

When these centres began functioning five years ago under the name Maple Leaf Services, many senior officers strenuously objected to the organization taking over the regimental canteens.

Now Maple Leaf Services is regarded throughout the army as not only a convenience but a morale strengthener.

Since 1956 it has grossed nearly $41,000,000 and has turned more than $1,500,000 in profits back to army units for welfare and recreational facilities. All this has been done without the Canadian taxpayer putting up one cent.

A soldier and his family who have a proven need for financial assistance may obtain a loan or grant from the army welfare fund. This eliminates dependence on other welfare agencies or a trip to a loan company, the legitimate as well as unscrupulous ones.

HAS 1,300 EMPLOYEES

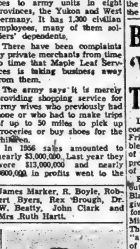
Some army establishments, such as Camp Shilo, Man., have no United Appeal drive because all welfare needs are taken care of through funds provided by Maple Leaf Services.

The soldier-owned, non-profit organization now provides services to army units in eight provinces, the Yukon and West Germany. It has 1,300 civilian employees, many of them soldiers' dependents.

There have been complaints by private merchants from time to time that Maple Leaf Services is taking business away from them.

The army says it is merely providing facilities for soldiers and army wives who previously had none or who had to make trips of up to 50 miles to pick up groceries or buy shoes for the children.

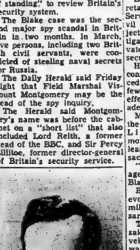
In 1956 sales amounted to nearly $3,000,000. Last year they were $13,000,000 and nearly $600,000 in profits went to the army's welfare and central funds and to various units.



Maple Leaf Services makes it possible for the service housewife at Fort Churchill, Man., or Soest, West Germany, to buy the same brands of Canadian consumer goods at prices comparable with those in metropolitan centres.

The need for the service became readily apparent with the far - flung peacetime commitments undertaken by the army since 1951. Through it and the Second World War and until 1956 Canadian soldiers and their families overseas had to depend on the British NAAFI (Navy, Army, Air Force Institutes) and the American PX (Post Exchange). Neither of these organizations offered Canadian goods and amenities.

Maple Leaf Services now has fixed assets worth nearly $4,000,000 and this year is spending $400,000 for continued expansion. Further gains are achieved through sales and without reliance on the public treasury.



WON'T SAY

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker remained noncommittal Friday when asked by Hubert Badanai (L — Fort William) when the report of the Bladen royal commission on the auto industry will be tabled in the Commons. "In due course," the prime minister answered.

MIKE CALLAGHAN

Born at Rendrew, Mr. Callaghan, the club's maintenance engineer, served in the RCAF during the war as an aero engine mechanic. After the war he was employed in the Quinte district and at Oshawa by Field Aviation. He joined the Prince Edward Flying Club on a full-time basis in 1958. He is married, has two children, and lives in Picton.

MURRAY CLAPP

Mr. Clapp is the manager and chief flying instructor of the Prince Edward Flying Club. He joined the RCAF in 1943 and in 1944 was attached to the Royal Navy's Fleet Air Arm and flew Seafire fighters. After the war he returned to his native Prince Edward County and began farming near Milford. He still owns the farm but spends most of his time at the flying club. He didn't fly after the war until 1953 when the flying club was established. He took over as chief flying instructor from Mel Bradley in 1956. Mr. Clapp has logged about 2,600 hours in the air. He is married and has eight children, including twin three-year-old daughters.

Geo. Richmond Has 4500 Hours As a Pilot

Perhaps the most experienced pilot on the Prince Edward Flying Club's three-man staff of instructors is George Richmond, who also operates a marina at Pryers Cove in Prince Edward County. He has logged some 4,500 hours in the air.

He flew mulit-engined aircraft and gliders in the Royal Air Force during the Second World War and joined the RCAF's Maritime Command in 1951. He left the RCAF in 1956 and became a bush pilot for Hall's Air Service at Val d'Or, Que., until 1958 when he opened his marina. He joined the Prince Edward Flying Club a few months ago as a full-time instructor.

Another of the club's instructors is Jack Bond, a member of the Ontario Intelligence Service attached to Ottawa. Mr. Bond renewed his interest in aviation about a year ago and now is a fully qualified commercial pilot and instructor.

During the Second World War he flew multi-engined aircraft out of England and Iceland on weather patrols while attached to the RAF. He is a part-time instructor.

Britons Shudder at Possible 'Witch-Hunts' in Wake of Tighter Security Measures

LONDON (Reuters)—Privately many Britons shuddered Friday at the thought of possible "witch-hunts" in the wake of tighter security prompted by recent convictions of Soviet spies.

Following a press and public outcry over the case of George Blake, British agencies were given 42 years imprisonment each for espionage. Prime Minister Macmillan announced Thursday he was establishing "a body of high authority and of standing" to review Britain's security system.

The Blake case was the second major spy scandal in Britain in three months. In March five persons, including two British Foreign Office clerks, convicted of stealing naval secrets for Russia.

The Daily Herald said Friday night that Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery may be the head of the spy inquiry.

The Herald said Montgomery's name was before the cabinet on a "short list" that also included Lord Beith, a former head of the BBC, and Sir Percy Sillitoe, former director-general of Britain's security service.

Bodies of civil servants and a civil liberties organization expressed fear Friday of "witch hunts" sweeping Britain because of the Blake espionage case.

Stanley Mayne, general secretary of the 43,000-strong Association of Professional Civil Servants, protested any security witchhunting.

"There is enough unnecessary prodding into private lives already, make no mistake about that," Mayne told reporters.

Leslie Williams, assistant secretary of the Society of Civil Servants, said Thursday the civil service, already "is subjected to more "rigorous investigation and interference in private lives" just to cover up security failures.

He said the society's annual conference: "The security process was overhauled only a few years ago and if operated effectively should be entirely adequate."

Martin Ennals, secretary of the National Society of Civil Liberties, said: "More and more security will not stop leaks. All this will lead to a sacrificing of personal liberty."

"McCarthyism of more than a decade ago in the United States than Blake ever did in this country."

Britain's newspapers, however, generally greeted the Macmillan investigation as a necessary step.

The pro-Labor Daily Herald said: "With the enormous development of the technology of war, many more people are the custodians of national secrets. They may have to submit to more probing into their private lives—as the prime minister suggested."

Shipbuilding Industry Given Life-Giving Shot in Arm By New Federal Subsidies

OTTAWA (CP) — The ailing Canadian shipbuilding industry has reacted with a cry of delight to a life-giving shot in the arm from the federal government.

"Oh, man, that's terrific," exclaimed a union spokesman in Montreal Friday shortly after Transport Minister Balcer announced in the Commons details of far-reaching federal subsidies for the industry.

Mr. Balcer said the program, providing federal subsidies towards the cost of building Canadian ships in Canada, should create a "boom" in shipbuilding. Annual employment for 10,000 shipyard workers would be the outcome, he predicted.

A like number would find employment in ancillary shipping firms.

The government plan also includes action to protect the inland shipping industry in competition with low-cost Communist-bloc vessels travelling the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River ports.

Most immediate concrete reaction—and an indication that the new policy is working—has come true—came from the west coast.

At Victoria, Capt. H. J. C. Terry, president of Northland Navigation Limited, said his firm would cancel plans to have two passenger and cargo ships built in The Netherlands. They will be built in Canada.

At Montreal, T. R. McLagan, president of Canada Steamship Lines, hinted that a freighter-tanker Coverdale might be changed back to Canada from Bermuda. Bermudian registry was made recently to save money.

The new federal subsidies prompted him to comment: "Things can always be changed around again you know."

Reaction across the country from the industry, which has been financially "beached" for some years, can only be described as gleeful.

"This is great news," said Mr. McLagan.

"It paves the way to making Canada a truly maritime nation again," said Richard Lowthorpe, president of Canadian Ship-Building and Ship-Repairing Association.

"The best news we've heard in years," said Fred Rhuland, secretary - treasurer of Smith and Rhuland Limited of Lunenburg, N.S., one of the largest fishing boat builders in the Maritimes.

HERE ARE ORDERS

Observers in shipping circles said the subsidies could mean potential orders worth $500,000,000 over the next 10 to 15 years, for fishing ships, ferries, tankers, lakers and other watercraft.

HAILS NEWS

At Port Arthur, Gordon McDougall, general manager of Port Arthur Shipbuilding, said that a announcement is "good news."

It was too early to predict the effect of the announcement on Canadian shipbuilding, but anything that helps ship - owners "eventually helps us, too."

John Mann of Erieau Shipbuilding and Drydock Company, said the subsidy would be of great help to Great Lakes shipbuilding industries, beset by lack of orders and difficulty in holding their tradsmen.

"Other countries have it," Mr. Munn said, "It's time something was done."

Announcement of the subsidy came as Lake Erie fishermen were holding urgent meetings to press for government assistance, said Martin Miller of Wallaceburg, president of the West Erie Fishermen's Association. He said he would have some subsidy on major repairs.

Mr. Munn said fishermen, who have been unable to afford new boats, will start ordering tugs costing up to $50,000.

The president of the Dominion Marine Association said at Toronto Canadian ship operators are gratified by the new shipping policy. He said Dillon, in telegrams to Mr. Balcer and Prime Minister Diefenbaker, said the subsidies will help renew the building program and the partial restriction on coasting will halt penetration by ships flying a United Kingdom firms.

Mr. Collison said penetration by these ships into the domestic grain trade has reached "alarming proportions" in the last two years.

At Collingwood, Harold Wallace, general manager of Canadian Shipbuilding and Engineering's Collingwood Division, said the new policy is "a step in the right direction to build up the ship building industry."

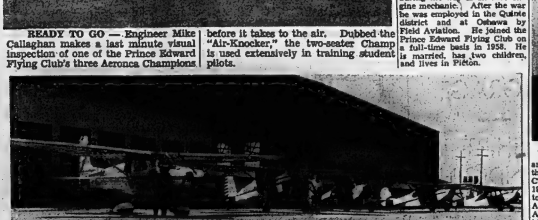
He said the taxes on profits of foreign-registered ships now operating in the Great Lakes are paid in the country of registry, but now, with the plan to reserve the domestic trade to Canadian - registered ships, the money will be paid in Canada.

"The sky's the limit," said Mr. Balcer when asked by reporters whether there would be any ceiling on the amount of federal aid available for shipbuilding.

However, he said he did not expect ship operators to order ships unless they could see no demand.

The main intent of the new policy is to encourage Canadian ship operators — big shipping firms as well as small fishermen—to place their orders for new ships at Canadian shipyards.

In essence, it means the federal government will cover the difference in the cost of building a vessel in Canada against the cost of going to a foreign shipyard.



11,000 Persons In Canada Are 'Airborne'

More than 11,000 Canadians have taken to the air in recent years. They are all members of the Royal Canadian Flying Clubs Association. The 170 members of the Prince Edward Flying Club are also members of the RCFCA.

More than 15,000 pilots have graduated from Canada's flying clubs since 1948 and last year alone, all 212 flying club aircraft in the country logged a total of more than 134,000 hours of flying training and recreational flying. Member clubs of the RCFCA are non-profit organizations.

Short of Phones As Russian Building Booms

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Soviet planners have admitted what every citizen here knows—that a new telephone like a new car is one of the hardest things to acquire in the land of spectacular space shots.

The shortage of telephones and the existence of an overburdened telephone system have arisen through the planners' neglect in the past as they concentrated on grabbing the plumbing, electricity and water.

Now, as millions of Russians move into new apartments under the greatest housing boom the country has known, the shortage is becoming more obvious and crucial.

Mikolai Pavlenev, the 60-year-old former post office clerk who now heads the Soviet ministry of communications, acknowledged the shortage in an article in the newspaper Izvestia.

He said Soviet factories would have to produce 400,000 telephones a year in order to provide eventually one telephone to every five families. But he admitted that this figure could hardly be reached in 1960 when only 30,000 telephones were produced and the 1961 plan called for 35,000.

In Moscow, there are more than 300,000 apartments without telephones.

N.Z. Put Out, French Prefer Their Own Wine

AUCKLAND (CP)—New Zealand winemakers are up in arms because the French rugby football team to tour New Zealand has insisted on drinking only its own wine.

Under terms for the tour negotiated with the New Zealand rugby authorities, several hundred bottles of red French vin ordinaire have been imported for the use of the players during the visit. Sufficient supplies will be distributed to each hotel at which the team stays.

Winemakers have protested strongly. They say that New Zealand now produces wines of good quality and they are insulted at the suggestion that suitable types could not be supplied locally.

Other organizations have also protested at the granting of an import licence for the purpose. Because of overseas exchange difficulties, imports have lately been severely curtailed and the granting of a special licence for the footballers' wine has annoyed all whose import quotas have suffered.

Ministers have been bombarded with telegrams asking: "Do you favor wine for French footballers or a bus to take our children to school?"

The New Zealand rugby officials have got away far from enthusiastic over the wine which has caused all the fuss. "Lager," said one with a shudder. "It would make excellent red ink," remarked another.

Canada Still Hesitates To Become OAS Member But Interest Increasing

By GRAHAM TROTTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian government continues to approach the question of membership in the Organization of American States like a hesitant swimmer at testing the water with his toe.

While obviously showing increased interest in Latin America and perhaps coming closer than any previous government to taking the plunge, it still wears a modge of the diving board from the Canadian public.

External Affairs Minister Green put it this way during a Commons debate late April:

"I think the decision should be taken only when it is fairly clear that the majority of the Canadian people are in favor of this being done."

OAS binds together the United States and all 20 of the Latin American republics in promote hemispheric security and co-operative development. Origins of the association, formerly known as the Pan American Union, date back 1890.

There has been intermittent debate over the years in Canada and inside OAS, about the advantages and disadvantages of this country being a member.

OAS WANTS CANADA

In recent years OAS has made it plain it wants Canada. And Canada has demonstrated renewed interest, to the point of accepting an invitation to send an observer to this year's meeting in Quito, Ecuador, of the Inter-American Conference, the supreme organ of OAS. This meeting was to have been held in May but was postponed.

It will be the first time Canada has had an observer at such a meeting, held every five years. It is one step short of full membership, which Canada can obtain simply by ratifying the OAS charter, signed by the present member countries at Bogota, Colombia, in 1948.

Purposes of the organization, as set out in the charter, are:

To strengthen the peace and security of the hemisphere; to prevent possible causes of difficulties and ensure the pacific settlement of disputes that may arise among the member states; provide for common action on the part of those states in the event of aggression; seek the solution of political, juridical and economic problems that may arise among them; and promote, by co-operative action, their economic, social and cultural development.

TRADE 36 FACTOR

The executive body is the council of the OAS, in which each member state has one representative with the rank of ambassador. Its meeting place is in Washington in the House of the Americas where, in addition to participation of eventual Canadian entry, a council-table shrine to Canada's name on it has been stored since 1810.

The charter also provides for meetings of consultation of foreign affairs ministers to consider urgent problems.

In addition, there are a number of specialized and technical agencies, in some of which Canada has participated or had observers present.

Fifteen of the Latin American countries have entered into several sub-regional free trade arrangements with the aim of gradually eliminating tariffs and trade restrictions, the latest pact involving seven nations.

One argument in favor of Canada taking out membership has been that if she does not one may be shut out of possible markets should a Latin American trading bloc develop.

In 1960, Canadian exports to the Latin American republics totalled $324,954,000 while those emating the $178,000,000 taken by Japan, Canada's third best individual customer. Imports from the 20 reached $302,365,000.

OIL FROM VENEZUELA

This trade deficit for Canada was due to this country's favorable imbalance with Venezuela, which provided $135,139,000 worth of goods, chiefly oil, while taking $35,945,000 worth from Canada.

Last year's Canadian exports to the other OAS members in Latin America, with imports in brackets:

Argentina $19,583,519 ($3,611,419); Bolivia $322,630 ($443,291); Brazil $54,494,776 ($24,880,813); Chile $6,376,975 ($746,801); Colombia $16,560,467 ($12,795,797); Costa Rica $2,985,202 ($4,347,736); Cuba $13,077,895 ($57,243,960); Dominican Republic $5,021,288 ($1,526,052); Ecuador $3,912,960 ($11,018,258); El Salvador $2,360,276 ($628,710); Guatemala $2,105,898 ($3,255,604); Haiti $1,258,767 ($661,260); Honduras $1,618,128 ($3,352,641); Mexico $88,022,614 ($21,107,215); Nicaragua $1,318,686 ($159,970); Panama $8,702,779 ($6,026,126); Paraguay $130,270 ($700,761); Peru $6,980,988 ($1,086,257).

It has been estimated that membership in OAS would cost Canada about $1,000,000 annually.

The cost would be much higher if Canada coupled this membership with financial aid to underdeveloped countries in Latin America. This aid would be handled through the Inter-American Development Bank, established in late 1959 with an authorized capital of $850,000,000, of which the U.S. has put up $350,000,000.

External affairs department officials estimate Canada's contribution would be between $17,000,000 and $25,000,000. But interested in this would not be a requirement of membership, although all present members of OAS except Cuba are involved in the scheme.

There have been a number of reasons for Canada not being a member. Mostly it has come down to a matter of OAS not being within which Canada was interested or willing to join.

From 1677 through 1942, when there were overtures by Latin American countries for Canadian membership, it was the U.S. that either forestalled action or advised against it.

Canada has been active involved in the scheme.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

They're off and running!

There'll be golden pickerel fillets in many a skillet today and tomorrow. For the new crop is said to be one of the best, and angling conditions in the various haunts likewise.

A lot of the Walleye Willies took off on the northern jaunt at varying hours yesterday afternoon and night and with Producer Mother Nature setting a near-perfect stage the take today should be good.

In fact conservation officers tell me the "take" has been from fair to good for the past few weeks. The poaching Percies got in a lot of their nefarious work, a number of them taking out quite a few fish, most of them fat flabby females, whose egg-laden bodies are almost tasteless.

And according to several personal appearances in court yesterday the conservation gentlemen registered quite a haul, too. A number of pickerpoy fishers made the hard way, through the wallet and some of the pre-season walleye banquets proved costly dinners.

However, today it's legal.

I contacted the Tweed district headquarters of the Department of Lands and Forests yesterday and was told by one official that this year's season opening point inward one of the best pickerel hunts and hauls in some time.

"The ice is out of all the northern lakes and streams," he said, "and the water levels are just slightly above normal. With good weather prevailing, this weekend should see one of the best 'opening' hauls in some time."

Impressions taken by the pickerel spawning run, he said, let his office to believe that pickerel numerically will be the same as previous seasons with the possible exception of Hay Bay, where the lateness of the ice removal might cause a difference.

"Generally speaking," he said, "it depends on the weather. Water, ice and other conditions are near perfect and the rest is up to the fishermen and the fish."

A number of city anglers who have not the time, facilities and whatnot for a northern jaunt will take to familiar Bay of Quinte spots for their pickerel dinners. West Lake, East Lake and the Trent River will get their quotas.

A recent survey of pickerel fishing in the Bay of Quinte revealed that over 93 per cent of anglers contacted fishing in the bay were trolling. Depths fished varied from eight to 28 feet and the lures used were predominantly of the spinner type or live bait and spinner combinations. Pickerel apparently, are seldom taken still-fishing or from the shore.

The mouth of the Trent River is one of the most productive regions and by far the greatest harvest of pickerel is made in Hay Bay, although as was noted early hauls may not be as generally good as other years due to the ice conditions.

The survey also revealed that evening fishing was found 13.7 more successful, on the average, than morning fishing, and fishing before noon netted an average 22.9 per cent more fish than afternoon efforts.

Of the total pickerel harvest by anglers last year in the local region, it was stated some 54 per cent came from the Hay Bay district, 37 per cent from the upper section of the bay between Trenton and Napanee of which about half was produced in the Murray Canal mouth area. The remainder of the season's catch, 9 per cents was produced by the small bays in the vicinity of Hay Bay.

And if you're in a cabin, cottage or tent and want to surprise the boys try cooking the pickerel this way.

First, of course, you'll need to fillet your pickerel —cut them into pieces about four inches square. Next take a steel paper bag and put in ½ two tablespoons of rolled oats or crushed corn flakes, four spoons of pancake flour and six of flour. Beat up a couple of eggs in a bowl and heat a couple of inches of cooking oil in the fry pan.

The oil is hot enough when it will brown a small piece of bread in about 45 seconds.

Draw the pickerel squares through the egg, shake them up in the paper bag and fry to a golden brown. Don't put too many in the pan at one time as it will lower the temperature of the oil. Vegetable oil for deep frying seems better because it imparts no foreign flavor to the fish and absorbs none itself.

So try it some time—and when the fish fillets are ready, invite me to lunch.

Homers Winner In Ninth

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

One way or another, Frank Lary looks a lot like a New York Yankee. And when his pitching wasn't quite sharp, he whamm 'em with his bat.

The right hander sent Detroit Tigers into a 3½-game deficit over the League lead over New York by belting a line-driving homer in the ninth inning for a 4-3 victory at Yankee Stadium Friday night.

It made Lary, 30, the first pitcher to win five in the AL this year. It also was his second over New York this season, giving him a lifetime edge of 5-4 against the Yanks—who never have been so completely mastered by an opposing pitcher.

Early Wynn put away the 28th victory of his career with a four-hitter that brought Chicago White Sox a 2-0 decision over Kansas City. Baltimore clung to third place by beating Cleveland 4-2, Boston defeated Washington 3-1, and Minnesota edged Los Angeles 5-4.

SCORED TYING RUN

Lary, with a 74-76 career record and against the top of the league, also doubled and scored the tying run in the seventh for the Tigers' first victory in three tries on reliever Jim Coates (1-2) with his mates in Joker Lary's left field seats. Rookie Steve Boros drove in the first two runs with a sacrifice fly and the Tigers opened their 19-game road trip with their sixth victory in the last 10 games.

The Yanks, with Mickey Mantle reduced to a pinch-hitting role (he walked in the ninth) because of a pulled leg muscle, out-hit the Tigers 10-6, and also drew seven walks. They came from behind on a two-run homer by Hector Lopez in the fourth and made it 3-2 on a double in the fifth by Yogi Berra, who was marking his 36th birthday. But Lary let 10 men on base, twice retiring a batter with the bases loaded.

The game, delayed 34 minutes at the start because of rain, also was interrupted when Tiger first baseman Norm Cash lunged a third strike and was ejected in the second inning. It was delayed again after the eighth inning when Tiger outfielder Rocky Colavito rushed into the stands when he saw a fan swing at his father. Police broke up the fracas before Colavito, who had 27 guests at the game, arrived, but Rocky was ejected for leaving the field.

Wynn, 41, blanked the As on two singles after the first inning and retired 21 in a row in the process. He also singled, along with Camilo Carnon, when the White Sox broke a 1-1 deadlock and rookie Norm Bass (1-1) in the fifth.

DROVE TWO IN

Baltimore clouted it at Cleveland on a two-run homer in the fourth by Jim Gentile—the AL home run leader, with 10, and RBI leader, with 31. Vic Power drove in both Cleveland runs off Jack Fisher (1-2), who gave up seven hits in a game Orioles handed winless Johnny Antonelli his fourth defeat.

Bill Monbouquette (3-3) struck out 17, one shy of the major league record, and shut out the Senators on four hits for eight innings while the Red Sox were making the most of their two hits off Pete Burnside (0-3). Pumpsie Green doubled and scored on Chuck Schilling's sacrifice fly in the third, and stole two walks and a single by Vic Wertz loaded the bases in the seventh. Burnside walked in the winning run.

Pete Ramos (3-2) drove in the last three runs for the Twins off loser Ir Grba (2-5) with a home run in the fifth and a two-run single in the sixth. Grba, Ken Hunt and Earl Averill homered for the Angels.

Will Probe Ratterman Vice Arrest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Justice department Friday ordered an investigation into the police arrest of George Ratterman, former professional football player and reform candidate for sheriff in Campbell County, Ky.

Ratterman, arrested early Tuesday in a boisterom with a woman, has contended that he was drugged and that police tore off his trousers. He said he didn't know the woman was in the room until he was aroused by the entry of police.

The justice department gave no official reason for the investigation, but an informed source said it was called to determine if Newport, Ky., police "knowingly participated in the sort of framed evidence."

Ratterman has been charged with breach of peace, disorderly conduct and resisting arrest, and has been scheduled for a hearing in police court Tuesday.

An investment counselor and the father of eight, Ratterman played quarterback for Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four in 1951.

Harvey "Talks" With Blues Brass

But Tony Won the Fight

Russ Win Free-For-All

By George E. Carver
Sports Editor

"When it's clock-cleaning time in rasslin' my second-hands will be there."

Thus chortled Karol Kalmikoff, top-hand of the Siberian three-man posse who raided the Last Chance ring in the arena here last night.

The affair ended in a wild free-for-all with handsome Tony Marino tossing around boots hoards than a lumberjack barber on a Saturday night.

When the fun and furores ceased, Referee Joe Golab emerged from the bottom of the pile and gave the Russ the win sign.

It must have been because a "Beard" was the closest to him.

Previously Ivan and Nikita Kalmikoff had ganged up on Referee Joe Sherrard and sent him to the showers cut and bleeding after a ring "flag-out".

Man Mountain Campbell took on the pair single-handed and pummeled the two after he kicked out of him by the two man gang.

They were doing a neat job on him, taking him apart while Karol Kalmikoff, Siberian scene Sheriff Marino galloped into the ring.

Tony started flipping Kalmikoffs like a ranch cook tosses flapjacks. Man Mountain took a breather and a new lease of life and got into the act.

Enter the third Kalmikoff Karol looking pretty in an abbreviated bunny and the general melee started.

Tony promptly cut him down to size and started his Siberian juggling act. It was the prettiest whirligig the arena has ever seen.

The crowd howled its approval until Golab laid high a Russ hand in victory.

The Mountain Boy won the first fall with a flying body-bag but Nikita tossed the Farmer Boy out of the ring in a flying clash, causing a deep facial cut that ended his activities for the evening.

Handsome Tony practically toyed with Karol Kalmikoff in the grand finale, the handsome young Italiano headlocking the Russ for nearly six minutes without interference.

Then the Kalmikoff resorted to the "two-against" and Tony was in a bad way until he shook it off and squelched the Russ boot good for the fall.

Stan Stasiak, a rough tough-ie for Arvida bulldozed his way to a twenty-minute win over Les Lyman in he preliminary.

Umbricht, who struck out 10 in his walking only one, received home runs against San Juan in the sixth on a walk, two singles and a sacrifice fly.

The Chiefs scored their lone run off Toronto's Jim Negray by bunching three of their four hits in the fourth. Singles by Lamar Jacobs and Bob Lennon and an intentional walk to Gino Abbodati loaded 'em up before Woody Smith drove the clincher home with a sacrifice fly.

Fred Valentine's two-out single scored Johnny Powell, who had walked and moved around on a sacrifice and an infield out, with the deciding run for the Red Wings in the ninth. Buffalo led 2-1 on homers by Jim Frey and Bill Taylor before Dick Dunker left in the fifth with a sore shoulder.

◆ NEW YORK (AP) — Doug Harvey, ace defenseman of Montreal Canadiens, arrived here Friday to discuss the possibility of becoming player-coach of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

The Rangers are seeking a replacement for Alf Pike, who was fired as coach after the team finished fifth last season.

The Montreal club has told the Rangers it will let Harvey go only if the Rangers make him a player - coach.

In a talk with Harvey before the last Montreal earlier Friday, Frank Selke, general manager of the Canadiens, said he does not intend to demand several New York stars as the price for Harvey.

"We would settle for a couple minor leaguers if they want to trade," he said. Harvey, who has been voted the league's top defenceman for six of the seven years Harvey, 36, has been in the NHL 14 years.

PLAN SEVERAL TALKS

Selke said that since Canadiens first announced they would be willing to trade Harvey "some people have come terms of trying to railroad him out of Montreal."

"How way would I do a thing like that? If Harvey doesn't like the idea of coaching he can play with us next season."

Needs Eight for 300

Spahn Shades Giants, Dodgers Win

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

The magic number now is eight for Warren Spahn.

The superb southpaw of the Milwaukee Braves needs just eight more victories to hit the charmed 300 goal after collecting his fourth of the season with a 2-0 decision at San Francisco Friday night.

This one was nothing like the no-hitter he spun against the Giants two weeks ago, but his eighth-ball job was good enough to shave San Francisco's National League lead to mere percentage points over Los Angeles Dodgers, who beat Chicago Cubs 4-2.

Pittsburgh ended Cincinnati's winning streak at nine games, beating the Reds 8-5 on a pinch-homer by Dick Stuart. St. Louis Cardinals extended Philadelphia's losing slump through 10 games with a 5-1 victory over the last place Phillies.

SCORED EARLY

The Giants scored in the first inning on singles by Jim Davenport and Felipe Alou. But the Braves scored twice in the first inning on Hank Aaron's home run. Lee Maye and Ed Mathews also homered for Milwaukee, with Mathews' solo blast winning it in the ninth.

Spahn, who also beat Sam Jones in the no-hitter, walked two and struck out one. Orlando Cepeda's home run drove in the ninth inside it close, but Spahn was in command—four times working out of jams by getting the Giants to tap back to the mound.

Southpaw Sandy Koufax had a no-hitter for six innings against the Cubs, struck out 11 and had a shutout for eight innings, but then needed relief help from Dick Farrell before nailing his third victory for the Dodgers.

Billy Williams doubled leading off the seventh for the Cubs' first hit, but Sandy then struck out the side, whiffing Ernie Banks, Ron Santo and Moe Roach.

LEADS WITH TRIPLE

Santo led off the ninth with a triple and was forced home by Koufax' third walk of the inning. Farrell gave up an RBI single by Bob Will before getting Don Zimmer for the final out.

Wally Moon drove in two runs for the Dodgers, one with a first-inning single and the other with an 10th home run, tops in the league, as Don Cardwell lost his second game against three victories.

Stuart's pinch homer was a three-run shot in the fifth off losing reliever Marshall Bridges of the Reds.

Rocky Nelson also hit a three-run homer for the Pirates, who blew a 5-2 lead before Bobby Shantz came on and won his first for the Mt. with four innings of two-hit, shutout relief. Hal Smith and Frank Bolling also homered for the Reds off Buc starter Wilmer Mizell.

32ND DUEZ

The Cards broke up a scoreless duel between Ernie Broglio and the Phils' John Buzhardt with three runs in the sixth. Daryl Spencer's two-run single clinched it.

Broglio, winning his second in a row, gave up nine hits, but had it shut out until the seventh. Then Pancho Herrera homered for the Phils, who hadn't scored in 25 innings and now are tagged with their longest slump since 1956.

Don Landrum hit an inside-the-park homer for St. Louis, scampering around while centre fielder Tony Gonzalez was waiting for the ball to bounce off a scoreboard catwalk.

New "Claws" Spark Tigers

NEW YORK (AP) — New faces, new spirit, new outlook and a new manager added up to a first place in the American League Friday for Detroit Tigers.

The new faces, belonging to Bill Bruton, Dick Brown and Steve Boros, and Hank Aguirre and Jake Wood, and the new manager, Bob Scheffing, are obvious.

Less apparent has been the improved attitude of the veterans and which had had as much to do with the team's success as the stout hitting of Al Kaline and Norm Cash and the strong pitching of Frank Lary, Don Mossi, Jim Bunning and Phil Regan.

It is no secret that the Tigers for years have been long on talent and short on desire. This year the Tigers have been snarling and screeching, fighting for victories.

Scheffing said Friday: "I've never been on a club with a better attitude.

"I think it's because we've got a new setup all the way from the top. In other years, there were too many chiefs with money having any real authority."

FULLMER TO DEFEND

OGDEN, Utah (AP) — Gene Fullmer of West Jordan, Utah, will defend his National Boxing Association middleweight title against Florentino Fernandez of Cuba in Garden July 8, the International Boxing Club announced Friday. The fight will be 15 rounds.

'Muscle' Research Pays Off

By H. L. JONES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Max Howell looked ruefully Friday at a pile of letters spilling from his desk at the University of British Columbia and remarked: "I rather wish I'd never got into this thing."

The 33-year-old assistant professor of physical education was referring to the flood of reaction to publicity given his research into static muscle training. It involves tensing muscle against muscle and requires no equipment.

It seems everyone wants copies of the series of 13 exercises he outlined, involving a minute-a-day of muscle contractions. It is a method said to double muscle strength within 30 weeks.

Dr. Howell said he and Dr. W. R. Morford and others of the UBC physical education staff confirmed in UBC tests the findings of U.S. and other researchers that the static method would improve muscle strength but as much as weight-lifting or calesthenics with far less time and effort.

The method was first brought to light by two German physiologists in 1953 after 10 years of research.

HOW IT WORKS

Here are the exercises, each to be held for six seconds:

1. The elbow push: Stand with back to wall, elbow bent under height and touching wall-hands at collarbone level with palms down; press elbows hard against the wall.

2. The hand push: Stand with palms touching and elbows at shoulder height. Press palms together hard.

3. The reach: Stand with the left arm extended high over the head. Hook up as high as possible while keeping the heels on the floor. Repeat with right arm.

4. The inside-maker: Stand with both elbows bent and the hands relaxed. Contract the biceps muscles as much as possible.

5. The twist: Stand with the arms extended forward—fingers interlocked. Try to twist the arms inward. Repeat outward.

6. The grip: While standing grip both hands as hard as possible.

7. The finger stretch: Stand with arms outstretcher in front and extend the fingers as much as possible.

8. The front flattener: Lie on your back on the floor with hands on hips and elbows off the floor. Keep the heels and shoulders and elbows on the floor. Try keeping the knees straight.

10. The spread-eagle: With the feet wide forward the wall. Press the left foot against the wall. Repeat the leg straight. Repeat with right leg—right side toward the wall.

11. The squat: Stand with hands on hips, knees bent, heels off the floor.

12. The heel stand: Standing on the heels, touching the wall, tighter for balance.

13. The arch raiser: Sit with the soles of the feet turned inward each other and the toes curled under hard.

Botvinnik Regains Chess Title

MOSCOW (AP)—Mikhail Botvinnik, 49, Russian master of chess strategy and subtlety, has regained the world chess championship for the second time—a feat never before accomplished in the history of world competition.

Botvinnik, who lost the title to Mikhail Tal a year ago, won it again Friday when he defeated the 24-year-old Russian in 30 moves in the 21st game of their scheduled 24-match series. That gave him an insurmountable 13-8 margin. Of the 21 games, Botvinnik won 10, lost five and drew 116. He always was in the lead after winning the third game.

Botvinnik first won the world championship in 1948 and held it until April, 1957, when he was beaten by Vasily Smyslov. But he regained it from Smyslov the next year.

Botvinnik was at peak form throughout the match, which stretched over two months. To the surprise of the thousands of spectators who jammed the Moscow Variety Theatre to follow on electric chess boards mounted on the city, he showed greater stamina than his younger opponent.

Tal, who had been ill before the match commenced, had to postpone play on the three occasions allowed by the rules because of illness.

The Tracks

NEW YORK (CP) — The group for next week's Preakness — reduced to merely an exhibition with only four horses entered — and the $100,000 Withers Mile at Aqueduct are the features of today's United States racing program.

The 125,000 Delay Rose Stakes at Garden State Park, the $25,000 Debonair Stakes at Hollywood Park; the $15,000 Albany Handicap at Golden Gate Fields, and the Louisville Handicap at Churchill Downs are the other top races of a relatively secondary schedule.

The Preakness Prep at Pimlico, listed for $10,000, was cut to $5,000 and only a not - betting exhibition when only four were entered for the 1 1-16-mile test. It will have as its star the presence of a front - runner in Leonard Sasso's Globemaster. Other starters are Dr. Miller, Might Is Right and Crimson Fury.

The Withers also is for three-year - olds and 12 were entered, headed by Merry Ruler and Vapor Whirl.

Race Car Idol Killed

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—Tony Bettenhausen, idol of auto speed fans on the U.S. professional circuit, came to the end of a 25-year racing career Friday in a car he had built for a friend.

The 44-year-old two - time champion of the big-car circuit was killed in his 29th racing wreck.

Something broke and threw the hurtling racer into the wall along the main straightaway at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. The car ripped down 250 feet of fence and five railroad iron posts and came to a stop upside down on the wall.

Bettenhausen had turned several laps at 145 miles an hour in the car in which Rodger Ward won the 1959 Indianapolis "500." He was checking it for Paul Russo, an old friend.

In his own car, the Autolite Special, Bettenhausen had been a strong favorite to take top honors today in the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Boxing Committee May Form National Team

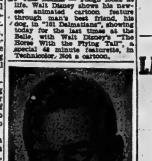
DRAYTON VALLEY, Alta. (CP)—The national boxing committee of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada Friday discussed a plan to set up a national boxing team with a national coach appointed for four years.

The committee, under chairman Maj. Paul Roth of Vancouver, did not make any final plans regarding the team, but left the way open for a three-man committee to report to the national convention of the AAU when it meets in Edmonton in November.

The meeting was held prior to the start of the 1961 Dominion amateur boxing championships here, Named to the committee were Lt.-Cmdr. Reg. Mylrea of Ottawa, Royal Canadian Navy representative to the national boxing committee; Al Decarie of Montreal and Robert Williams of Weyburn, Sask.

Maj. Roth explained the team would set a precedent for Canadian sports and help raise the calibre of Canadian boxing teams through international competition.

He said he had been approached by the national boxing team of Jamaica asking for competition between teams of the two countries, but had to decline because Canada had no such team.



Maj. Roth said such a team would be able to compete with United States, Mexican, Irish, Jamaican and other national teams.

Lt.-Cmdr. Mylrea also was elected manager of a team which may represent Canada at the Pan - Pacific Games scheduled for Honolulu Aug. 30 to Sept. 10, this year. Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RICHTER
Sunday, May 14, 1961

General Tendencies: —This should be a quiet Sunday, well spent at usual Sunday pursuits. You will certainly be tempted to go off on a tangent and to upset some present arrangements, which would be most unwise and do you no good at all. Not thinking out ways to really live the finest course you can envision brings wonderful results.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Put off having a good time today and concern yourself with the welfare of family and personal matters that need immediate attention. Go to the services of your choice and then follow the sanctimonious philosophy expounded on the pulpit. Grow.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Get into a mood of deep concentration for a while today and know what it truly is you desire to accomplish in life. Later, a close tie may be feeling ill and try to spoil your day, but if you retain equilibrium, all will soon be well.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Either read the finest literature or go to services of your choice so that you can start living in the spiritual realm and know real happiness and success. Later, do some philanthropic deed and make this a blessed day, evening.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 22) — See that you make this a blessed day by being of service to those who look to you for assistance. Instead of concentrating so much upon the mighty dollar, enrich your soul by attending services of your choice, then become the Good Samaritan.

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 21) — Important you seek solace at church this a.m., since you are not thinking very straight. Then concentrate on those activities that will make you a better neighbor and become one whom people look to and will emulate. Be happy, gay.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — You are filled with inspiring thoughts and ideas now and should quickly put them in motion so that the future becomes happier and more successful. Dwell on a higher level of consciousness this holy day. Attend services!

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — This could be a most unhappy day for you if you do not early decide to do unto others as you want them to do unto you. Be very sure you are not extravagant, too, and seek the simple, inexpensive pleasures only.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — You may find it quite impossible to discuss own affairs with others today for the simple reason that each one is so busy or troubled. Be a stout fella and give a helping hand and you will indirectly receive benefits in the future.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) —Keep a sharp lookout for an opportunity to assist those in need today and store up lasting logs for yourself thereby. it is a proven scientific fact that it is more blessed to give than to receive. P.M. take health treatments you need.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) —If you are not most careful, you can really go overboard in your quest for pleasure. Zip that purse! Be kindly toward others and you soon have both charming company and much whole some entertainment available to you.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)— Make your home the centre of your interest today. Don't give a deaf ear to the pleadings of disgruntled members of close ties. Pitch in and help them in any way that you possibly can. Be as good to them as you are to outsiders.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — If you modulate your voice now, though you are feeling quite irate, this can still be a day with others. P.M. Look into any job you may need assistance and important paper work you may have to do. Plan the coming weeks wisely.

If your child is born today . . he or she will be quite well-balanced, although there seems to be a greater love of fun in this native than a sense of duty. So, be sure to teach the child these first always, and then the pleasures come naturally without worry. Give as fine a education as possible and see established toward property, lands, etc., particularly the administration thereof.

Monday, May 15, 1961

General Tendencies: — So many beneficial aspects are in effect today and tonight, according to the environment you are in, you the day, lasting for the health treatments you need, dental work, exercise, etc. Retire early.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Your affairs will run smooth with your overall aims today, Gem. You are in an excellent understanding with everyone. Tonight is then ideal for getting together for enjoyment of sports, etc.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Financial affairs are of utmost importance to you right now, so be sure you take the proper steps to insure a greater income. Later in the day, take time for the health treatments you need, dental work, exercise, etc. Retire early.

Cancer (June 22 to July 23) — Be sure to conduct self to affect personal interests. Make appointments early and stick to who are able to assist you to get what you want. Evening is then ideally suited for any social affairs that sound promising. Be enchanting, gay.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 23) If you converse quietly with key personnel, you can get them to co-operate with you in some constructive ideas you have in mind, since this spells added benefits for them, too. Decide to avoid the night spot, dine in style, have fun!

Leo (July 23 to Aug. 21) Allies will gladly co-operate with you today, but it is imperative you assist them with their ideas, too, for an ideal relationship to exist between you. P.M. Let sociability be the keynote and widen your circle of friends.

Virgo (Aug. 23 to Sept. 23) The right day to contact a banker-up for the assistance or OK you need at this time. Show your admiration and gratitude too. Reach that point of understanding that is lasting. Get out to dinner at some charming spot tonight.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Don't waste a moment of this fine day since much can be accomplished in new ventures or installing new systems that bring efficiency and greater security. Emulate methods of most successful people you know.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) This is the ideal day to incorporate a most efficient method for successfully taking care of all accounts. Then by a change of attitude, you can get greater devotion from those you love. P.M. Be romantically inclined.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You are able to get greater co-operation from those with whom you have any important dealings by sitting down quietly and threshing matters out with them. However, do so in a spirit of helpfulness and concern for their interests, too.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Delve into all that work awaiting you with vim and zip in the shortest that makes your labors a pleasure instead of a chore; do a bit of fancy angling. P.M. See that your quarters are in better order.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) This is one of those rare days when you can go ahead and do whatever pleases you the most, but you are nicely groomed, however, so that you make a fine impression. Go after those cultural pursuits that are so soul satisfying.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Handle wisely those private affairs at hand that require immediate attention, if you are desirous of having better dealings with those in the outside world. Be certain you impress such individuals with your logical thinking.

If your child is born today . . you will soon find that he, or she, is one of those rare people whose mental and physical capabilities are beautifully balanced. Give as fine an education as you can afford and see to it that your progeny is soon placed in sales work of a high calibre or where the latest ideas or sciences are to be exploited. Then the chart becomes most successful and career can begin quite early in life.

OFFICIALS PLAN

will have a month to hold a series of public meetings to explain the finer points of the tax collection system.

SETTING UP OFFICES

Provincial Treasurer James Allen has started to establish district offices for queries and information, and inspection of assessment rolls.

Offices will be located at Toronto, Windsor, Ottawa, Welland, Brantford, Stratford, Hamilton, Guelph, Owen Sound, Orillia, Peterborough, Smiths Falls, Ottawa, Orillia, North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie and Port Arthur.

An initial sales tax staff of about 430 persons will be required to look after the vendors.

The three-per cent tax, expected to raise $60,000,000 in the last half of this fiscal year and $150,000,000 each year thereafter, taps all provinces, except Alberta and Manitoba.

Food products for human consumption, agricultural equipment and children's clothing are among exemptions, along with any item costing less than 11 cents.

Except for 32 categories of exemptions all tangible personal property is taxable, whether retail, sold or manufactured as well as production of goods for sale.

The tax applies to every Ontario resident who purchases "tangible personal property" and taxes it home, whether the purchase is made in Ontario or in some other province or country, in other words, a resident who buys a set of golf clubs or a radio in New York should, according to law, report his purchase to the comptroller of revenue and pay the required tax. Treasury officials admit there will be difficulties in policing this situation, but the penalties for contravention of the act may be warning enough.

A person is liable on conviction to a fine of $10 to $1,000. False statements may involve fines from $25 to $1,000 or imprisonment up to two years, or both.

During the last few weeks some 30 delegations, from building contractors to funeral directors, have met with treasury officials to seek clarification of the tax or plead for wider exemptions. How successful they have been will not be known until the final regulations are passed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council.

SENTENCE ABORTIONIST

TORONTO (CP) — Thelma Porter, 44, of Toronto, charged on seven counts of performing abortions, was sentenced Friday to 18 months in prison. She was discharged in January after a young woman became seriously ill following an abortion.

Thomasburg

THOMASBURG — The regular monthly meeting of Hungerford School Area, No. 3, took place in Thomasburg School on the evening of May 1.

The sale of farm stock and machinery on the premises of Mr. Harold J. Morton on Wednesday afternoon was well attended, with the various articles offered for sale bringing good prices.

Due to ill health it is understood that Mr. Morton has been forced to retire from active farming but he and Mrs. Morton will continue to live on the farm.

Mrs. G. Wood and Mrs. W. McKeown of Napanee were Friday evening callers of Mrs. Ed Thompson.

The school pupils observed Arbor Day on Friday and armed with rakes and shovels, cleaned up the winter debris on the school grounds.

Mr. Charles H. Thompson, John and Claudia of Brighton, were Sunday afternoon guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Thompson.

Mrs. Harold Carleton is employed for the summer at the Bronk Cheese Factory in the Gilead neighborhood.

GENEVA LAOS PARLEY SOON TO START

Rumor Kennedy May Meet Soon With Khrushchev

Informal Summit Meet Now Appears Probable

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Kennedy, besieged by an army of diplomatic troubles, may meet with Soviet leader Khrushchev in a few weeks in informal summit meeting aimed at preventing a breakdown of East-West relations.

Reports that from sides are exploring the possibilities of holding such a meeting in some neutral area either than Geneva are circulating here, in New York and Palm Beach, Fla., where the president has been on holiday since Thursday. He is due back in Washington for his first state visit.

While U.S. authorities tried to temper the surprise move by suggesting the initiative for the meeting came from Kennedy's apparent willingness to meet with the Soviet leader may indicate a reversal of the president's foreign policy position.

WOULD AVOID TRAP

All through his presidential campaign last fall and in office last January, Kennedy has been determined to avoid site a situation such as confronted former president Eisenhower in Paris a year ago when the summit conference collapsed following the U-2 spy plane episode.

Kennedy argued that before the president has any summit meeting fruitful negotiations had to be conducted on lower levels.

Things haven't worked out too well for Kennedy.

Congress has scrapped the Kennedy team of baby bunglers like the Cuban invasion attempt. American allies in Southeast Asia are wondering aloud whether the White House knows what it's doing.

Deputy Warden Declines Details Of Prison Riot

MONTREAL (CP)—The Quebec attorney - general's office will hold an inquiry later this week into a prison riot at suburban Montreal's Bordeau jail Saturday morning which one prisoner was injured.

The riot brought over 150 police to the jail when it became evident the disturbance could not cope with the situation.

Acting Warden Georges Beaudoin declined to give any details on the causes of the riot or the extent of the damage caused.

The riot, which lasted about four hours, broke out in the kitchen of the prison where inmates were being served supper. It was confined to one wing of the prison.

British Cabinet Is Facing Pressure To Curb Immigration of Negroes

LONDON (Reuters) — The British government is facing continuing pressure to deal with sharply increased immigration from Commonwealth countries particularly the West Indies.

Cabinet ministers are considering how they can deal with particularly housing problems and over-crowding in certain areas.

But sources say there would be the greatest reluctance to take any steps conflicting with Britain's traditional "open door" policy toward Commonwealth and colonial citizens.

They rule out the possibility of any action discriminatory of race or color.

There have been speculative migrants now flooding in."

press reports that there is potential conflict at cabinet level between Commonwealth problem should be handled.

The Sunday Dispatch, a Conservative newspaper, said the cabinet has clamped down a "gentlemen's agreement" on members of Parliament who are campaigning against immigration of Negroes.

The right-wing Sunday Express said "a big clash is brewing in the cabinet" over whether the government should curb Negro immigration.

The Express said Home Secretary R. A. Butler is "alarmed at the unprecedented tide of im-

THREE RAILWAY ISSUES BEFORE COMMONS SOON

Transportation Will Play Dominant Role

OTTAWA (CP) — Transportation is expected to play a dominant role for the next few days in Parliament with three items linked to railway transportation high on the list of government business.

They involve the setting up of a special Commons committee on railways, airlines and shipping, the $20,000,000 - a - year "roll-back" subsidy on freight rates and a government proposal for a new Canadian transport board of directors to 12 from its present seven.

The transport items came after last Friday's major policy announcement of the day's past Minister Balcer on special subsidy aid for Canada's ailing shipbuilding industry and protection of Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River domestic shipping trade for Canadian ships.

Once the special committee on railways is set up, an early round of hearings is expected to be announced, with Canadian Pacific Railway President Donald Gordon will be the principal public appearance in Ottawa.

Hearings this year are expected to be more lively than last year with Mr. Gordon facing his chief opponent, Douglas Fisher, CCF MP for Port Arthur.

During debate on the Freight Rate Reduction Act, the government may drop a few more hints about what it plans to do about the first report of the Commons royal commission on transportation.

Transport Minister Dicfenbaker has said that the government plans to introduce legislation based on parts, but not all of the first report, which recommended federal subsidies amounting to $100,000,000 at the outset for the railways.

REJECTED BY SPEECH

The increase in the number of CNR directors was foreshadowed in the Speech from the Throne.

Legislation on this proposal, CNR President Gordon was kept on as head of the CNR on a temporary capacity, as were several other CNR directors.

These have been report in October in the House of Commons but decided to keep Mr. Gordon on the job.

The government used the transport department estimates as his platform to attack the policies of Prime Minister Diefenbaker's recent statement that the next election will be a fight between free enterprise and socialism.

Mr. Pearson announced Friday announcement of federal subsidies for shipbuilding yards as "Socialism at its worst."

"Doesn't this strike a blow at the very people the prime minister of free enterprise?" he asked government members. And he added: "This bill will be the most difficult thing coming before us for an apostle of free enterprise."

OTTER POLYMER

Polymer Corporation, producers of synthetic rubber, was making a great deal of money, Mr. Fisher said, and yet he always understood the purpose of Crown corporations to be just the opposite of business such as Polymer's.

"This is a contradiction in the free enterprise approach that I don't understand," Mr. Fisher said.

Govt. Moves to Restrict Use Of Death Penalty for Murder

OTTAWA (CP) — The government moved today to restrict the use of the death penalty in murder cases to those of calculated murder or those committed during a crime of violence.

The proposal, set out in a government bill introduced in the Commons by Justice Minister Fulton, showed the government has decided against an outright abolition of the death penalty for murder.

The bill provides no change in the present method of execution—by hanging.

The measure divides murder cases into "capital" and "non-capital" murder.

It provides a mandatory life imprisonment sentence for those convicted of non-capital murder, and also for juveniles under the age of 18 who are convicted of capital murder.

To be convicted of capital murder, the accused must be specifically charged with that offence. A person who is acquitted of capital murder may charge could not be tried again for non-capital murder on the same death.

The government's legislation follows several years of intermittent Commons debate on the question of whether to abolish capital punishment.

Several years ago a Senate committee recommended retention of the death penalty, but Diefenbaker government has replaced by the gas chamber or the electric chair.

Since the Progressive Conservative government took office almost four years ago, it has dealt with 46 cases of person sentence to death for murder—an automatic sentence on conviction. In 38 of those cases the government commuted the sentence to life imprisonment. Ten executions have been hanged.

The new legislation sets out two types of "capital murder" murders in which "planned and deliberate" or where death occurred as the result of a crime of violence, including kidnaping, robbery, arson, piracy and hijacking.

In crimes of violence, however, only the person who actually committed the act of murder or counselled the doing of it would be guilty of capital murder.

All other classes of murder would be considered "non-capital murder" for which life imprisonment would be the mandatory sentence.

A person charged with capital murder would not be allowed to enter a plea of guilty. In cases of non-capital murder, the accused could plead either guilty or not guilty.

If two persons were charged with capital murder but the evidence did not support the charge, a jury could find the accused guilty of non-capital murder or the prosecution could withdraw the evidence supported such a charge.

The bill also provides for an automatic appeal to the provincial appeal court in cases where the death penalty as been imposed.

The appeal court would be required to "consider the record and report" on whether there are present any other grounds upon which the execution ought to be set aside or the sentence varied, as the case may be.

Execution of the death sentence would be automatically suspended until after hearing of the appeal.

Several Members of Negro, White Group Brutally Beaten

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP)—A bus was destroyed by a fire bomb and several members of a Negro and white group of "freedom riders" were brutally beaten Sunday as they sought to begin the test of color barriers in bus stations into Alabama.

Members, however, vowed today to continue their swing through Dixie, which started in Washington May 4.

All told, 13 persons were hurt. Eight were hospitalized for smoke inhalation suffered when some one in a crowd of about 200 white persons set a bomb into a stalled bus outside Anniston, and four others were suffered at the hands of white men using pipes for clubs at a Birmingham bus station.

No arrests were made in either Anniston or Birmingham.

The "freedom riders"—eight white persons and eight Negroes—were members of the Congress of Racial Equality. They left Atlanta, Ga., Saturday by bus for the south to test racial segregation.

At Anniston an angry crowd of about 200 white persons surrounded one bus. Members of the crowd smashed some bus windows with bars and pipes, police said.

The driver headed for Birmingham at 11 miles outside Anniston the bus had a flat tire. A crowd of white men who had followed the bus began to attack it.

A fire bomb—believed to have been a soft drink bottle containing gasoline — was thrown through a window of the bus.

Highway patrolmen, summoned by radio, exchanged gunfire pistols into the air to disperse the crowd. The passengers fled and the bus was destroyed by flames.

Dr. Walter Bergman, 61, a former Michigan State University professor and a member of CORE group, said about eight or 10 white men boarded the other bus at Anniston.

He said they beat several members of the group, including himself, at Anniston. At Birmingham, two members of the CORE group, a Negro and a white man, were beaten when they headed for the white waiting room.

NATO SOLIDARITY AGAINST CUBA ASKED BY STATES

Appeal Is Made By State Secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has appealed to its NATO allies to support and join in a policy of isolation toward pro-Communist Cuba.

The appeal was made, it was learned Sunday, by State Secretary Dean Rusk at the NATO foreign ministers' conference in Oslo, Norway, last week. Rusk also told the European allies that the West cannot afford any more setbacks in the conflict with the Communist bloc.

Rusk warned also that the West may face a new Berlin crisis this year. In effect, he was arguing that there is just as much danger of cold war and they must recognize that Cuba is a part of it.

The allies took foreshadowed the tougher position he now is trying to develop at the 14-nation conference on Laos at Geneva.

Rusk in NATO thus warned the Europeans that if a ceasefire were firmly established in Laos the danger would be only the Communist side the resulting emergency would require immediate consultation, not only in the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization but also in the North Eastern alliance and in NATO.

The British and French attitude opposed U.S. intervention in Laos and their opposition together with resistance in Congress discouraged Kennedy from action.

FREEZE SUPPORT

In the case of Cuba the United States needs support from the other nations in the Western Hemisphere if its present policy for isolating or quarantining the Communist-inspired rule of Fidel Castro is to have any chance whatever.

What Rusk primarily asked from the Europeans was that they should use their influences in Latin America to win support for the policy of isolating Castro. They should also, Rusk argued, support it themselves.

The Kennedy administration had already told the allied governments in this hemisphere that the Castro regime is one of the best hope of dealing with the Communist threat in Cuba. At the same time, the United States wants to carry the concept beyond the point where that some pressures could be used.

The United States has been sounding out Latin American governments on the idea of a common front.

No apparent rush to condemn or quarantine Castro.

Three Members Of Family Drowned

PARRY SOUND (CP)—Three members of a family were drowned Sunday when their boat capsized in the Key River at Britt, near here.

Dead are William Caron, 42, his daughter Stella, 9 and his son, Thomas, 7.

An 11-year-old daughter, Zitta, was picked by clinging to the overturned boat.

The boat capsized when it hit the shore, the girl said.

7 Congolese Return Home After Posing Many Questions

MONTREAL (CP) — How do you bury your wife? That was the query of $1.45 for a dozen eggs or 70 cents for a can of beer? Why have you been receiving donations?

These and hundreds of other bizarre questions were posed by seven Congolese who spent last week at Trenholme Bay, in N.W.T. There they spoke with Eskimos, Indians, Metis and federal departments — northern affairs and transport. Problems Bay on Baffin Island, is some 1,300 miles northeast of Fort Norman.

The Congolese, with three employees of Air-France in Brazzaville, Congo Republic left their wives and the deputy minister of information. The Congolese were part of a climatological mission which left here during the weekend to return home after a week in the Canadian Far North.

The trip was jointly sponsored by the airline and a French textile company with a twofold objective: To test a new insulating fabric called Thermolactyl and record the Congolese reactions to the northern cold.

The organizers were interested in how residents of a torrid climate would adapt to the arctic chill.

Not one of the seven caught so much as a cold.

They left Montreal Saturday for St. Catharines and a visit to Niagara Falls after medical examinations.

The Congolese found scores of subjects of interest during a briefing. They were particularly intrigued by the extended daylight in the North and by igloos when the sun is visible in the daytime and by the use of dogs.

The Congolese stopped wondering about how the Eskimos kept their noses warm when explained the ground is frozen nearly all year long.

They were told that for one month at mid-summer the frost recedes to leave a foot of soil unfrozen. At this time the dead are interred in shallow graves and covered by stones.

The soil condition was also the reason no foundations are dug for buildings.

The high cost of food is the result of Frobisher Bay's distance from supply areas.

NATO Agree To Vague Status For All Laotian Groups

U.S. and Russia Accept British-French Scheme

GENEVA (AP) — The United States reluctantly agreed today to take part in an international conference on Laos after President Kennedy approved an American concession that deliberately left the status of the Laotian delegates vague.

The concession, which was to have opened three days ago, now is expected to go through at least a formal opening ceremony tonight or Tuesday.

But snags still remained and the Soviet and British co-chairmen of the 14-power conference notified the U.S. delegation there would be no opening meeting today. The conference had been scheduled to begin last Friday.

The problem that has held up the meeting has been deciding who would speak for Laos in negotiations with the Communists. Three rival Laotian delegations are here.

The United States originally took the position that the only Laotians who would be allowed at the conference would be representatives of the pro-West, Boun Oum government of Premier Boun Oum.

The communists insisted that the Communist-led Pathet Lao rebels and their self-style neutralist allies under Prince Souvanna Phouma—recognized by the Reds as the legal premier of Laos—should be the spokesman for Laos.

WAS A SYMBOL

The Washington Post said as an editorial "Cooper came to be a symbol of the vigor, courage and heroism in America. It is greatly to his credit that his private life did not lack the virtues he preached so frequently happens in Hollywood."

The Times of London devoted 800 words to Cooper, calling him "the all-American hero."

"In the naturally shifting and changing realm of screen reputations he was one of the really few perennial stars." The Times said. "His place will be difficult to fill."

The Canoe Film Festival in France met its gaiety with news of Cooper's death. "The entire festival was overcome with grief," an official. A special showing of High Noon was scheduled. Gary Russian premiere of the film jury said: "His death is a loss to the whole film world."

'HE HAD GUTS'

Donald Zec wrote in the London Daily Mirror: "He was a gent. He had guts. He was afraid of nobody and liked by everybody. He was a man first, and now the last, of the 'greats'."

Cooper's death was confirmed: A great actor disappears.

Spent with cancer, Cooper died shortly after midnight today. "He had great will to live or he might not have survived that long," said his physician, Rex Kenamer.

Cooper, wife Veronica and their 24-year-old daughter Marie were at the bedside, along with the actor's priest, the Rt. Rev. Daniel Sullivan. Also present was Cooper's mother, Mrs. Alice Cooper, 87.

Action of Dutch Military Planes Against Soviet Ships Protested

LONDON (Reuters) — Russia protested in a note to Holland against provocative actions of Dutch military planes against Soviet ships which it said were "of a deliberately hostile character." Moscow radio reported.

The note was handed to the Dutch Embassy in Moscow by the Soviet foreign ministry Sunday, the radio said.

Russia demanded that the Dutch government conduct an investigation, punish the offenders and take steps to prevent such provocative acts in the future.

The radio did not give any details of the actions referred to.

A report by the Soviet news agency Tass said the aircraft had circled over the Soviet W ater Spaksyay in early sea Friday and one of them fired at the vessel.

The note was said three shells exploded "in the immediate vicinity" of a Soviet vessel.

At The Hague, Dutch government officials were surprised when informed of the protest. A foreign ministry spokesman said "Nothing is officially known yet in The Hague, neither of any Russian protest nor of the handing of a note to the Netherlands ambassador in Moscow."

World Pays Tribute to Gary Cooper

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The body of Gary Cooper lay in a mortuary chapel here as the world paid tribute to his great hero.

Rosary will be recited tonight for the 60-year-old star, who lost his fight with cancer Saturday. On Tuesday his friends among the waning ranks of Hollywood great will file into the Church of the Good Shepherd in Beverly Hills for the funeral.

The shock of his passing was not lessened by the fact that it had been known for a month that he was dying. As the news swept around the world, it evoked words of appreciation for the lanky Montanan who personified the American hero.

Pope John cabled a message of sorrow to Cooper's widow and daughter. The British Broadcasting Corporation telecast a 15-minute tribute to the actor. "We feel like we've lost our best friend," said one Hollywood critic of the Tokyo Shimbun.

Damage $35,000 As Barns Burn At Bloomfield

Damag estimated at $35,000 resulted Sunday evening when fire destroyed two large barns and a hog pen at the Clifford Vincent farm near Bloomfield.

Thirteen yearling calves were burned in the blaze but 60 other cattle were saved when members of the family assisted by passing motorists, pushed them to safety from the burning barns.

The blaze was discovered about 9 o'clock, Sunday evening by a passing motorist who notified the Vincent family. Passing motorists then helped to untie cattle in the barn. Finally the progress of the flames prevented their re-entering the barns to free the young cattle.

The Bloomfield Fire Department answered the alarm and although nothing could be done to save the farm buildings, the Vincent home was saved from the fire.

Temianka Little Symphony Season's Final Attraction

By EUGENE LANG

For the last concert of the 1960-61 series of attractions presented by the Belleville Concert Association, the Collegiate Auditorium was filled to a beautiful number which included both the "regulars" of many seasons and new members who received this concert as a bonus gift for taking out membership. On stage was the Temianka Little Symphony, a group of a dozen instrumentalists, all of solo accomplishments, including a duo piano team. The conductor, Henri Temianka, is known internationally as a violin soloist, and also as co-founder of the Paganini Quartet.

The program selected for presentation here was one that did not tax the musical comprehensions of any of the audience as the music was of a character and style that lent itself admirably to the qualitative, if not always quantitative, talents of the orchestra.

The opening selection, the first movement from Bach's A minor Violin Concerto with Theodore Lettvin at the piano. Though competence of the instrument was shown, perhaps this spot would be unwise due to the fact that many expected more highly charged and virtuosic veerings than Bach was wont to saturate his solo parts with, notwithstanding the fact that close relations between soloist and accompanying forces did bring out the true essence of Bachian baroqueness.

Willem Pijper's Flute Concerto, also by J. S. Bach, Oriel Shanley, flautist, captivated the hearers with her pureness of tone and impeccable fluency in her performance of this lively work. The lively Badinerie finale tooted off a delightful number that this versatile performer essayed with effortless ease.

William Grant Still, one of the duo pianists, appeared next to the first movement of the Mozart Piano Concerto in E flat major (K.449) and admirably captured the mood of this not too familiar work with clarity and clean articulation of phrase. Then an overture on Hebrew Themes for Clarinet, Piano and Strings by Arnold Sieff featured David Atkins as clarinet solo'st brought the first half of the concert to a close.

CARNIVAL OF ANIMALS

Following intermission the second half of the Temianka program was devoted to the playing by the full orchestra and duo pianists of Camille Saint-Saens' delightful zoological spectacle "Carnival of the Animals". This humorous and tuneful suite in fourteen sections is one that is always enjoyed by audiences and here was given a compelling rendition, featuring the players at time dubbing in as expected on such added instruments as the glockenspiel and xylophone. The added attraction called for by the composer but included by the duo pianists was the elaborate playing of wrong notes in the octave scale passages over a specific section of "Pianists". It did bring smiles from the audience and added questionably to the overall fine performance of this particular, ensemble in this suite.

Various instrumentalists received ovations for their solo selections which appeared interspersed throughout the composition.

Three encores were given, each one featuring a different combination. Anne Temianka violist played the last movement of the Telemann Viola Concerto, Jenkins Concerto (duo pianists) played Arthur Miles' "Tarantella" Rhythm and the conductor appeared as violin soloist in the final encore, the Prelude to Saint-Saens' "The Deluge". In each case audience applause demonstrated listener reaction of satisfaction for the performances turned in by the respective soloists.

Summing up, the program was varied and well thosen, with remarks from Mr. Temianka adding information about each work to the playing. Although the auditorium was oppressively close, the concert was a fitting finale to another fine series. So ended the 27th season.

Director Will Be Speaker To Foremen

Daniel Coughlan, director of probation services for Ontario, will be the guest speaker at the windup meeting Tuesday night of the Quinte District Foremen's Club.

A native of England, Mr. Coughlan came to Canada with his parents in 1923 and settled in Guelph where he received part of his schooling. But in 1928, at the age of 14, he returned to England for two years, and trained as a middshipman in the Royal Navy aboard HMS Conway. On completion of his training, he joined the British Merchant Marine Service and for three years sailed on India, the Orient and Australia. He took his third mate's ticket, then got ashore at the age of 19 swallowed the hook and reinvested to Welland.

His next step was to enter the University of Toronto where he studied for the Anglican ministry at Trinity College. He was ordained in 1938 and until 1941 served in the church. But two years after the outbreak of war he joined the RCN as a combatant, rather than as a padre. He served in gunnery and intelligence branches and in 1945 received a medical discharge. He returned to the University of Toronto and took post-graduate studies in sociology.

Late in 1946, Mr. Coughlan went to the family town in Guelph, where he remained as a probation officer and later as deputy judge until the end of 1951. In 1952 the Ontario government created the post of director of probation services and invited him to be its first head.

Kelso Roberts Completes His Case

Hon. A. Kelso Roberts, Attorney General of Ontario, gave the last of his three scheduled addresses on organized crime to St. Paul's Progressive Conservative Association in Toronto on Thursday. The fact that Mr. Roberts is a native of Belleville, and that he gave the first of this series of addresses in this city, provides added incentive, if any were needed, for district residents to consider carefully what he has had to say.

In the main, we think reasonable citizens will have to agree with Mr. Roberts' view of the crime situation in Ontario, and in Canada as a whole. Certain reservations need to be made, however, in his judgment, and perhaps a major one, is with respect to his definition of organized crime. "It is, of course," he declared in his final address, "something beyond just isolated criminal acts by an individual or even by a few individuals working in a small way together."

Now it is true that this is a reasonable definition, but it is not the definition which many people have in mind when they speak of "organized crime." To them, any group of people acting in pre-arranged concert to break any provision of the Criminal Code is engaged in "organized crime." Here may be the explanation for much of the controversy aroused by Mr. Roberts' addresses. It seems to us that, though Mr. Roberts may be technically in error in his definition of "organized crime," he is right in making a clear-cut distinction between the co-operation, often just temporary, of a group of criminals and the organization of crime on a business-like basis. The latter condition is much more serious than the former.

We are not so sure, though, that Mr. Roberts is on as safe ground when he ascribes the paucity of "organized crime" (under his definition) in this country, compared with its prevalence in the U.S., to the fact that Canada has one Criminal Code, applying to the whole nation, while in the U.S. "a very great part of the criminal code is a matter of state enactment and, therefore, differs from state to state." This may be a factor in the difference between the situation there and here, but much more important is the fact that crime and politics have not become entwined north of the border to the degree that they have to the south.

There have been some disturbing signs of late, notably in Quebec, that not all the men in public life in Canada are as clean-handed as have been the vast majority of Canadian politicians in the past. Premier Jean Lesage of Quebec has already acted to shatter this mesalliance of politicians and those who live on the shady side of the law, but the state of mind which makes this possible exists elsewhere, too. The situation needs to be watched and the best way to watch it is to demand that men in public body be avoid even the appearance of evil. What starts out as an apparently relatively innocent conflict of interest can quickly grow into graft on a wholesale scale.

Mr. Roberts showed fine judgment in the opening part of his final address by stressing the difference between sin and crime. But he seems to us to have skipped too lightly over the fact that, though this difference exists, it is not always easy to determine the dividing line. It is in just this undefined area that organized crime is most likely to get a foothold, because what the law may say is a crime may be regarded by some citizens as not really a crime at all but only a sin, and by still others as not even a sin. Gambling is a case in point. The law says certain kinds of gambling are criminal, most churches say gambling is a sin and a great many individuals, perhaps the majority, do not consider it to be either. "Of course, there is a certain amount of bookmaking and betting in pools with some link-ups to know instantaneously the results of certain races, etc." Mr. Robert admitted. "But," he added, "there is no suggestion from the sources I have just mentioned that there is any undue or extensive unmolested crime effective in this Province at this time in any way comparable to some of the conditions that have been exposed in some of the States to the south of us."

One can hardly quarrel with so carefully qualified a claim to relative purity, but we would wager—cops, that slipped out—we would hazard a guess that it is possible to place a bet in Belleville on a horse race. This is illegal. The question which Mr. Roberts might well consider is whether it should be illegal. When acts which in most countries are considered to be sins, at worst, are made crimes by our laws, do these laws, perhaps, invite the organization of crime? Does not our proximity to the U.S., and the open border, mean that organized criminals could very easily establish themselves in these fields, here, despite the lack of readily-obtained political protection? Once established in such a field as gambling, might not a crime syndicate extend its tentacles to include control of much more serious infractions of the law?

Mr. Roberts mentions our inheritance of the criminal law of England as one of the reasons for the absence of organized crime in Canada. Is it just a coincidence that law-abiding England happens to be a country where bookmaking is legal and where laws governing prostitution and the sale of liquor are less stringent than in Canada?

U.K. Travel Ads Deceive

By Matthew Gaunt
Guardian Staff Reporter

For years now people in this country have complained about the advertisements of the British Travel and Holidays Association in American glossy magazines.

These show us as a parcel of local yokels, busy quaffing tankards of ale outside thatched inns under an unclouded sun while the pinkcheeked lasses in their lycra mercifully dancing our way to the next change of the Yeomen of the Guard, or tossing a caber in full kilt and glengarry while our friends look on, plus flours on the most expensive golf courses in Scotland.

Now the association's new chairman, Sir William Mabane, has owned his guilt and mixing misgivings at first about "the thatched cottage image"; but he is now as persuaded as the association's advertisements to be interpreted in the context of this country. It must be interpreted in the context of the country in which it appears.

Suppose that Sir William is right and that tourists are lastingly content with the sun and even after they have come here and perhaps found it a good deal blurred.

Is this the image we wish to fix in the minds of people abroad when once we get our acres out of suffering and returns of invisible export revenue?

A recent survey suggested that observant foreigners and most Americans do see us as a lot of picturesque hayseeds interspersed with fish-and-chip cavalry.

With half its mind the government seems to wish to perpetuate this picture even while the other half would like us to stand out as a go-ahead industrial society and an independent nuclear power.

In fact the world has too much reason to think our society obsolescent, the Russian merchants are doing their best to brand it as antique.

Making Trite Sound Bright

Windsor Star

There is something uncreal in the modern tendency to avoid unpleasant words. The idea is to make nasty things of life sound trite and more acceptable, by using nice words. Bowling alleys, for instance, become "bowl-o-drome" because alleys had some unfavorable connotations.

Workers in unions are fired or dismissed, or even "given the sack." They are merely "laid off" or, more still, declared "redundant."

How far this phony verbiage can go is illustrated in Dorking, England. There a cosmetic manufacturer's bill from his butcher, it bearing the printed heading: "Meat Technologist."

All this, of course, is related to the changes in terminology.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL I. DOUGLASS

DON'T LOSE FAITH IN CAUSE AND EFFECT

God just wound up the universe and went away and left it.

That is what the eighteenth century deists thought. But the Bible gives us no such picture of God and His work. Neither does it support the modern theory, which is promoted as more "scientific," that creation came about by a gradual, slow assembling of matter. The Bible begins with the confident affirmation that "God created the heavens and the earth. . . ."

How can anyone look upon the intricacies and the unity of nature and not see that the whole project had an original, "blue print" and that a master Craftsman did the job? It is mountain that it just happened is about as reasonable as are the stories children usually give about broken vases and empty cookie jars. Somewhere in the vast universe a Power is at work. That Power is either personal or super-personal. That Power created the world and continues to sustain it. If the universe just happened that is a more baffling miracle than the doctrine of creation. I can have faith in a creating and sustaining God. I can't comprehend theory breaks down my faith and my reason. Cause and effect. We live in a world of cause and effect. How come that that is the basic principle that enters not off in the beginning as the result of accident? Cause and effect, now, no cause and effect in the beginning?

It not only doesn't seem reasonable — it doesn't seem sane.

Refusing Raise A Fine Art. Says Sydney

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It does not say so in the cold court records, but probably more divorces have begun out of little things like hitting the boss for a raise than anything outside of the seven deadly sins.

A woman just cannot understand why her husband is such a crashing coward. In her code of conduct, you merely step inside the boss's office, stare straight into the boss's eye, and say firmly: "Look here, old fellow, I want a raise and no nonsense about it. And let's not have any about a few measly bucks — everyone knows you're filthy with the stuff."

Well, this may work all right for a woman who is used to standing up to the tradesmen day after day, but it falls flat on her wife face when a man tries the same tactics. He is subconsciously freed from the word go, and you will find him wandering around glass-eyed and silent for a few weeks afterwards.

I strongly suspect that when the society of corporation Treasurers holds it annual meeting, the treasurer who is the least afraid is much time in causing the last man to leave the hall as much time in causing the last man to leave the hall as much time in causing the last man to leave the hall as

This mileage-record holder is a 1934 coupé—rebuilt by Shell scientists Dave Berry and Fred Schaette. Using a normal Shell gasoline plus extreme mechanical modifications, and driving techniques, they racked up an unbeaten 203.32 miles per gallon.

Shell reveals how to increase your car's mileage up to 30 extra miles per tankful

As a result of a private argument as to who could go farthest on a gallon of gasoline, Shell scientists have performed prodigies. Two of them have achieved 202.32 miles per gallon.

You can't hope to equal this record under normal driving conditions. But if you take some practical tips from Shell's record-breakers—and if you use today's Super Shell gasoline—you can probably set some moneysaving mileage records of your own.

When it comes to mileage marathons, two Shell scientists are champions.

They racked up an astonishing 202.32 miles per gallon. But like most mileage contests it was largely a bit of scientific fun.

Our Mileage Marathon winners ran on normal Shell gasoline. They did install a used carburetor from an old one-cylinder engine. Their special modifications to the car and driving techniques were unusual to say the least.

To reduce friction, the wheel bearing lubricant was so thin that if you jacked up a front wheel and gave it a quick spin, it would keep turning for about half an hour. The radiator fan was removed (it uses up horsepower). All gears except high were removed.

Over the 11.94 mile course, the driver accelerated at full throttle in high gear, from 5 to 20 mph. Then coasted in neutral with the engine off. This "fits and starts" technique was used throughout the contest, and accounted for a lot of the extra mileage.

To use such extreme techniques and mechanical alterations yourself would soon get you even more trouble than mileage.

But there are certain steps you can take to increase mileage—particularly by adopting good personal driving habits and switching to today's Super Shell—the gasoline with nine ingredients for top performance.

Here's what Shell scientists suggest:

1. Don't gun a cold engine—you're wasting cold cash. When your engine is cold, it uses up more fuel. It does not operate efficiently. You're also in danger of undue lubrication. You pay for this in greater engine wear. (A properly operating thermostat assures proper warm-ups—saving fuel and wear.)

Note: Today's Super Shell has fast warm-up ingredients to save you gasoline, too. X-100 Premium Motor Oil also helps cold engines. It moves freely even when cold—saves fuel and reduces engine wear.

2. Use a light touch with the accelerator. It pays heavy dividends. Tromping, down on the pedal is an expensive habit. Starting up, it holds your automatic transmission in a lower "gear" longer than need be. This makes the engine turn faster, wasting fuel.

Underway, uneven pedal pressure is costly, too. Instead, feed just enough fuel to maintain even speed.

3. Drive "ahead of your car"—you'll be money ahead three ways. Watch for slowing traffic and red lights as far ahead as you can see. You'll be able to coast up to the stopping cars, instead of braking heavily when you get there.

Your savings here will not only be in fuel, but also in brake linings and tires.

4. Don't let fuel costs creep up at the stop light. If your car "creeps" when idling with the automatic transmission engaged, have your engine idle speed adjusted. You may save plenty. And, if you drive a stick shift, remember that pumping the accelerator won't change the light. It only pulls your gasoline gauge down.

5. Don't indulge in jack rabbit starts; they only show off your car's getaway —and your disdain for money. Racing starts are fine on race tracks—but the drivers are lucky if they get six miles per gallon.

You can earn many a free mile by making a habit of slow, steady acceleration.

6. Check the pressure in your tires—regularly. Keep your tires properly inflated. Under-inflated tires increase drag and friction and cost you mileage. Not to mention the cost in extra tread wear.

7. Check for dragging brakes—they eat fuel. Have your Shell dealer check for wheel drag next time you're in for a lubrication. If brakes drag, you pay for it every mile you drive.

If your dealer suggests relubricating wheel bearings, heed his words. You'll save gasoline as well as bearings by having them properly lubricated and rolling as they should.

8. Get these fuel-saving adjustments for top performance. If spark timing is off, for example, you pay for it in wasted gasoline. Knock from mis-timed spark does your engine no good, either. Have the compression checked—it can reveal power-wasting valve and ring conditions. There are other essential adjustments.

A. Keep your spark plugs at peak efficiency. Use Super Shell gasoline with TCP* additive to give them extra life. When electrodes wear beyond repair, replace the plugs—they're frittering away fuel.

B. Adjust carburetor for correct air-fuel mixture and proper idle speed.

C. Have automatic choke checked for correct operation. Unnecessary choking wastes gasoline.

D. Clean or replace filters for air, fuel, oil as manufacturer recommends.

E. Tighten fuel line connections.

F. Have automatic transmission or clutch checked regularly. Slippage in either puts good mileage on the skids.

Of special interest to owners of
OUTBOARD MOTORS:

Shell announces the first outboard motor oil that mixes instantly with gasoline to eliminate the leading cause of engine trouble.

Incomplete mixing of lubricating oil and gasoline in your outboard gas tank can play hob with the motor—make it overheat, score the cylinder walls, even cause it to "seize up."

Shell's new Quick-Mix Outboard Motor Oil blends completely with gasoline—the way cream blends in your coffee—in just 5 seconds. And it stays mixed so you are sure of perfect lubrication every second your outboard motor is running.

9. Get regular oil changes and lubrication—including transmission and differential. Your Shell dealer knows what to do. He has the finest equipment and lubricants to do it with. Your car will last longer. Your gasoline will go farther.

10. Show this advertisement to everyone who drives your car—especially if you pay their gasoline bills. Implore them to follow these rules. Insist that they stop for service at the sign of the Shell.

While we can't guarantee 30 extra miles per tankful, the closer these suggestions are followed the better your mileage will be.

To start off right, fill up with today's Super Shell next time you're by. It contains the nine ingredients most cars need for top performance.

#1 is TCP* additive. It can give many cars up to 15 per cent more power, up to 17 extra miles per tankful.

#2 is "cat-cracked" gasoline for power with a purr. It's the super-octane result of catalytic action at 900° F.

#3 is heavy alkanes, a high octane, anti-knock ingredient. Prevents knock at low and high engine speeds.

#4 is anti-knock mix for extra resistance to knocks. It helps control combustion, so that pistons get a firm, even push rather than a hard knock.

#5 is butane for quick starts. It is so anxious to get going, it would boil in your refrigerator.

#6 is mixed pentanes for fast warm-ups. It is made by tearing petroleum apart, much as you split kindling.

#7 is an anti-ice to check cold-weather stalling. It's added when the temperature is likely to remain below 45° F.

#8 is gum preventive to help keep carburetors from clogging.

#9 is Platformate for extra mileage. It takes one million dollars' worth of platinum catalyst for Shell to make this super-energy ingredient.

After you have filled up with Super Shell you'll soon feel and hear the difference in the way your engine runs.

That difference is the purr and power of top performance.

Home Mission Frontiers Topic At U.L.C.W.

The regular monthly meeting of the United Lutheran Church Women was held recently at the Parsonage Mission Crescent.

Devotions were opened by the singing of the hymn, "Faith of our Fathers." The Scripture lesson, Matthew 16: 13-18 was read by Mrs. H. Boch.

The topic "Home Mission Frontiers", was presented by Mrs. B. Bartleman, Mrs. H. Boch and Mrs. C. Heidebrecht. As this year marks the centennial of the Canada Synod of the Lutheran Church, the ladies chose this as their topic, showing how mission fields are chosen and developed. How a Mission developer makes a door to door canvass of the area to determine the number of Lutherans, non Lutherans who are interested in having a Lutheran Church.

During the past 100 years the development has been slow, but sure, and in the ten year period 1951-1960, 39 missions have been developed with Belleville well on the way to building its church.

The progress is slow, with many heartbreaking and disappointing happenings; but, it all is put together have faith in the pastor and in their Lord, success will come, and the joy of having a church of their own, will finally break through.

A prayer was led by Mrs. Bartleman and devotions closed with the singing of the hymn, "O Zion Haste".

Mrs. L. Conley acting as chair woman, held a brief business meeting.

There were outstanding business was that two layettes are ready except for a few pieces and the used clothing is ready with the ladies taking on pieces needing mending.

The ULCW Constitution was read over and each by-law discussed. Everyone was in favor of the constitution as read.

Tabernacle E.A. Studies 'Church In the World'

The Evening Auxiliary of Tabernacle United Church held the regular meeting on May 15 with the president, Mrs. J. M. Smith, presiding.

A letter from the Tri-M Club was read informing the members that the "Books for Liberia" project had been extended. Hard-covered books in good condition, especially for the 8-14 year age group, will be welcomed.

A letter was also read from Dr. Rose, missionary doctor in Korea, telling of the pitiful conditions there in regards to housing and hospital accommodation and urging church groups in Canada to exert pressure on the Canadian government for a more Christian attitude re immigration policy.

The members were reminded that a bale of used clothing will be packed by the W.M.S. groups early in June for the needy and old ryhmes are still being collected for shipment to Korea for use by war widows in home industry.

June 21st was set as the date for members to visit the County Home.

Mrs. P. F. Shane led in the study on "The Church in The World." While church leaders are working together in the ecumenical movement, individual churches and members must accept responsibility as well. New churches in Asia and Africa are dissatisfied with denominational differences and find them a hindrance.

EVERY CHRISTIAN — A MISSIONARY

The various churches in operation in many fields, e.g., Bible translation, aid to refugees, literacy campaigns and distribution of Christian literature. The Christian Church finds opportunities for influence in the many fine Christian colleges and universities in Asia. One example of a co-operative is the Vellore Mental Health Centre under Dr. Nichols, Canadian missionary woman doctor and certified psychiatrist.

The church exists by mission as fire exists by burning. Every true Christian is committed to missions. Some are called to special witness across geographical frontiers in schools, hospitals, churches or in other fields imparting technical knowledge, but whatever the field, their primary purpose is eternal God's love to men.

Mrs. J. Rabbit led in the worship service which was based on the importance of Bible study. Christians have been known as "People of the Book." Without knowledge of the Bible comes nothing more than ideals and good intentions.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. M. J. Smith on June 28th.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Roy Badgley are shown cutting the wedding cake following their marriage in Cambridge Street United Church, Cobourg, Ontario. The bride is the former Miss Arlene Marilyn Yvonne White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin S. White. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Howard Badgley of Corbyville, Ontario.

BADGLEY — WHITE

Standards of white snapdragons and ferns formed a lovely setting in Cambridge St. United Church, Lindsay, Ontario, on a recent Saturday in April for a candlelight wedding at eight o'clock, when Arlene Marilyn Yvonne White, Lindsay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin S. White, became the bride of Milton Roy Bagley of Cobourg, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bagley, of Corbyville, Ontario. The Reverend R. K. McLean, pastor of the church, officiated.

The wedding music was rendered by the church organist, Mrs. J. W. Dyell, who accompanied the soloist, Mr. John Boorn, who sang, "O Perfect Love", before the ceremony, and the "23rd Psalm" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her bridal gown of white silk organza over taffeta with rounding neckline, tiny sleeves, and fitted bodice of Chantilly lace. The princess line waist was accented with a fully gored skirt, dipping slightly at the back. She wore a queen crown headdress studded with seed pearls and sequins with circular veil of illusion silk tulle, and carried a single mauve orchid with white stephanotis.

Miss Joan Hargrave, of Lindsay, as maid of honor, was attired in orchid silk organza over taffeta fashioned in style similar to that of the bride's featuring a princess line fitted bodice with tiny sleeves. The full skirt formed a bell-like hemline. She wore a scalloped crown headdress edged with rhinestones, with circular over -the-face orchid-shade veil, and carried a bouquet of white mums.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. Merle Duffy, of Cobourg, while the guests were ushered by Messrs: Lionel Hall, of Lindsay, cousin of the bride, and Harold Shannik of Stirling, Ontario.

The reception was held in the lower hall of the church, where the bridal table was beautifully appointed with the traditional white damask linen, and centred by a three-tier pedestal wedding cake, flanked by silver candelabra based mig a lovely floral arrangement of pink and white mums and tall pink tapers.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore a sheath gown of Chantilly lace in Copenhagen blue, featurring a softly - draped bodice; pink petal hat and gloves, and corsage of pink Sweetheart roses.

For travelling to the northern United States, the bride chose an orchid-tone suit with white and orchid straw hat, patent beg and shoes and orchid corsage.

Guests were present from Buffalo; Niagara Falls, Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope and Peterborough.

The bride was entertained in Toronto, previous to her marriage, by the teachers' staff of Faywood school, where the bride is a teacher; at Peterborough, by the teachers of Confederation School where she had previously taught and at a shower in Lindsay, given by friends of the bride.

Mr. and Mrs. Bagley are residing in Cobourg, Ontario.

Tabernacle WMS Plans Activities

The regular monthly meeting of Tabernacle United Church W.M.S. was held in the ladies' parlor on Tuesday afternoon.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. F. Osland, who read a poem emphasizing the fact that God needs each one to help Him accomplish His purposes in this world.

Plans were discussed for "Family Missionary Party" on Monday evening, May 15, in Tabernacle Church, also for a visit to the Home for the Aged on June 14.

It was decided to have a joint meeting with the W.A. on June 1.

A letter was read from Tri-M Club asking for suitable books to be sent to Liberia, also that each one at the meeting send a Bible story book to Liberia. A letter was read from Dr. Rose, missionary in Korea, asking that church people seek to influence the government so that the limitation laws be broadcasted to allow more people in this country, especially the undertaken by Mrs. Slavin, literature secretary, displayed some of the books from the bookshelf and asked the members to make use of the books during the summer.

Mrs. May and Mrs. Slavin had charge of the study book and worship service.

In the first century Christians were the group, but later split into different groups. Now a strong movement toward union of groups, especially in countries like Japan, is seen. The Christian Churches and Christians in India fail to see why the west is so divided when they are all the children of one Father. (John 17: 11). Jesus said, "Holy Father, keep them in Thy name which Thou hast given me that they may be one even as we are one."

A record was played, produced by Berkeley Studios. This was a worship service prepared by James Ormiston of Angola, Africa. The voice speaking on the record was that of the Rev. Mr. C. Moorhouse. Part of the record voiced these thoughts: "In the ecumenical movement God is drawing Christians together. We are to be into all the world together, is heaven in the air or is it helping people in this world in a better way of living?" In the record was heard different nationalities say in their own language these words: "O God our Heavenly Father" and these Christians together is one God.

After the showing of the picture a questionnaire was conducted by Mrs. May concerning the picture shown.

Christ Church P.G. Hears Talk On 'Rogation'

The regular monthly meeting of Christ Church Parish Guild was held on Tuesday afternoon in the parish hall. The president, Mrs. R. H. Dawson, welcomed the ladies and took charge of the business portion of the meeting. Reports from the various officers and conveners were given and correspondence read.

Plans for the forthcoming Blossom Tea" in early June were discussed and conveners appointed for the various tables, as follows: children's clothing and fancy-work, Mrs. Horace Wright, Mrs. A. Thompson, and Mrs. William Adams; home-baking, Mrs. Bradshaw and Mrs. W. Diment; novelties Mrs. A. Jordan and Mrs. Day; toys Miss Lee; Mrs. McKenzie; candy, Mrs. M. Wallbridge and Mrs. L. Hall. Joint conveners for the tea will be Mrs. Fred Larder and Mrs. I. R. Slavin.

ROGATION DAYS

Mrs. R. Griffith presented the devotional period of the meeting, a well-thought out talk on Rogation Days — these special days in church life when prayers are said for the seeding and planting of the land. The speaker discussed the "Te Deum" which is a supreme expression of gratitude from the heart and which has been in constant used since the days of St. Augustine.

The president expressed the thanks of the members to Mrs. Griffith and Mrs. Bradshaw, who closed with the benediction.

Tea was served by Mrs. A. Jordan and Mrs. A. Noakes.

Members were reminded that the next meeting will be a pot-luck luncheon and the last meeting before the summer recess.

A large number of ladies journeyed to St. George after the meeting to attend the "Tea" which was being held.

Widows, Mothers of War Dead Praised by P.M.

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker told widows and mothers of this country's war dead Friday that Canada owes them "more than could ever be expressed."

He spoke at a breakfast concluding the three - day annual meeting of the Remembrance Association, Silver Cross Women of Canada.

"We as people of Canada are so deeply indebted to each and every one of you," he said.

Mr. Diefenbaker described an informal meeting with the group Thursday as "one of the most touching experiences of my life." He arranged for a second meeting Friday, and said he had had his breakfast at the usual hour of 6 a.m. and therefore could chat with them while they were having theirs.

About 85 per cent of the association's membership of some 2,000 are mothers who lost sons in the Second World War.

The group is concerned about its members being dependent on pensions for sons lost in the war.

These pensions are reduced when the recipient becomes eligible for the old age pension.

A Montreal widow with only two sons in the navy, said her pension of $1,200 was reduced to $35 when she received the old age pension of $55.

Members maintain that a compassionate pension should not be reduced.

Mrs. J. A. M. Hamilton of Edmonton was re-elected president.

Welfare work among veterans is undertaken by all chapters. Members adopt veterans who have no relatives. Scholarships have been established for children of veterans.

Stella C. — My job is so hard I must give up my friends.

Ratepayer U. — No job is worth the sacrifices she's making for hers.

* * *

Stella C. — I'm 36, divorced, and employed in an advertising agency. I've been there 8 years, love the work and have hoped to work my way up gradually in the usual way. Suddenly TV has come on the scene of developmental. Due to the resignation of a big-pix, the unfortunate death of an executive, and other displacements, I, plodding old Stella, was moved to the top in-one leap. Now I'm the youngest account executive in the firm!

I do so want to make good. But to do so, I must withdraw from activities I've enjoyed for years and do entertaining my friends, joining the girls for lunches and matinees, showing up at family get-togethers. Rachel says I'll be sorry and to turn down the promotion.

* * *

Rachel U. — "Pinxy" is the right word for Stella just now, and no one of her best friends, I'm trying to show her which way is up. It's all right to be ambitious and key to get ahead but she's so eager to get to the top of the ladder, she has blinders on and can't see the important things here below.

Her new position is so competitive, she tells me, that she must keep running just to stay in the same place. No matter when I telephone, she cuts me short saying she has work to do. Weekends and holidays are no different. Stella has become almost a machine, far as her social life is concerned.

And what about dates? She used to join me in a foursome, but now she's busy with a TV campaign or an out-of-town conference. It's not worth it.

* * *

The Council — What makes Stella run? What's the carrot at the end of the stick? To Rachel it seems to be wild, blind, almost hysterical ambition. But to Stella it's the conviction that this is it — the opportunity that knocks only once.

We side with Stella if she can put a time limit on this "all work no play" bit. If she tries to consolidate her hourly rise. Six months, say, ought to get her over the hump. Most success stories include a gruelling period of "giving up" buckling down and even knocking under. Being a woman, Stella may have to be even more tenacious of her pench. Her superiors will remark her, at the first open, that a dozen others would like her job.

What happens to friendships meanwhile, Rachel asks. Will they survive un-nourished, or wither from neglect? True friend ships will come through the deep-freeze of Stella's pre-occupation intact, because true friends want for her what she wants for herself.

Life is a series of choices and the secret of happiness is to make a wise choice — wise, that is, for the chooser. Stella chooses, because of the drives inside her, distinction in her career first, and next, those friends who will join her in the necessary sacrifices. Rachel, on the other hand, chooses human relationships first.

There are 120 species of plums. As friends, Stella and Rachel can pick different ones and enjoy watching each other enjoy! But we must caution Stella against getting too engrossed in plums and forgetting other, possibly more precious fruits.

MODERN MANNERS

CAROLYN HAGNER SHAW

A PITFALL OF THE BRIDE-TO-BE

A recent young bride has been kind enough to write in and ask me to pass on a warning to others who are in the midst of wedding plans. She hopes her suggestions will keep them from making the same mistakes she did.

Her subject has to do with keeping track of gifts as they arrive. No plan was made after the wedding invitations went in the mail. When the presents began to arrive a few days later, no one was assigned to open them, and make a definite note of who sent what, before they were placed on display. Result? Now she has many gifts, with not the slightest idea who sent some of them.

Naturally, she cannot write notes of appreciation to those who were kind enough to think of her. She realizes now that even a card is going to be far too late for some time-to come. She will know that some of the people she meets probably sent her a gift, and haven't been thanked. She is afraid to offer thanks, and a explanation, for fear they didn't send one!

To avoid such an unpleasant situation, I suggest that the bride-to-be with the importance of appointing someone to handle all gifts. As this is not done, friends, relatives and the bride herself are not to open the gifts as they arrive. In the rush, cards inevitably get lost unless someone takes over with a firm hand and makes a rule that only she be permitted to open the gifts. Really, it's the only way to do it.

All stationers have a booklet containing ruled pages on which are divided up into columns headed: Name of Sender; Address; Description of gift and the store from which it came. Each gift is numbered. To match these are small stickers, with glue on the back. As the gifts are opened, fill in the necessary information, then paste the sticker with the matching number on the gifts itself. If you follow this procedure, you can't go wrong!

This little booklet is invaluable to the bride when she writes her thank-you notes. As each one is written, she checks the name of the sender of the gift. Though it may be hard to stick to this plan with all the excitement that's going one, it's well worth it to do so, believe me!

Sandwich Session

By Mary Moore

Marianne is here for Pete's wedding and giving me strong advice regarding the kind of collation she and her friends in Ottawa want: meals geared to small children and country ideas.

That is fine and I will follow your suggestion but today I am full of ideas for sandwiches — sandwiches that can be made for 20 people for a shower for Margaret — my brand new daughter-in-law.

There are many of you who write to me for sandwich ideas and amounts so I kept strict notes of this while I made them.

FANCY SANDWICHES FOR 25:

I ordered 2 loaves of sandwich bread, sliced lengthwise, from the bakery. These were pink and 50 per cent whole wheat and cost 50c each, because they were sliced on a new special slicing machine.

For all of the spreading and filling I used 10 ounces of mayonnaise and nearly 5-8 pound butter.

I made 3 different fillings:

CHICKEN:

One 3-pound frying chicken simmered in water to barely cover until tender: cooled in cooking liquid then chilled overnight in refrigerator so it would be easy to slice.

EGG:

Five large eggs, hard-cooked by covering with, water, bringing to boiling point, covered, removing from heat and allowing to stand covered 1-3 hour. These were then chilled in cold water and peeled. I put them through the medium-small knife of grinder and followed them with a green onion including top and 1 small stalk celery. I added 1-3 cup mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon commercial sour cream and 1-2 teaspoon salt and mixed them well.

CHEESE:

One-quarter pound old Cheddar cheese was put through grinder and followed by the pimientos from one 4-oz. jar. I mixed these with 2 oz. white, cream cheese, 1 teaspoon each horseradish and prepared mustard and about 1-6 cup mayonnaise and mixed them until smooth.

RIBBON SANDWICHES:

For these use 3 lengthwise slices of whole wheat and 1 lengthwise slice of pink bread. Spread 1 side of each with soft butter. Spread 1 whole wheat slice with the Cheese Filling; put slice of pink on top. Spread it with Egg Filling; putting second slice of whole wheat on top, buttered side facing down. Wrap firmly in wax paper then in a towel and chill overnight, weighted down with heavy object — (I used a brick). When ready to serve, with razor-sharp knife cut off all crusts and cut into ribbon sandwiches about 3-4" thick. These may be cut in halves crosswise.

PINWHEELS:

Spread 2 slices pink bread and 2 slices whole wheat bread with softened butter and spread 1 each with the cheese and 1 of each with egg filling. Roll up these 4 spread slices, starting at narrow end, firmly, like jelly roll into rolls. Wrap airtight and chill overnight. When ready to serve, cut off crust-ends and slice into pinwheels 1-2" thick. These slivered sandwiches are very popular.

CHICKEN:

Spread all remaining slices of pink and whole wheat bread with soft butter and mayonnaise — bottom slice with butter and top slice with mayonnaise. If desired slice the cold chicken as carefully as possible. Cover the buttered bread with sliced chicken and sprinkle generously with salt.

Cover with mayonnaise and spread slice, wrap firmly and air-tight and chill overnight. At serving time with razor-sharp knife cut off crusts and cut long sandwiches into dainty triangles or better still grind chicken and instead of spreading 1 slice with mayonnaise add the mayonnaise (about 3-3 cup) to the ground chicken and season with salt. Spread on unbuttered slice of bread. This ground chicken filling makes sandwiches which cut into neater triangles.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Salary Disturbs Salesman

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—Wonder if you can help me with my "human problem." I am a salesman and have turned in good sales records for 10 years. A few months ago the firm took on a new sales manager.

I have just learned what his salary is and I'm burning up. It is nearly twice mine, and he certainly doesn't earn it. I know that life is like that but this is too unfair for me to take it calmly. You say we should talk things over. Do you think I should talk to the boss about this? I have to do something.—JUST ED.

DEAR JUST ED:—Fair or unfair. I can't tell without more evidence. Perhaps his job involves organization and creative work you don't know about.

But I'm sure of one thing: envy never increased anyone's salary. You are practically paralyzing yourself about what someone else is being paid. How are your sales this month? Down, likely, while you use up your nervous energy burning up!

Now is the time to face up to your own frustrations and do something about them. Find ways to improve your output. Then when you go to the boss for a raise you'll have an argument he can't resist.

DEAR DORIS:—I'm caught between two fires. My aged mother is living with us and I have a growing family. My husband and I have taken care of mother for years and he is quite willing to keep on.

But either she is getting older and more crotchety or the children are getting noisier or both. Anyway she seems to be shouting at them for some small thing half the time. If I try to calm her down or stop her, she acts hurt and doesn't speak for hours.

This is getting everybody's nerves on edge. We have never shouted at our children and it is just no good for them. Is there any way to handle this?—MURIEL.

DEAR MURIEL:—Is your mother well? Does she have enough to do? These are the two questions to ask. When people fail in health, nerves get short. When old folks feel useless, frustrations make for bad tempers.

The solution:—First, a medical examination to be sure about her health. Then, all being well, give her some regular responsibilities. These might be in connection with cooking, or washing dishes, mending or making clothes. Or reading to the children when they go to bed at night.

Seek her advice about things you feel she knows about. Talk over child-raising problems so that she will see how the children react to good treatment and bad.

Old folks are people and to be content they have to see themselves as going concerns.

Women's Activities

CHRIST CHURCH W.A.

On Thursday afternoon members of the Afternoon Branch of the Women's Auxiliary of Christ Church met in parish hall, for their monthly business meeting.

Mrs. H. Pitt was in the chair and opened with a devotional period. The correspondence was read followed by reports from the various officers.

It was noted the bale had been sent to the McKay School, Dauphin, Manitoba and the hospital bale is being prepared for Pangnirtung.

It was agreed to donate a sum of money to purchase articles for the bale to Igloolik in the Arctic. Anyone wishing to donate articles of warm clothing, bedding and Christmas gifts were asked to have them in by June 1st when they will be packed at the regular meeting on that date. As this is a Deanery project it was agreed to invite members of all W.A. branches in Prince Edward Deanery to join the members on the occasion.

It was reported by the Dorcas secretary, materials would be supplied to anyone who would care to sew or knit for the bales.

Mrs. Pitt expressed appreciation to all those who helped in making the W.A. annual which was held in Christ Church on May 2nd, 3rd and 4th, the success it was, particularly to those who offered the hospitality of their homes to out-of-town delegates.

It was noted 40 J.A. pins had been presented to the Junior Auxiliary. After the meeting closed with special prayers for ill members, refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Next week's meeting will take the form of an all-day quilting with a pot-luck luncheon served at noon.

Mrs. Kennedy Has Picked 9-Piece Wardrobe for Visit

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. John F. Kennedy has picked a nine-piece wardrobe, including two glamorous formals, for her three-day state visit to Canada this week.

Her outfits, designed as usual by Oleg Cassini of New York, were selected with an eye to weather changes. They include a wide range of colors.

Mrs. Kennedy will be accompanying the president on his first official visit to another country and her dress is sure to attract attention. Canadians will get a good sample of the popular "Jacqueline Kennedy look."

The White House, releasing details of Mrs. Kennedy's wardrobe Sunday, listed no information about hats or accessories, but described three coats, three dresses, two formal gowns and a suit.

Her press secretary explained that Mrs. Kennedy's hair will be "the usual back-of-the head pillbox type."

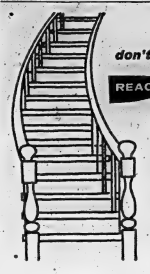
For her first appearance and jet-plane travelling costume, the first lady will wear a light-weight wool navy blue sheath dress with cap sleeves and a bateau neckline and a matching wool coat, double-breasted with a low belt, deep patch pockets and three - quarter length sleeves.

WILL SEE OUTFIT

In this outfit, Canadians will see beautiful, brunette, five-foot, seven-inch Mrs. Kennedy as she is welcomed late Tuesday at Uplands airport and drives with her husband through Ottawa to Rideau Hall, residence of Governor-General Vanier.

Then she'll change into a heavy white silk long evening gown with a slim skirt and sleeveless belted overblouse for the formal state dinner and reception given for the Kennedys by the Governor-General Thursday night.

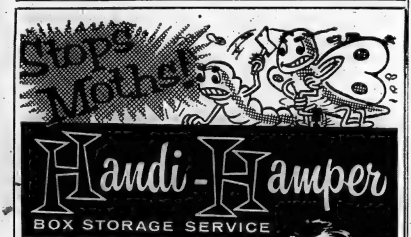
On Wednesday, to lunch with Prime Minister and Mrs. Diefenbaker, Mrs. Kennedy has selected a beige, ribbed silk ottoman two-piece dress. The overblouse is sleeveless and bateau necked. She will also wear a matching silk ottoman coat, double-breasted, with low pockets and three - quarter length sleeves.



That night, when President and Mrs. Kennedy entertain about 20 guests at a white-tie dinner at the American Embassy, the first lady will appear in a pink ribbed silk organza long evening dress that is sleeveless and bateau-necked and has a matching stole.

Mrs. Kennedy's wardrobe includes these supplemental clothes "to be worn according to the weather":

A pale yellow wool suit, single breasted, with three-quarter length sleeves, notched collar with slightly flared skirt.



A turquoise mohair coat, single-breasted, with notched collar, three-quarter-length sleeves and low patch pockets.

Have your employees all 4 of these important benefits

...in the program which you have provided for their security?

LIFE INSURANCE—An adequate amount of protection for the family is more easily provided when group life insurance, with its low cost, is combined with individual policies, to make up the employee's insurance program.

WEEKLY INDEMNITY INSURANCE—When an employee's earnings are cut off because of a spell of illness or an injury—then weekly indemnity insurance steps in to help pay household bills, and meet other current expenses.

COMPREHENSIVE HEALTH INSURANCE—This coverage is available both to employees and dependents, and affords protection against the heavy costs of serious or prolonged illness, in addition to normal medical expenses. Under this plan, up to $10,000 may be paid in the case of a single illness.

PENSION BENEFITS—For the day of retirement, every employee wants assurance of a pension which will help him to live independently, comfortably, and without money worries. The London Life's varied and flexible pension plans are being more and more widely used to provide the needed income.

The London Life Insurance Company has been providing group life insurance plans since 1919, and the group life insurance in force now exceeds one billion dollars. This Company was the first Canadian life insurance company to issue group sickness and accident benefits, and today is one of the leaders in Canada in providing this form of coverage.

The London Life has group insurance offices across Canada, staffed with trained group insurance representatives to provide service to employers and employees.

Complete information about group benefit plans may be obtained through any of the London Life's 94 agencies. Bridge St. United WMS Gives Afternoon Auxiliary Reports

The regular meeting of Atternoon Auxiliary of Bridge St. United Church met in Sunday School auditorium with the president, Mrs. Davis in the chair. Owing to the absence of the secretary, Mrs. Wishart, the treasurer, Mrs. Parker, Mrs. Heffie and Mrs. Denyes acted pro tem.

Mrs. Denyes read a detailed report on the "Dessert Luncheon". The receipts after all expenses, netted $201.

Mrs. Hibbard, as corresponding secretary, had written a number of letters, several of them letters of condolence, others thanking different people for various types of work performed.

The card secretary, Mrs. MacDonald had sent 36 cards, since last meeting. Mrs. MacDonald is supply secretary and reported the joint collection for blankets from the Evening Afdiliary and Afternoon Auxiliary had purchased ten blankets for Korean Relief. She also asked for good used clothing for the bale as the allocation this year.

Mrs. Davis announced three life membership's having been received. Those being made life members were: Mrs. Broad, Mrs. Ormood, Mrs. E. James.

Mrs. James not being present, Mrs. Broad was asked to come forward, Mrs. Davis presented her with her certificate and pinned her life membership pin on her dress. Mrs. Ormond also came forward to receive hers. Mrs. Broad made this presentation. Both these memberships were the gifts of Mrs. Broad's son.

Mrs. Denyes Association secretary reported ten associate members with splendid contributions from them.

The June meeting is to be a picnic at Mrs. Fuke's home; on June 19th. Mrs. Hibbard, Mrs. Massey's group in charge. The president passed the meeting over to the group in charge under the leadership of Mrs. S. Gilmour and Mrs. Twiddy.

Mrs. Gilmour conducted the worship service after welcoming everyone on behalf of the group. Mrs. Twiddy and herself, Mrs. Twiddy read the names of the group members.

Scripture was Psalm 724 in the hymnary and was read responsively.

GUEST SOLOIST

Mrs. Ilsey of Christ Church, was guest soloist. The study for the meeting was taken from the last chapter of the Study Book. This was taken by three members of the group along with Mrs. Gilmour.

First speaker was Mrs. Leo Bokal, who pointed out how confusing denominalism is to new churches in the eastern countries. So there is much stress being put on unity of all Christian churches. The World Council of Churches meets in New Delhi this fall and this will be discussed largely.

The next speaker, Mrs. Cathers gave ways and means being used to get the Gospel message to the people. Through radio, visual education and mass communonication committee.

North American mission boards aid in promoting these means of reaching people. The Sunday School of the Air throughout the isolated parts of Canada is a great blessing to families too far from church on Sunday school. Lessons are mailed with instructions for teaching them. Last year 438 enlisted in this program.

The third speaker, Mrs. Bear described a modern hospital in Vellore. This hospital, with adjoining clinics, constitutes what is known as "Vellore's Mission Health Centre." Dr. Florence Nichols, C's nadian missionary doctor and certified psychiatrist, is clinical director. This health centre was opened in June, 1958. Dr. Nichols is so delighted to have a proper place to carry on her busy practice, having moved 34 times prior to being stationed in these new buildings.

Mrs. Gilmour reviewed other items of study this year. The refugee work on which two films were shown. She reviewed some of the warnings given by special speakers. Mrs. Mullett, having seen Communism spread over China so rapidly, desiring all Christian teaching, as is happening in Cuba.

Dr. Forest stated "no teacher in Russia is allowed to attend church." Jane Scott told in her address at Tweed of the threatening letters she received. Afternoon should be the watchword.

In conclusion Mrs. Gilmour gave as her "gist" of our World Wide Study this year, "Others". She closed with the poem of that title. Mrs. Davis closed the meeting.

Sandwiches and tea were served with Mrs. Davis pouring.

Hasty Pees Put on Fine Show At Inspection of Regiment

It was all there yesterday afternoon — at the annual inspection of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment; all there — except for "The Regiment's" battle color. Nature put on her finest show of weather to date and so did the Hasty Pees.

The ceremonial march past and the displays rated the commendation of "first class" for the "famous old regiment" from the inspecting officer, Brigadier A. J. B. Bailey, DSO, CBE, ED, CD, during his remarks afterwards.

The inspecting officer also complimented the regiment on the initiative and the originality which the officers and men had shown during the past year's training and as well on the fine show presented on the Loblaw's parking lot before the eyes of several hundred local spectators.

Observing that a number of those involved (the outlying sub-units) in the inspection had had to rise early in the morning and travel a great distance in order to be on parade, Brigadier Bailey emphasized that the result was "well worth every effort put into it." He also complimented the band for its performance and for the splendid appearance of its members in their new scarlet and blue dress uniforms.

In closing the inspecting officer remarked that the strength of the Militia in Canada was due to its being composed of a group of "very devoted Canadians" whose belief in their country and their acceptance of the responsibilities of citizenship had served the country well in two world wars due to their work and training during times of peace.

The members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment had shown, through the excellent inspection, Brigadier Bailey concluded, that they were still "a fine group of soldiers."

Two members of the unit were distinguished with the Canadian Services Decoration for 12 years' service by Brigadier Bailey. Major D. F. Riordan of Belleville, officer commanding of "A" Company, Trenton, and Sgt. P. G. Richardson, of Trenton, were the two presented with their "C.D.'s."

UNITS REPRESENTED

The outlying units of the Regiment were all represented and those from Trenton, Madoc, Port Hope and Millbrook presented displays along with the Belleville unit. Lowering of casualties from high levels was demonstrated by Trenton's "A" Company. "B" Company from Madoc gave an excellent display of first aid techniques and administration, whilst the Port Hope and Millbrook people combined efforts to produce a first-rate demonstration of the various knots and lashings which are common to rescue work methods.

The Belleville unit put on two demonstrations of its training, one being a display depicting how signal communications could be organized in a mobile support unit when in the field section. The other display involved the handling of casualties which would have to be evacuated from buildings.

In the formal part of the inspection, the unit, under the command of Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy, C.D., was given a very excellent display of drill with all commands being executed precisely and in unison throughout the ranks. The marching on of the color party with one staff bare because of the stolen battle color, to slow time, was beautifully executed and, perhaps, drew a tear to the eye of many spectators.

Following the inspection, the regiment paraded to the Belleville Armouries where presentments were served. In a brief address before dismissing his officers, Lt.-Col. Duffy complimented them for their part in putting on "perhaps the finest inspection" he had ever seen the regiment perform.

Also present amongst the inspecting party were Brigadier M. E. Clarke, C.D., commanding officer of 15 Militia Group, from Kingston; Lt.-Col. Donald Forrester, general staff officer in charge of training, Eastern Ontario Command.

GOOD SHOW — Obviously pleased with the demonstration they were viewing as the annual inspection of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment yesterday afternoon are (left to right), Brigadier M. E. Clarke, CD; Brigadier A. J. B. Bailey, DSO, CBE, ED, CD (Inspecting Officer)- and Lt.-Col. Angus Duffy, CD (commanding officer of the Hasty Pees.

FIRST AID DISPLAY — Members of "B" Company of the Hasty Pees from Madoc put on a demonstration of the various aid techniques which militiamen are trained in under the direction of Lt.-Capt. Hubel of Bancroft. This was one of three displays presented by members of the regiment's outlying sub-units.

Storm Picks Up Light Truck, Driver Aboard

POCAHONTAS, Ark. (AP) — Ed Tyler, an employee of a drive-in theatre here, literally took off in a light truck Sunday.

A windstorm picked up the truck and spun it around several times before setting it down.

"I was hanging onto the steering wheel with my feet out the door," Tyler said. "I thought I was a goner."

He wasn't hurt. The storm damaged the theatre but hit nothing else.

How Railway Strike Settled

OTTAWA (CP)—Former Liberal transport minister Lionel Chevrier demanded in the Commons Saturday that the government say how the railway strike was settled.

Did the railways and the non-operating unions "get together" and come to a settlement or were "certain people" instructed by the government to make an agreement? he asked.

Mr. Chevrier posed his question after a spirited clash with Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The Liberal MP for Montreal Laurier, speaking on transport department spending estimates for 1961-62, had started a speech in which he said the strike was not settled in the way in which Mr. Diefenbaker said Nov. 30 it would be handled.

He quoted the prime minister as saying then that the royal commission on transportation would report on how to avoid discriminatory freight rates, legislation would be introduced to "equalize opportunity across Canada," the freeze on rates would be lifted, the railway could apply for a rates increase and then consider the agreements with the unions.

That was not the way it was done, Mr. Chevrier said.

At this point Mr. Diefenbaker entered the debate and Mr. Chevrier offered to repeat his remarks as the prime minister would not think that he, Mr. Chevrier, was taking advantage of Mr. Diefenbaker's absence from the House to criticize him.

"You generally do," said Mr. Diefenbaker.

An attempt by Mr. Chevrier to force the prime minister to "withdraw" the remark was turned down by Deputy Speaker Jacques Flynn who said such statements could be made.

ROBBED AGAIN

NEW YORK (AP)—Two gunmen held up Luchow's, Restaurant, one of New York's best-known restaurants, Mother's Day and got away with about $10,000. Police said the $2,000 in a daylight holdup there six weeks ago.

Pride unbowed is symbolized in the bare staff carried by an officer of the Hastings and Prince Edward regimental color party at yesterday's inspection. The staff formerly carried the regimental battle color stolen a few weeks ago by an unknown. Lieut.-Col. A. B. Duffy (insert), commanding officer, has sworn he will not carry a cap badge until the color is returned.

Albert Sevigny, Former Chief Justice, Dies

QUEBEC (CP)—Albert Sevigny, former chief justice of Quebec's Superior Court and the father of Associate Defence Minister Pierre Sevigny, died Sunday of a cerebral hemorrhage. He was 80.

Mr. Sevigny, who served in a variety of political posts until his defeat in the 1917 general election, was appointed to the bench of Quebec Superior Court in 1921. He became chief justice in 1942.

He retired last March 1 after a law career that produced judges to accept their pensions at 75. He had been in poor health for more than a year at the time of his death.

He was first elected to Parliament in 1911 as Nationalist member for Dorchester County. He was a leading figure in that year's campaign that saw a coalition of Quebec Conservatives and nationalists oust Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Liberal prime minister since 1896, from office.

He was deputy speaker of the House of Commons in Sir Robert Borden's government in 1915 and Speaker in 1916. In 1917, he was appointed inland revenue minister.

During the 1917 campaign, Mr. Sevigny spoke out strongly in favor of conscription, then a reversal subject in Quebec.

The Conservatives did well in the election results but the Nationalists lost heavily in Quebec and Mr. Sevigny was among those who went down to defeat.

NAMED BY MERCHEN

He was appointed to the Superior Court by the Unionist government of Arthur Meighen that succeeded the Borden administration.

As Superior Court judge, Mr. Sevigny presided over many criminal as well as civil trials. Perhaps the most widely known was that of jeweller J. Albert Guay accused of placing a bomb aboard a plane in 1949, causing the deaths of 23 passengers, among them his wife. Guay and two accomplices were later hanged.

Born in Tingwick, Que., Mr. Sevigny received his early education at Nicolet. He studied law at Laval University in Quebec where one of his graduation mates was Louis St. Laurent, later Liberal prime minister of Canada.

On hearing of Mr. Sevigny's death Sunday, Mr. St. Laurent expressed deep regret and referred to him as "a great Canadian and a wise administrator of human justice."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Mr. Sevigny "will always be remembered as a man of outstanding ability who gave unstintingly of his services to his country, which he served with distinction for many years in Parliament and on the bench."

Mr. Sevigny is survived by his wife, the former Jeane Lavery of Quebec and his son and two daughters.

Unknown Thief Gives Hint Hasty Pees' Queen's Color To Be His Next Objective

The mystery of the missing battle color of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is still unsolved.

But it fared into the spotlight again last Thursday, three days prior to the regiment's annual inspection.

The unknown culprit, who has admitted he has the famous battle color, struck again, through the post office.

But he failed to make good his threat or promise.

He warned Lieut.-Col. Angus Duffy, commanding officer of the regiment, and his officers that he would be present at the inspection ceremonies.

He wrote on newspaper advertisement "I'll be there to hear the sabre-rattling speech." In another letter in small fine handwriting said "I was a day late in getting your message. But I did not like it needless but now my self-condemnation is gone. It is going to excite my blood."

"I have been working in Belleville for the past three weeks and have discovered where the thief is. I even know the janitor, and his wife go walking ever Sunday night about 11.30. I have a real fellow car coat, he wears a suede windbreaker. They go up the hill, down the backstreet, around the block, back uphill and down via the graveyard door."

"Now I have been thinking. Who knows maybe with a little persuasion there will be no guilty party. Perhaps on a Sunday night even for a nourishment."

PLANS "PHASE TWO"

"I wish I could type this but all our machines are rented and besides it would be too easy for you. Will now move. Phase Two calls for careful planning and no slip-ups."

Several weeks ago in "Phase One" the battle color of the regiment was removed from a flagstaff over glass in the officers' mess.

"Phase Two" apparently means the removal of the regiment's Queen's Color from a flagstaff in the sergeants' mess where it was placed after the removal of the battle color.

The "unknown" could have been one of the large crowd of balcony spectators which watched 240-odd ranks of the famous regiment march past in colorful review.

He would have mingled with those who were guests at post-inspection receptions in the officers' and sergeants' messes. He could have been anywhere.

Security officers of the regiment mingled with the crowds and kept close watch on regimental property yesterday.

The missing battle color and the threat of further depredations on the regimental flags has not daunted the fierce pride of a determined contingent.

The regimental color party yesterday a naked staff that

Hasty Pees Padre Dies In Brantford

Members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment were shocked today to hear of the sudden passing of a former padre, in Brantford.

Lieut.-Col. the Rev. Fred Gofforth, M.C., died this morning, a short time following his retirement as an active minister.

Lieut.-Col. Gofforth was beloved by all ranks of the regiment. He was held in high esteem by those who followed the footsteps of veterans of the first divisional unit. He had spoken to veterans of the unit many times at reunions.

He was associated with the regiment during the dark war days and served with it throughout the entire Italian campaign.

He had moved to Brantford, where he was preaching at Dufferin Street Church, when a funeral will take place on Wednesday at 3.30.

Lieut.-Col. Angus B. Duffy, CD, commanding officer of the Hasty Pees, received the sad news this morning.

Communism Threat Can Best Be Beaten in Hemisphere By Raising Living Standards

-- Diefenbaker

WASHINGTON (CP) — An American magazine quotes Prime Minister Diefenbaker as saying he seeks no political unity with the United States but believes joint defence can be improved consistent with respect for Canadian sovereignty.

As for the Cuban issue, the Canadian leader is reported to feel that the threat of communism can best be countered in the Western Hemisphere by raising living standards.

"There is no way in which you can fill empty stomachs by the promises of congressional or parliamentary government," Diefenbaker is quoted as saying in an interview published in the magazine U.S. News and World Report on the eve of President Kennedy's first visit to Ottawa.

Asked whether he approved of Russia playing a gobetween in the Western Hemisphere, as in Cuba, Diefenbaker is quoted as replying:

"We're naturally concerned about that situation. It's not for us to prescribe how other nations should conduct their internal affairs. I recently expressed the hope of all Canadians that the other countries of the Western Hemisphere should so develop their resources, their economic structures that communism would not have any attraction to them. The real battle in Western Hemisphere countries is economic."

MAKES THREE POINTS

The prime minister is quoted as making three points clear:

1. Canada has the right under the American constitution to enter into political talks with the U.S. on an equal basis with the original 13 states. "We never sought the exercise of that right and will not. Each of our countries is a sovereign entity."

2. Since five out of six countries in the Commonwealth belong to a race other than white, the Commonwealth as an organization must be "color blind." Accordingly, Canada is opposed to wealth of the principle of opposing racial discrimination.

This means the annual gathering of the Commonwealth is the mission for Ghana.

3. Canada is seeking to expand trade with all countries. Long-term economic cooperation between Canada and the U.S. would be considered before deciding on any alternative course, such as free trade with the U.S. If it were came to a decision on making a bilateral deal with the U.S., "I would feel that there is greater hope for major reductions in tariffs generally rather than taking specific action, commodity by commodity."

4. Canada is looking for immigrants who bring skills, ideas and capital. Immigration into Canada this year is expected to remain at around 100,000. Canada's total population should be about 40,000,000 by the end of the century.

IN GERMANY

Diefenbaker, the magazine reports, said he sees signs of economic improvement in Canada. He hoped the trend will become more apparent in the third and fourth quarters of 1961. He believed the growth of European trade blocs will stimulate a need for Canada's natural resources which will be "entering a new and extensive phase of expansion to meet new and increased demands."

Observing that in the last two world wars Canada "rushed to arms at the outbreak of hostilities — long" before the U.S. joined in — Diefenbaker made clear Canadians would fight to retain when freedom is challenged.

But whether Canada could by joining U.S. in a joint territory would be entirely dependent on the type of war. And, "certainly in any future war, Canada would not be attacked in isolation. It would be part of a attack on the Western world and North American continent.

"It's not often realized that Canada is between the two great antagonists. In the face of a threat of global war, no country rely solely on its own resources."

The U.S. had to rely on Canada "as we meet an attack across the polar regions.

MUST CO-OPERATE

"That means we must co-operate to the closest degree possible in this regard. That we have done."

As for improving joint defence, "we must work constantly giving the fullest consideration to possible improvements in a complete spirit of co-operation to that end."

The magazine says Diefenbaker touched also on the issue of American investment in Canada saying Canada welcomed American capital but wants American firms set up as Canadian subsidiaries to conduct operations with due regard to Canadian interests, including provision of investment, research and marketing opportunities for Canada. The Canadian government was in no way anti-American.

U.S. Judge Says Ribbentrop, Goering Told Him Eichmann Main Cog in Nazi Program

JERUSALEM (AP) — An American judge testified today that Hermann Goering and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop told him Adolf Eichmann was a main cog in the Nazi program to exterminate Europe's Jews.

Quentin Michael A. Musmanno of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court told the Eichmann trial court the defendant himself had tried his program into the allied prisoner of war camps.

Musmanno testified on the basis of information he had gathered as a judge at the Nuremberg war crimes trials and as an interrogator for the U.S. Navy during the first Nuremberg trial in 1945-1946.

Reporting on his interrogation of top Nazi during their trial and arrest, Musmanno told the court:

"Goering said he was not aware that the program of Jewish extermination had reached these reported proportions. The persons most responsible were Hitler, Bormann, Goebbels, Heydrich and Eichmann."

RESENTED EICHMANN

Asked if anyone else mentioned Eichmann, the judge replied:

"Yes, Ribbentrop said he resented very much Eichmann's interference in his ministry of foreign affairs. He said also he was very sorry that Hitler had put so much authority into Eichmann into the program of Jewish extermination."

Former Gestapo Chief Ernst Kaltenbrunner, Musmanno continued, "said the persons who ran the Jewish extermination program were Hitler, Bormann, Himmler, Kaltenbrunner, Heydrich and Eichmann."

Musmanno said Hans Frank, Nazi governor general of Poland, decided Eichmann "was no longer" and complained to Himmler. The judge said Frank was referred "to Eichmann."

Defence lawyer Robert Servatius objected to Musmanno as a witness, contending that a judge could not testify on questions he had decided himself in a trial.

"This witness was not in Germany at the time," the lawyer said. "He is not a Jew and not prosecutor. He is retired. His knowledge only later and there. So his testimony is not acceptable."

Dr. Servatius said he understood that Musmanno would also testify Nazi officials of Europe avoided carrying out orders from above. He said this is a question to be decided by the court rather than by a witness.

Eichmann contends that he only carried out orders and could not do otherwise.

Attorney - General Gideon Hausner in reply said Eichmann's superiors no longer are available and therefore it is very significant to hear this witness who conducted a lot of investigation into the matter."

by J.J.M. HUNTER

"What's the time?" Andy asked, splashing cream into his coffee. "Getting on for eight o'clock, I guess."

His father glanced at his watch. "At the next minute it will be twelve times as many seconds before the hour as it will be minutes before nine o'clock," he declared.

"Oh, Dad!" exclaimed the boy. "You like as it is."

He'd spent the watch anyway. But what was the time?

BC Boxers Win Five

DRAYTON VALLEY, Alta. (CP)—A 12 - man British Columbia team battled its way to five division titles Saturday night as the Canadian amateur boxing championships were completed.

Nine of 10 championships were decided in the ring. The tenth, in the heavyweight division, went to Jimmie King, stationed at Kingston, with the Canadian Army, by default. His only scheduled opponent, Hector Carbes of Waskada, Sask., failed to arrive for the weigh-in prior to the start of the championships Friday.

It had been announced King would be unable to claim his crown because he had not fought for it. But Sunday, Major Paul Roth of Vancouver, chairman of the national boxing committee of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada, said King would be given a championship certificate.

After finding out he would have no competition in the heavyweight class, the 26-year-old Negro physical training instructor attempted to take off enough pounds to qualify as a light heavyweight, but missed making the 178 - pound weight by three pounds Friday.

At the head of the B.C. list was Lindy Lindmoser of Vancouver. Lindmoser, 1957 winner of the United States national amateur boxing championships at his 178-pound division, scored the only knockout of the finals when seconds for Max Pollard of Weston, Ont., threw in the towel at 1:32 of the second round. Lindmoser had floored Pollard three times in the first round of their 178 - pound-light heavyweight bout.

WINS UPSET

Alphonse Chabot of Prince George, B.C., won an upset decision over Gabriele Mancini of Montreal in the 132 - pound lightweight class.

After he lost it was learned that Mancini, Canadian amateur featherweight champion the last two years, had broken his right hand in the afternoon semi-final which he won by decision over Haiman Santoni of Vancouver.

Another Prince George Boxer, Harold Man., scored a clear decision over Edgar Mercier in the 126 - pound light - middleweight class. Mercier represented the Royal 22nd Regiment stationed at Valcartier, Que.

Marcel Belefeuille of Montreal won a decision over Mickey McMillan of Vancouver in the 125-pound featherweight event. Belefeuille won the bantamweight title in last year's boxing championships in Montreal.

All bouts were scheduled for three rounds of three minutes each.

Following the championships Saturday night, eight boxers were selected as possible members of a Canadian team for the Pan-Pacific Games in Honolulu Aug. 30 Sept. 2. Canada has been invited to attend the pan-pacific games but has not yet signified that it will send a national team.

Rabbit Race Enlivens Ball Game

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—How do you beat a team that's got live rabbit's feet all over the place?

Candlestick Park provides a refreshing combination of zany sideshow and spectacular baseball these days.

And because of it—for in spite of it — San Francisco Giants are sitting atop the National League.

The fans at Saturday's game saw the daredevil rabbit race in town.

Some youngsters sitting in rightfield seats brought the rabbit. The first two they stopped onto the field were quickly snared by the attendants.

But in the fourth inning with Giants on first and third, out scooted another bunny. This fellow ran and ran until his legs gave out.

Three batboys finally caught him in the left field corner. The fans booed.

The bunnies—all three of them—went to Red Adams' six-year-old son. Adams is one of the Giants' clubhouse attendants.

British Like Betting Shops Says Board

LONDON (AP)—The British who bet a total of about £700,000,000 a year on the horses, dogs and soccer, have taken to betting shops like a Frenchman takes to a sidewalk cafe.

It's just two weeks since the government decided that licensed bookies could open cash betting houses — places where bettors can step in, place a cash bet, and collect cash winnings as soon as the race is over.

Many of the big bookies decided against risking money in the new venture, relying on their already legalized credit betting by phone, letter or telegram.

Now they're beginning to wonder if they've made a mistake.

The Race Course Betting Control Board, which runs the tote (the equivalent of pari-mutuel betting in England, thought it doubtful whether betting shops would pull in enough business. So the tote opened only two experimental cash betting shops.

The two shops have got off to a good start and are doing rather better than anticipated," said an official of the tote.

The same sort of reports came from bookies all over the land. About 2,000 betting shops are doing business. Most said a surprising amount of business came their way in the first 14 days.

Surprising Senators Whip Sox Twice

Ditto Yankees Over Tigers

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Don't waste sympathy on Washington's scrappie Senators. Perhaps you should save it for the opposition.

They laughed last winter when Washington general manager Ed Doherty and field leader Mickey Vernon announced their selections from the American League cast-off crop.

"Those culls won't win 35 games all year," the wiseacres scoffed. "They'll set baseball back 20 years with their farcical performances at Griffith Stadium."

About all the Senators have set back so far have been the opposition, although Washington hasn't threatened as yet to take over the lead.

Supported by superb pitching from Joe McClain and Bennie Daniels, the Senators Sunday swept a doubleheader from Boston Red Sox 3-0 and 2-1 for their longest winning streak of the year—three straight.

MOVE UP THREE

The twin triumphs moved the Senators up three berths into seventh place, only a half game behind the fifth - place Kansas City Athletics, who split with Chicago. The As won the second game 2-0 after the White Sox took the opener 6-4.

New York's Yankees defeated Detroit twice 5-4 in 11 innings and 8-6 to narrow the Tigers' first-place lead to five games.

Cleveland swept two from Baltimore 1-0 and 6-4. The first game went 15 innings. Minnesota nipped Los Angeles 4-3 to supplant Baltimore in third place.

Washington's sweep gave the Senators the series from the Red Sox, three games to one. McClain notched five hits for his fourth victory. Daniels pitched a three - hitter for his second triumph.

McClain, picked up in the minor league draft for $25,000, retired the first 16 batters as he became the first Washington pitcher to win four games. He scored what proved to be the winning run himself in the third inning.

Washington snapped a 1-1 tie in the ninth of the nightcap. Pete Daley tripled off reliever Mike Fornieles, who then intentionally walked Dale Long and Billy Klaus to fill the bases. Mike then walked pinch - hitter Marty Keough unintentionally to force Daley in with the winning run.

Yogi Berra's bases-loaded single in the 11th inning of the first game and a five-run first inning in the second game gave the Yankees their doubleheader sweep over Detroit. Jim Coates, in relief, was credited with both victories, which reduced the Tigers' first place lead over the Yankees to 2½ games.

LOSE CLOSE ONE

Detroit, trailing 4-1, tied the first game in the ninth, scoring three runs, but in the 11th, Mickey Mantle singled, advanced to third on a two-out walk and an infield single and scored the winning run on Berra's pinch hit. The first six Yankees to face Jim Bunning singled, providing the winners with a 5-0 lead. Detroit made it close on homers by Rocky Colavito, Dick Brown and Charley Maxwell.

A throwing error by Baltimore shortstop Jerry Adair provided the Indians with an unearned run in the 15th inning to end the longest game in the major leagues this season. Willie Kirkland's three-run homer won the second game for Cleveland.

Adair's attempt for a double play went out of first baseman Walt Dropo's reach and Romano scored the winning run. Kirkland, who drove in three runs in the nightcap, snapped a 3-3 tie in the seventh with his first American League homer.

The White Sox and Athletics traded victories on two - run homers. In the first game, Luis Aparicio, Wes Covington and Jim Landis each homered with a man on base to help Bob Shaw register his third victory. In the nightcap, catcher Joe Pignatano homered with a mate aboard to give National League castoff Joe Nuxhall his first As victory.

Bob Allison's sacrifice fly scored the winning run in the eighth after the Twins had scored the tying run on a bunt, two infield choices, a walk and three Angel errors.

Sailors Nip Napanee 3-2, Lead 3-1

PORT COLBORNE (CP) — Port Colborne Sailors put themselves within one game of the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate A championship Saturday night when they edged Napanee Comets, 3-2.

Sailors now lead the series 3-1 and will meet the Comets next Tuesday night for what could be the final game of the series.

Scoring for the Sailors were Warchol, Noyes and Huffman. Napanee marksmen were Gilmour and Douglas.

Merritton Beats Kenmors

Belleville Kenmors could'nt stand prosperity on Sunday and went down to a 7-3 defeat before the Merritton 1961 Junior "B" OBA champions in the first of their home-and-home pre-season exhibition series.

The second game will be played in the fair Grounds here next Sunday afternoon.

The Kenmore, all-Ontario junior "A" champions last year had the game in the bag, up to a point until the fateful eighth innings. They led 3-0 up to this point on the many hits when the roof fell in and Merriton scored all their runs.

Then Mike Ayotte and Art Vaughan the first two hurlers for the Kenmors did a fine job holding the Merriton youngsters runless and allowing but two hits.

Latchford went in in the sixth and was pressing along nicely until the eighth. Three walks in a row sent him to the showers and a four - run rout was over. An error, a walk, a double and a two run homer spoiled the game for the Kenmors after seven Merriton runners had been crossed the plate.

Art. Barclay, Mike Stubbert and George Macdonald did the hurling for the winners.

Back-to-back singles and Mavety's drive in the second gave the Kenmors a two-run lead. They added another on putouts and a Merrilon bobble in the sixth.

The homester pitchers held the Kenmors batters in their hands only two singles getting away from them. Likewise the Merritton batters were not too strong for the Belleville pitchers especially Masters and Vaughan holding them close. They had five hits all told.

The Merrition hurlers struck out 8 dozen Kenmors between them, giving up four bases on balls. The Kenmor pitchers whiffed nine and walked six.

Falwell, Goyer and Mavety were the Kenmor hitters with Hale hitting a homer, Snyder a double and Madden two singles for the winners.

The issue:

MERRITON — Hale, Hocke, Stubbert, MacDonald, Barclay, Sunderland, Madsen, Saxton, Morris, Snyder.

BELLEVILLE — Weston, Kellar, Clark, Locke, Clark, Follwell, Goyer, Asselline, Soden, Morgan, Hunter, Mavety, Dainard, Vaughan, Latchford. Belleville 002 000 100—3 3 3
Merriton 000 000 07x—7 5 1

Basketball Stars Face Charges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP)—Three North Carolina State basketball players, including captain Stan Wiesniewski, face trial here June 5 on charges of accepting bribes to shave points or throw games.

Wiesniewski was taken into custody Sunday by police in his hometown of Brooklyn, N.Y., and held as a material witness pending arrival of a North Carolina warrant.

The other two, Anton Maeli bauer of Brooklyn and Terry Litchfield of Louisville, Ky., were arrested over the weekend.

Maelbauer was freed under $2,000 bond.

Litchfield was held under house arrest at the college infirmary where he is recovering from a sore throat and fever.

The State Bureau of Investigation, which disclosed the charges at a news conference Saturday did not know whether Los Angeles police had arrested a fourth man, Lou Barshak of Brooklyn, identified as the contact man in the alleged gambling conspiracy.

NEVER ENROLLED

FBI Director Walter Anderson said he understood Barshak is a student at Los Angeles State College, but officials at that college said he had never enrolled.

The four men face maximum sentences of five years on each count when they come to trial in Superior Court.

State college officials immediately expelled Litchfield. They told Maelbauer and Wiesniewski who already had dropped out of sportsdom for scholastic deficiencies, that they could never return.

N.C. State became the second major North Caroline institution involved in the growing U.S. wide basketball scandal. The University of North Carolina's Lou Brown has been accused as a go-between, and teammate Doug Moe has been suspended for accepting $75 from New York gambler Aaron Wagman.

District prosecutor Lester Chalmers said the investigation could result in many more indictments.

He said every game played by N.C. State on its home court here would be investigated.
